annually. A steam launch is now ready to go out to Malta, and £100 are needed to start her on her mission of mercy."

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY.—To extinguish the debt on the Mission Hall in Spitalfields, a sale of useful and ornamental articles will be held during the month of April. An earnest appeal is made for articles of a useful or ornamental kind, to assist in accomplishing this very desirable project. Articles can be sent to the Secretary, Mr. J. ATKINSON, at the Memorial Hall, London-street, Bethnal-green, E., or donations in money will be equally acceptable.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION.—Owing to the death of a large number of our most liberal contributors, the Committee have been compelled to withdraw several of their grants, and, unless additional aid is immediately forthcoming, they will be constrained to make a further reduction in the number of their Scripture-readers. May I appeal to your readers to help us to avert such a necessity?—Yours faithfully, J. RODDAM SATE, Lay Secretary, 56, Haymarket, London, S.W.

THE F. R. HAVERGAL MEMORIAL, LIMERICK.—It may be remembered that a Hall was purchased in Limerick, in connection with the work of the Irish Society, as a memorial of the late Miss Havergal, who showed a most practical sympathy with the objects of the Society. A good work has since been carried on in the Hall through the Ragged Schools, under the supervision of Canon Greig. A sum of £500 is still required to defray the expenses incurred in the purchase of the Hall. Help will be received, and further details afforded, by the Secretary of the Irish Society, Rev. W. FITZPATRICK, 17, Upper Sackville-street, Dublin.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For a goodly number of souls, who have come out on the side of Christ lately at Trinity Hall, Battersea.——For the conversion of souls at meetings for which prayer was lately asked, in connection with the Evangelistic Mission.

PRAYER.—An esteemed correspondent writes: "Will you let me entreat the Lord's remembrancers to unite in spirit, and, wherever it is possible, socially, and in fervent and faithful prayer, as to whether Great Britain shall still retain its character as a Christian country, or nationally renounce its allegiance to the King of Kings, by no longer demanding a public acknowledgment of Him from the members of her Senate. Let us plead with Him, who has hitherto so marvellously, by a variety of providential arrangements, prevented this evil, when again and again it has appeared to be hopelessly imminent, to give us the faith which can remove mountains, as we ask Him to arise and help us, and for his own great name's sake, never to allow it to be dishonoured by our Parliament."——That I, who sorely need help myself, may through God's mighty power be enabled to help one even more sorrowfully placed—homeless and friendless through her own doing, but suffering bitterly. I ask for earnest prayer for us both.——For the recovery of a Christian husband and father, compelled to leave his home for the third time from mental derangement.

PLACES.—For work in the Conference Hall, Eccleston-street, that believers may be strengthened and consecrated, and thousands around may be brought to Jesus.——For God's blessing on a Mission opened at the Wrythe, Carshalton, on Sunday last.——For abundant blessing on meetings to be held at Birkenhead, from April 15 to 27, by Mr. Bain.——For Open-air meetings during the summer months, at Coatbridge, N.B.——For Gospel Services by Mr. George Brealey, of the Blackdownhills Mission, who will be in Hastings, London, Staines, &c., during the month of April.——That it may please the Lord to revive his work in Winchester.——A minister of Christ desires prayer that he may be guided about a visit of evangelisation to France, and may be blessed in leading many to Christ.——For God's blessing on the circulation of the Scriptures in Ireland.——Messrs. David Baron and Henry Barnett, of the "Mildmay Mission to the Jews," are going this week on a Mission to the Jews in Sheffield. Will Christians pray that many may be brought to acknowledge their Messiah and Saviour.——For a Mission at St. Paul's, Chippenham, to be held by Rev. R. D. Monro.——On behalf of Evangelistic Services to be commenced at Carluke, N.B., by William Hall, on April 8.——For meetings in Assembly Rooms, Stamford, from April 8 to 22, conducted by E. J. Mitchell.——For blessing on the labours of Miss Ruth Brryman, commencing April 15, for three months, at the Athenæum, Goldhawk-road, Shepherd's Bush, W.——For Gospel services from 22nd to 25th inst, at Rosslyn Hall Mission, Church-street, Islington.——For Gospel services at Y.M.C.A., Bradford, by Mr. H. Murch.

CONVERSIONS. — For an aged father, and that he may be delivered from the love of strong drink.——A mother earnestly requests prayer that her son and daughters may be led to attend the meetings of Messrs. Moody and Sankey in Liverpool and give themselves to the Lord.——For an infidel brother of a Christian sister.——For a brother—the only one in the family unsaved.

THE MANCHESTER NIGHT REFUGE. — This institution continues to furnish a shelter for many who are in such necessitous and distressed circumstances as to be without any settled home. A Gospel address is given every night in the week, with the visible effect, that there is never the least necessity to call any one to order afterwards. Help is needed, and should be forwarded to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Robert Stonex, jun., 45, Blackfriars-street, Manchester.

A Memorial Fund

FOR THE

WIDOW OF THE REV. JULIUS BENN

(Late Pastor of Old Gravel Lane Meeting House, Wapping),

Who suffered death at the hands of his lunatic son, on Sunday, the 4th March.

Sir,—The appalling calamity which has befallen the family of the above Congregational Minister has called forth the greatest sympathy in London and the Provinces. A number of friends have suggested that the kindly feeling thus shown should take a practical form in the shape of a money present to the Widow and the children dependent upon her.

The gentlemen, whose names appear below, have formed themselves into a committee for carrying out the matter.

The following account of Mr. Benn's career, and the statement as to the present circumstances of his widow, will be sufficient to show the necessity for a Memorial Fund.

Donations will be gladly received and acknowledged by Mr. W. G. McNAUGHT, 66, Colvestone-crescent, West Hackney, London, E. } Hon. Secs. to the Fund.

Mr. A. ASHCROFT, 29, Groombridge-road, South Hackney, London, E. }

For more than 30 years Mr. Benn was identified with the Lord's work in London and the provinces. In the year 1851, at the request of the London City Mission, he came to London from his native town, and, for a time, laboured earnestly in the neighbourhood of Cable-street, Ratcliff-highway, and St. George's-in-the-East generally. While thus engaged he took a special interest in the welfare of our City arabs, and was asked by the Rev. John (now Dr.) Kennedy and Mr. Thomas Scrutton to take charge of the first Institution founded in this country for the reformation of criminal boys. In this work he was particularly successful, and only a few months ago the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, at Exeter Hall, testified to the value of Mr. Benn's labours in connection with the Institute in Stepney-causeway, and subsequently as master of the "Home in the East."

The circumstances of Mr. Benn's decease have been so recently and fully published that it is not necessary to refer to them here at any length. It is a distressing circumstance of this sad calamity that the son, as already indicated, was married—and that most happily—just before Christmas, and on January 16 it was found necessary to place him under care in Bethnal House Lunatic Asylum, E. After residing there for some weeks, he improved so rapidly that the doctors advised his removal into the country. Acting upon such distinct medical advice, and with the proper papers signed, the Reverend gentleman arrived in Matlock with the patient on the 26th February. All went most happily until Sunday morning, the 4th March, when homicidal mania suddenly seized the poor boy, and what followed is too well known. The expenses attendant upon all these painful circumstances have more than swallowed up the means left by the deceased, and the widow, with three children unprovided for, has to face the trouble and liabilities of the future. It is to meet the necessities of these, and these only, that the proposed Memorial Fund is intended, and the names attached to this circular will be sufficient guarantee of its bona fides.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

The Life of GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

By J. R. ANDREWS.

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 3s.

"Shortly after returning to town he decided on the bold step of preaching at Moorfields during the great annual holiday of Witsuntide ('the season of all others,' he says, 'when, if ever, Satan's children keep up their rendezvous.') . . . . . He gives us the following account of his proceedings: 'I mounted my field pulpit, glad to find that I had for once, as it were, got the start of the devil. The people immediately flocked round me, and I addressed them from the words, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." All was hushed and solemn; they gazed, they listened, they wept.' He gave notice that he would preach again from the same place at six o'clock in the evening."—Extract.

FOURTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of Mrs. DUNN, MARYHILL, N.B.

This patient came under my treatment in July of last year, in consequence of a notice in The Christian. A full statement of the case was sent me by her husband, her answers being written to the printed sheet of questions which is always appended to my book "On Consumption," for the guidance of the many thousands of patients in all parts of the United Kingdom who cannot see me. These questions are so prepared that a personal interview is really unnecessary.

The patient had been first brought into a low state by excessive hæmorrhage in the early part of last year, followed by congestion of the left lung, which had never been removed. There was a constant soreness of the left side, and short harassing cough, very poor appetite, sickness, hectic afternoon and evening, loss of flesh all over the body, and gradual decline of strength.

My advice was strictly followed, as a consequence of which she recovered, and her husband writes me, in a letter dated January 10, 1883: "I am delighted to say that my dear wife is quite a new woman, for which I am truly thankful."—W. W. DUNN, Anniesland-cottage, Hillhead, by Maryhill, N.B."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

THE BUILDING, FITTING, AND FURNISHING COMPANY, LIMITED.

Incorporated under the Companies Acts of 1862—1880, whereby the liability of Shareholders is limited to the amount of their Shares.

CAPITAL £250,000, in 50,000 SHARES of £5 each. Present Issue: 20,000 SHARES. Payable 10s. on Application, 20s. on Allotment, 10s. three months after, and remainder at Call of 20s. subject to three months' notice.

PROSPECTUS (ABRIDGED).

OBJECTS.—This Company has been formed upon a strictly commercial basis with the following objects:

To BUILD, FIT, and FURNISH—

TEMPERANCE PUBLIC HOUSES, HOTELS, PHILANTHROPIC INSTITUTIONS, TRAINING HOMES, ETC., MISSION HALLS, CHURCHES AND CHAPELS, Including the Re-construction of Old Buildings, and Seating, Heating, and Lighting the same; working as far as possible on Model plans, and receiving PAYMENT either in Cash or by INSTALMENTS SPREAD OVER A TERM OF YEARS.

Also to BUILD and FIT Model SHOPS and HOUSES for Shopkeepers, Artizans, and others upon the same terms.

CREDIT TERMS.—The Company will require a proportion of the estimated outlay, regulated according to the character of the undertaking, to be prepaid. The remainder of the purchase money to be repaid by instalments extending over periods ranging from 2 to 15 years. To secure such repayments the proposed undertaking will be let to the intending proprietor or mortgaged to the Company, subject to a fixed monthly rental or charge, with such other guarantees, if any, as the Directors find necessary.

Estimates have been prepared and examined by competent Accountants, which show that by doing an amount of business far smaller than is anticipated the Company will soon be in a position to declare SUBSTANTIAL DIVIDENDS, as is shown by the following certificate:—

"26, Martin's Lane, Cannon Street, London, E.C., 20th March, 1883.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Tables prepared for the working of the proposed Building, Fitting, and Furnishing Company, and FIND, after making ample allowance for contingencies and for a reserve fund, that on a Business of £55,000 per annum there is a PROFIT SHOWN sufficient to pay an average Dividend of AT LEAST 15 PER CENT. per annum. THOS. FRID MAUNDER, Accountant."

The only Contract is dated the 28th day of March, 1883, and made between THOMAS HOGBEN of the one part and THOMAS BRADBURY WINTER and EDWARD MORGAN as Trustees for the Company of the other part, for the sale of the said business to the Company, and copies of the Articles and Memorandum of Association may be seen at the Office of the Company's Solicitor.

The Directors (other than the Managing Director, who takes a small fixed salary with commission on profits) will take no fees except out of profits.

Full Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained from the Secretary at the Company's Offices, 3, City-road, London, E.C., or at any Branch of the City Bank.

OPINIONS.

BEFORE deciding to take action for the formation of this Company, the scheme was stated to various Gentlemen interested in Temperance and philanthropic work, and among a large number of replies received we select the following:—

W. S. ALLEN, ESQ., M.P., NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.—"I have carefully thought over the whole matter, and think the scheme is likely to be most beneficial.'

"I should have been delighted to have been one of the Trustees if I had resided in or near London."

PROFESSOR ROGERS, M.P., OXFORD.—"I entirely sympathise with your action."

DONALD MATHESON, ESQ., LONDON.—"I cannot do less than express cordial satisfaction in knowing that you are taking up the Coffee Tavern cause in such a business-like way, and I hope the effort may be crowned with the success it deserves."

JAS. BARLOW, ESQ., J.P., BOLTON.—"The scheme appears to be a most desirable one."

REV. CHARLES GARRETT, President of the Wesleyan Conference.—"It certainly is a capital scheme . . . I shall watch it with interest, and will help it if I can."

REV. DAWSON BURNS, D.D., LONDON.—"I have read with interest your proposals for the establishment of Temperance Cafés under improved conditions.

"There is, I think, an ample field for such an enterprise wisely conducted, and I shall be glad to do what lies in my power for so desirable an end."

V. B. TRITTON, ESQ., LONDON.—"The scheme appears to me to be excellent, and to be so thoroughly worked out as not to require any suggestion."

In the Press, and will shortly be ready.

"CHOICE SAYINGS."

Being Notes of Expositions of the Scriptures.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

NEW EDITION.

AN EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

PLEASING THE LORD.

A wish of David's was a law to his three mighty men (2 Sam. xxiii. 15). Should not, then, a wish of Christ's be a law to us? Shall Christ have one mind, and we, his flesh and bones, another? With this tender mind toward our Lord, we shall follow hard after Him, and pursue nothing that may bring shame upon us.

Oh, let us think of the tenderness of the heart of Christ! No apple of the eye so tender as that heart. Let us, then, be careful to do his will; chiefly lest we grieve Him; but also for our own comfort and joy.

A child of God ought to be ever committing himself into God's hand, that God may direct his way for him. The natural man deviseth his own way, but God would have his children hang upon Him for counsel and guidance in everything.

One of David's mighty men fought single-handed with the Philistine host for a piece of ground full of lentiles; others might have thought it not worth fighting for, but it was parcel of King David's land, and to his faithful one that was enough. Let us in our spiritual warfare be like that good soldier (2 Sam. xxiii. 11, 12).

"Be content," for He hath said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." This promise was first given to Jacob, then to Joshua, now it is spoken to all God's children. Let me lay up the promise in my heart, and I am a rich man. How can I please God to-day? He will take care of to-morrow, will be my settled, blessed mind.

EDITH UNDERWOOD, Hon. Secretary.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of THE CHRISTIAN; or to the Secretary, JAMES ATKINSON, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY
FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

"THE STORY OF MY DUTCH PICTURE."—Mr. Gawin Kirkham is prepared to exhibit and expound his allegorical Dutch Picture, "The Broad and the Narrow Way," described in this number, in town or country; the only terms being a collection for the Open Air Mission at the close of the meeting. Copies of the picture may be had, 6d. and 8. each, and the explanation 1d. All applications to be made to G. KIRKHAM, Open Air Mission Office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

AN URGENT APPEAL is made to those who love the House of God, to help the poor agricultural parish of Harlaston, Staffs., to rebuild the church. The old structure was too unsafe for service, and under great difficulties £1000 has been collected; £400 more is required to finish the work in the very plainest way possible. The smallest contributions will be received with deep gratitude by the Rev. J. B. SWANN, Harlaston Rectory; or can be paid into Lloyd's Bank, Tamworth.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The Thirty-eighth Annual Meeting will be held in Exeter Hall, on Thursday, April 19th, 1883, at 7.30 p.m. The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., will preside. Speakers: Rev. Canon Wilberforce, M.A., subject, Christian Thoroughness; Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M.A., subject, Christian Audacity; Rev. J. Jackson Wray, subject, Christian Pleasures. Admission by ticket only, free from Exeter Hall, Strand.

Figgis, Brighton; Rev. W. Haslam, 19, King's-road, Brunswood-park, N.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

For Delicate or Backward Youths

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

SURREY HOUSE, 52, CLAPTON COMMON, LONDON, N.E.

Erdington College School,

Near Birmingham. Healthy position, Christian training. Distinguished success. Reference kindly permitted, H. S. PEARSON, Esq., Professor of English Literature at the Midland Institute; W. A. SOUTHWELL, Esq., Y.M.C.A., Cardiff. FREDK. W. W. HOWELL, Principal.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON COLLEGE for Young Ladies.—Principal, Mrs HALE, A.C.P., assisted by efficient teachers and professors, 1, Carlton-mansions, Clapham Rise, S.W. A few Young Ladies are received as boarders, and prepared, if desired, for the Public Examinations, University Local College of Preceptors, South Kensington, and Trinity College. A scholarship is awarded to pupils passing in First-class Honours at the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations. Home comforts, with careful training and individual supervision. Terms moderate and inclusive. Highly recommended by parents and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Balham, May 29th, 1880.

I am very reluctant to recommend Schools, because I am not always able to judge of the interior arrangements; but in this case I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. HALE, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years. C. H. SPURGEON.

A LADY wishes to highly recommend a School for Little Girls at Tunbridge Wells, where they will receive a thoroughly good education, and careful Christian training. Domestic arrangements the same as a family.
Mrs EDMUNDS, 45, Queen's-road, Tunbridge Wells.

MORNINGTON HOUSE, 27, Clapham-road.—Principals, the Misses MORRIS. Parents who value a Christian training for their children, will find it, in conjunction with a first-class education, at the above establishment. The pupils are liberally boarded, and their health receives most careful attention. Professors of high repute attend for accomplishments. Preparation for public examinations. References to Clergymen and to Parents. Terms moderate. Payment from day of entrance.

BRIGHTON.—Kendrick House, Marlboro'-place, facing Pavilion and enclosures, within three minutes' walk of the sea. The Misses DAGG receive a limited number of Boarders to educate with their day pupils. The School is managed on High School principles. A comfortable home. Terms from 50 to 60 guineas, according to age. Reference kindly permitted to Rev. J. B. Figgis.

KENDAL SCHOOL, Westmorland.—Parents who desire to find a school for their Sons, where their health and happiness will be considered of first importance, and where they will receive a first-rate education, with careful moral training, are invited to send for prospectus of the above school, to the PRINCIPAL,
ARTHUR H. EDDINGTON, B.A. Lond.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL,
WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.
Principal—Dr. Cranage, M.A., Author of "Mental Education," "Three Lectures on the Tabernacle in the Wilderness," "The Mark of the Beast," &c., &c.
Vice-Principal—Robert Weston, Esq., T.C.D.
Head Master—Mathematics: T. Woodcock, Esq., B.A., Wrangler, and late Scholar and Exhibitioner, Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Master—Classics: H. May, Esq., B.A., late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford; with other Masters.
Dr. Cranage's undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington. Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. Exhibitions, dependent on entrance examinations, are offered each April, July, and December; one of the value of Ten Guineas per annum, for seven years for boys under ten years of age; two of the value of Twenty Guineas per annum for five years for boys under fifteen; and one of the value of Fifty Guineas per annum for boys under sixteen, for three years. The next Term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, May 3rd.

Why Magnetism Cures.

To those who have no knowledge of the curative properties of electricity beyond the galvanic methods of applying it, a little explanation as to why Magnetism cures may be acceptable. First of all, on what grounds are we led to believe that many chronic ailments are curable? Simply from the marvellous recuperative power which Nature herself exerts when the ordinary conditions of health are supplied. This is so universally felt, though not generally understood, that invalids are buoyed up with the belief that they will be better as a more favourable season returns, well knowing that atmospheric changes affect them; while others, who are not really ill, but rarely well, conscious of no specific ailment, lack nerve power or vital energy, which we call recuperative force. The art of healing consists in supplying this deficiency. The self-regulating power of the human frame gradually declines, often imperceptibly, or is suddenly checked by cold; in this condition the vitality is low, and many forms of suffering arise and become chronic. To stimulate and augment this latent energy, the close proximity to the body of Odo-Magnetic influence has been found to be most effectual in averting the unfavourable effects of temperature and external influences, by surrounding the patient with a protecting atmosphere conveying the elements of a force identical with the life-force.

In attempting to describe the curative properties of Magnetism, we presume that the positive and tangible action of galvanic or electric appliances is too well known to need description. All and every unpleasantness is avoided in Odo-Magnetism, but why does it affect the system beneficially? We will explain. The processes of life are as subtle and intangible to us when in health as the influence of a common magnet on an ordinary mariner's compass when acted upon through our bodies. What Life is, or how nature's wonders are accomplished in and around us; how all the colours in nature are produced by the white light of the sun; how many chemical substances and colours are totally reversed by it—we cannot explain. We attempt in vain to get these various results in a dark cellar. The law of cause and effect we know, and can intelligently understand the why and wherefore of many wonderful results. The identity of light and heat, electricity and magnetism, are now fully recognised. If introduced into a totally dark place, electric light will develop latent germs, and cause them to grow into vigorous plants, and bear fruit. Thousands of illustrations might be given, proving that where no apparent force is exerted, where there is only the simple influence of light, of heat or cold, the results in producing changes, and in developing active irresistible force, are striking and universal.

The light and heat necessary to develop vegetable life are also necessary to the nourishment of physical life. We cannot illustrate the action of Magnetism by any other phenomena so clearly as by those of light and heat. Magnetic influence radiates in every direction from the object discharging it, with this advantage always, that it passes as freely through all solid bodies as light passes through our windows.

By these facts we can prove more clearly the identity of magnetic influence with the life force than can be done by those who practise galvanic electricity, because the lines of force from magnetism will penetrate, permeate, and diffuse themselves through any substances, except certain metals; and by the mariner's compass we can prove that these lines of force pass through the stoutest individual.

The self-regulating power of the organism is thus aided to recover what it has lost, or what balance of power properly belongs to it, and these results are accomplished because the phenomena of life, or the germs of more vigorous life, are present to be acted upon, otherwise the results of our treatment by Odo-Magnetism would be as ineffective in producing sensible changes as the shining of the sun on solid and inert matter. Those who know the action of galvanic electricity upon the human system, and ignore magnetic influence, cannot have reflected upon these facts.

By the most simple arrangement, magnetic currents are caused to penetrate through the body, and at the same time surround the patient by a vital influence so energising in effect and gentle in operation as to render the application unique, and positively agreeable to the most sensitive patient because of the continuous and equalised electric atmosphere in which the patient lives, enjoying in this respect an advantage above his fellows. Impartation of general warmth with returning energy, is one of the earliest sensations experienced. This magnetic force sets other forces in motion, and an exhaustless storehouse of latent energy is supplied from it. The recuperative forces of animal life work with it to one common end—health.

Having spent many years of patient, laborious, and continued study in adapting his treatment to some of the most obscure and intractable affections, Mr. Garratt now claims, as the result of his professional career, to have attained a success unparalleled in the healing art. Those who desire further information on his method of treatment should peruse his Essays, explaining the radical effect of Magnetism upon the human organism in Health and Disease. His practice is essentially unlike the existing agencies for the manufacture or sale of special Magnetic or Electric articles, it having been Mr. Garratt's careful study to adapt the remedy to the requirements of each case—a practice based upon the principles laid down in his published Essays. He will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

THE AFFIRMATION BILL: OBJECTIONS CONSIDERED.

WE continue to receive communications from our readers on the subject of the Affirmation Bill, some approving our position, and thanking us for outspokenness upon it, others differing from our utterances, and regretting our opposition to what they regard as a right line of action on the part of our Government. We thank the writers for their expressions of opinion, mingled as they have been in all cases with kindly references to ourselves, and general appreciation of the work in which we are engaged. We assure them all that we have written with no party bias. We have never, in the past, made THE CHRISTIAN a political organ; it is by no means our desire or intention to do so in the future. But this question presents itself to us as involving principles, considerations, and issues, of a far wider range than any political school or party can represent or include, and from the purely Christian and even strictly moral standpoint seems to us of such vital importance, that we are impelled to adopt the course we have taken by a sense of responsibility we dare not evade.

But there are two or three misapprehensions of our position which we are anxious to point out, and endeavour to remove. Several of our correspondents are members of the Society of Friends, and they appear to have thought that we have pleaded for an oath in preference to an affirmation, which would of course be diametrically opposed to the principle they, as a body, have honourably and consistently maintained from the first. Mr. Bright said not long ago, "Probably there is nothing in the New Testament more especially condemned and forbidden than oaths;" a statement which, however open it may be in some minds to question, represents a deep religious conviction we respect, and to a large extent sympathise with. We have not, by any means, pleaded for the Oath as desirable, and have repeatedly spoken of it as not the point at issue; indeed, we have admitted in one article that a simple form of solemn affirmation, supposing it affirmed belief in the existence and authority of God, as well as allegiance to the Throne, would for many reasons be better in all cases. It is of course true that to anyone morally indifferent to the claims of truth, either would be equally formal and unbinding, so that to the false-hearted and insincere, one form has no advantage over the other, while, to the sincere and truthful, either would be equally effective. Had the Affirmation Bill been introduced simply in favour of those who object to the taking an oath, so long as care was exercised to still preserve our Constitution true to its acknowledgment of a Divine Ruler, we should have had nothing to say in opposition to it. But this is not needed, inasmuch as already in cases of conscientious objection to an oath, affirmation is permitted. It is to a Bill framed purposely to meet the demands of openly avowed Atheism we object, and to that alone.

Further, we have all along disclaimed, as a ground of our action, any mere opposition to Mr. Bradlaugh as an individual, atheism as a whole, rather than any particular atheist, being the evil we depreeate. His repeated election by the Northampton constituency, in direct opposition to the general feeling of the nation, has unfortunately compelled a prominent reference to his name in the controversy which, in common with others, we deplore. We are prompted by a deep conviction that we are now brought face to face with a question which is of most solemn significance to the future of our nation—viz., Shall declared atheism be admitted freely and openly to a share in governmental influence, and by special legislation on its behalf be elevated in the eyes of all beholders to the level of national rule and authority? At present, as the law stands, an avowed atheist is not qualified to sit in our Senate. As a solicitor, writing on the subject, has said:—

> It should be denied that constituencies may elect whom they may like; and that being elected they ought to sit. They may not elect whom they like—for instance, a minor, a woman, a foreigner. They can only elect a person who is qualified to sit. To elect another is a nullity.

We, therefore, strongly object to a step which shall qualify atheists (hitherto disqualified) to have place among our rulers. For a nation to forego its national regard to the fact that GOD is the source of power and the Ruler of its destinies, is to rob Him of his due, and to expose itself to his just displeasure. We have only to consult their own published declarations to see what the object of secularists in seeking admission to Parliament really is. The following extract from one of their leading journals speaks volumes:—

> Our public purpose is to obtain the repeal of all Acts of Parliament that interfere with secular practice by forcing religious compliances of speech or conduct, and to obtain the abrogation of so much of the common law as may be applied to the same purposes. The first branch of this object will be to obtain the passing of an Act of Parliament which will enable persons to make affirmation who object to the terms and ceremonies of oaths.

And this with a view—to quote again from themselves—"to completely destroy not only Christianity, but also every form of Theism." In view of these things, and having regard to the present state of the popular mind in our own country, and throughout Europe, we feel this is no time to pass fresh Acts which, though not so intended by the Premier who promotes them, must yet of necessity tend to enhance the position and extend the influence of those who boast that to them "there is no God."

Nor have we any such feeling of hostility to atheists, or agnostics of any type, as would induce, on our part, persecution of them on account of their principles. Though excluded from Parliament, they are none the less sharers to the full extent in all privileges accorded by law to peaceful citizens. No pains or penalties are, or ought to be, inflicted upon them, such as persecution implies. No effort is made to force their opinions, or to compel their faith. They have free rights of assembly, and are in every way on a level with others, except in the one matter of not being eligible to legislate for a nation whose Constitution, from the Crown downwards through all its legal executive, is closely identified with a distinct avowal of belief in Deity, and a regard for the Divine law.

We grant that, in spite of this, Parliament is far from being composed of perfect elements, and from exerting in all directions the high moral influence such beliefs and principles of action should secure; but the fact that it is imperfect while such principles remain, seems to us no argument for making its imperfections greater by removing what is certainly, to some extent, a safeguard to virtue, and in harmony with the moral sentiment of the nation.

Nor are we impelled to this course of opposition to the Government proposal by any want of confidence in the power of Christian truth to assert itself anywhere, and under all conditions. We do not in any way plead for State patronage as necessary to the maintenance or advancement of true religion. We are satisfied that the truth of God can stand alone, and that ultimately, in his own time, and by methods of his own device, it shall triumph, and every form of opposition to it be utterly overthrown. But none the less are we bound to use influence on its behalf, and to resist the endeavours of its foes to displace it from its position in national and social spheres. We are not to stand by, and see Government place weapons in the hands of the avowed and determined enemies of God and inveterate foes of all religious beliefs whatsoever, and have nothing to say against it. We are surely bound to use all possible influence to exalt the Divine name of Him who is the King of Nations, and to resist whatever imperils the moral and spiritual interests of mankind. As it has been well said by a contemporary:—

> There is a spirit of infidelity and anarchy seething below the surface of society which is far more widely diffused than is generally realised, and it behoves every lover of his country, of order, and of Christianity, to steadily oppose the advance of those destructive principles which have always ended in the ruin of the nations which have adopted them.

If, therefore, our protests and expostulations on this matter seem to some of our readers useless, and a cause for regret rather than commendation, we must yet ask them to believe that they are the outcome of deep moral conviction, so deep that necessity is laid upon us to avow our sentiments on the subject without hesitation or fear. It would be impossible for us to insert the communications we have received on either side. The arguments of those who differ from our view are indicated in what we have written above, and are largely represented in the secular and, to a considerable extent, in the religious press, so that it is the less necessary that they should be repeated by ourselves.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.—By a clerical error the number of Sunday-school scholars in connection with this organisation was stated in a recent issue to be 67,288, instead of 672.

CUBITT TOWN CITY MISSION, Stebondale-st.—The original chapel attached to this district, though built not more than three years ago, having been found too small for the work, it has recently been enlarged, through the liberality of Mr. R. D. Anderson, of Hampstead, who has an interest in some extensive mills in the neighbourhood. The re-opening took place on Wednesday evening, March 21. After tea a very interesting public meeting was held, and was addressed by Mr. Anderson, who presided, Rev. Mr. Billington, of Hull, Mr. Miles, and others. All the operations of a very useful Mission appear to be in full exercise, and much gratitude to the Lord was expressed for his continued blessing. Several very interesting cases of conversion are said to have taken place during the past few months. Mr. W. H. Smith, the missionary, labours assiduously and acceptably in what appears to be a genuine and growing work.

ATHEISM: SOUL-SUICIDE.

By JOHN FLAVEL.*

ONE way of ruining the precious soul is, by drinking in the principles of Atheism, and living without God in the world.

Atheism stabs the soul to death at one stroke, and puts it quite out of the way of salvation. Other sinners are worse than beasts, but Atheists are worse than devils, for they believe and tremble: these banish God out of their thoughts, and as far as they can out of the world, living "without God in the world" (Eph. ii. 12). It is a sin that quencheth all religion in the soul. He that knows not his landlord, cannot pay his rent: he that assents not to the being of a God, destroys the foundation of all religious worship; he cannot fear, love, or obey Him whose being he believes not: this sin strikes at the life of God, and destroys the life of the soul. Some are Atheists in opinion, but multitudes are so in practice: "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (Ps. xiv. 1). Though he hath engraven his name upon every creature, and written it upon the table of their own hearts, yet they will not read it: or if they have a slight fluctuating notion, or a secret suspicion of a Deity, yet they neither acknowledge his presence nor his providence; Fingunt Deum talem qui nec videt, nec punit: "They say, how doth God know? Can He judge through the dark clouds? Thick clouds are a covering to Him, that He seeth not" (Job xxii. 14). Others profess to believe his being, but their lives daily give their lips the lie; for they give no evidence in practice of his fear, love, or dependence on Him. If they believe his being, they plainly show they value not his favour, delight not in his presence, love not his ways or people; but lie down and rise, eat and drink, live and die, without the worship or acknowledgment of Him, except so much as the law of the country, or custom of the place, extorts from them.

The dregs of time produce abundance of Atheists of both sorts. Many ridicule and hiss religion out of all company into which they come; and others live down all sense of religion. They customarily attend indeed on the external duties of it, and hear the word; but when the greatest and most important duties are urged upon them, their inward thought is, this is the preacher's calling, and the man must say something to fill up his hour, and get his living. If they dare not put their thoughts into words, and call the Gospel fabula Christi, the fable of Christ, as a wicked pope once did; or say of hell and the sufferings of the damned, as Calderinus the Jesuit did, "I will believe it when I see it:" yet their hearts and lives are of the same complexion with these men's words. They do not heartily assent to the truth of the Gospel which they hear: and though bare assent would not save them, yet their dissent or non-assent will certainly damn them, except the Lord heal their understandings and hearts by the light and life of Christ.

The devil hath no surer prisoner than the Atheist; there is no escaping out of his possession and power, whilst this bolt of unbelief is shut home in the mind or understanding. An unbelieved truth never converted or saved one soul from the beginning of the world, nor ever shall to the end of it. Those bodies that have the boulema or dog appetite, whatever they eat it affords them no nourishment or satisfaction, they thrive not with the best fare. Just so it is with your souls, no duties, no ordinances, can possibly do them good. As in argumentation, no conclusion, be it never so regularly drawn, and strongly inferred, is of any force to him that denies principles.

If you assent not to the truth of the Gospel, you not only make God speak to your souls in vain, which is fatal to them; but you also make God a liar, which is the greatest affront a creature can put upon his Maker (1 John v. 10): "He that believeth not God, hath made Him a liar." Vile dust, darest thou rise up against the God that made thee, and give Him the lie! An affront which thy fellow-creature cannot put up, or bear at thy hands. Darest thou at once stab his honour and thy own soul? Are not the things that thou lookest on as romances and golden dreams, a mere artifice neatly contrived to cheat and awe the world; are they not all built upon the veracity of God? which is the firmest foundation and greatest security in the world. Hath He not intermingled for our satisfaction, not only frequent assertions, but his asseverations and oath to put all beyond doubt? And yet dare any of you lift up your ignorant, blind understandings against all this, and give Him the lie? Surely the wrath of God shall smoke against every soul of man that doth so, and his own bitter, lamentable, doleful experience shall be his conviction shortly, except he repent.

Dare any of you give the thoughts of your hearts as certain conclusions under your hand, and stand by them to the last, and venture all upon them? Wretched Atheist! bethink thyself, pause awhile, examine thine own breast; whatever thy vile atheistical thoughts sometimes are, is there not at other times a fear of the contrary? A jealousy that all these things which thou deridest and sportest thy wicked fancy with, may and will prove true at last? When thou readest or hearest that text, John iii. 18, "He that believeth not, is condemned already;" his mittimus is already made for hell. Doth not thy conscience give thee a secret gird, like a stitch in thy side? Dare you venture all upon this issue, that if those things you find in the Word be true, you will stand to the hazard of them? If that be a truth, Mark xvi. 16, "He that believeth not shall be damned," you will be content to be damned? Or if Romans viii. 13 be a truth, that "they which live after the flesh shall die," you will run the hazard, and bear the penalty of eternal death? If Heb. xii. 14, prove true, that "without holiness no man shall see the Lord," you will be content to be banished from his presence for evermore? Speak your hearts in this matter, and tell us, do not you live betwixt atheistical surmises that all these are but cunning artifices, and fears that at last they will prove the greatest verities?

Hath not God given you all the satisfaction you can reasonably desire of the undoubted truth and certainty of his Word? What would you have, which you have not already? Would you have a voice from heaven? The Scriptures you read or hear are a more sure word than such a voice would be (2 Peter i. 19). Or would you have a messenger from hell? he that believeth not the written word, neither would believe if one should rise from the dead (Luke xvi. 31). View the innate character of the Scripture, is it not altogether pure and holy, full of Divine wisdom and awful majesty, and in every respect such as evidenceth its Author to be the wise, holy, and just God, who searcheth the hearts and reins? Look upon the seals and confirmations of it; hath not God confirmed it by divers miracles from heaven, a seal which neither men nor devils could counterfeit? And do not you see the blessing and power of God accompanying it in the conversion and wonderful change of men's hearts and lives, which can be done by no other hand than God's? Say not, the miracles which confirm the Gospel are but uncertain traditions, and except you yourselves see them wrought, you cannot believe them. There are a thousand things which you do believe, though you never saw them; and what you require for your satisfaction, every man may require the same for his; and so Christ must live in all parts of this world, and repeat his miracles over and over in all ages, to satisfy the unreasonable incredulity of those that question their truth, after the fullest confirmation and seal hath been given that is capable to be given, or the heart of man can desire should be given; and if all this should be done, you might be as far from believing as now you are; for many of those that saw and heard the things wrought by Christ, contradicted and blasphemed, and so might you.

Satan, who undermines your assent to these things, is forced to give his own; he that tempts you to look on them as fables, himself knows, and is convinced that they are realities: "The devils also believe and tremble" (James ii. 19); they know and feel the truth of these things, though it be their great design and interest to shake your assent to them; they know Christ is the Son of God, and that there will be a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness, and that there are torments prepared for themselves, and all whom they seduce from God (Matt. viii. 29). If you ungod God, you must unman yourselves; yea, not only make yourselves less than men, but worse than devils.

In a word, let thine own heart, O Atheist, be judge, whether these be real doubts still sticking in your mind, after you have done all that becomes men to do for satisfaction in such important cases! or whether they be not such principles as you willingly foment and nourish in your heart, as a protection to your sensual lusts, whose pleasures you would fain have without interruptions and over-awings by the fears of a judgment to come, and a righteous retribution from a just and terrible God! Examine your heart in that point, and you will soon find the cheat to be in that I here point you to: you have not studied the Word impartially, nor brought your doubts and scruples with a humble, unbiassed, teachable spirit, to those that are wise and able to resolve them; much less prayed for the spirit of illumination; but willingly entertained whatever atheistical wits invent, or the devil suggests, as a defence against the checks of conscience and fears of hell in the way of sin. You are unwilling those things should be true which the Scriptures speak, and are glad of any colourable argument or pretence to still your own consciences. Is not this the case? The Lord stop your desperate course; your paths lead to hell.

DOVER SEASIDE ORPHANS' RESTS.—The first year of this work has been brought to a close, and by the report just issued, over five hundred London orphans have had a change of air. Sufficient funds have been received to meet all expenses and furnish three buildings with 77 beds, which it is hoped will be as fully occupied again this summer. The children have been greatly blessed during their stay, by kind friends, apart from the considerable amount of good they acquired under God's blessing in this healthy seaside town. Plans to erect a permanent building are being prepared, which will be begun as soon as funds are forthcoming. The Rests being open free to all London Homes, any who may wish to use the buildings this year are requested to send in their applications at once to the Founder, Mr. Thomas Blackman, 8, Biggin-street.

THE CHURCHES IN RELATION TO EVANGELISTIC WORK.

PRIZE ARTICLES

By Rev. EDWD. SMITH, Fairfield, Manchester.

CHAP. XII.—(Concluded.)

QUITE apart from any accessions to the ranks, all work done, whether preventive, destructive, or creative, is of service to the Church. The despondent, if they find their task and fulfil their mission, will feel that their night of gloom is scattered. The giving away of a handful of leaflets has brightened many an experience. How many saints have had to cry—

> "I myself must mix with action,
> Lest I wither by despair!"

Persons who stagger under the burden of a great sorrow will discover that, if they fill their hands with labours, their feet will come down with safer tread. The unfortunate, the bereaved, the lonely in spirit, have often refuged themselves securely in manifold responsibilities; and by having their thoughts drawn away from themselves, have been receptive of sundry tonics designed for them by Heaven.

Sleepy ministers and members are fond of quoting the passage, "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." That, surely, was not inserted in the Bible that it might become a plea for a false contentment. In truth, neither minister nor people ought to be at all content

UNLESS CONVERSIONS OCCUR WITH FREQUENCY.

A conversion from selfishness or haughtiness into selflessness and humility is a greater marvel than the cleansing of a blasphemer's lips, or the reversal of a drunkard's bias. When a sense of beauty is born into a nature once destitute of it, when features which were as monotonous as a heap of sand become bright as a garden of flowers, and all because the wooing of God's love in Christ has been heard and accepted; that is, perhaps, a greater Gospel triumph than is the transformation of a sensualist or the restoration of a prodigal; but, withal, it is the conversion of open and notorious sinners which attracts most attention, and excites most remark. And so, no Church should be satisfied without this latter evidence of the presence of God in its midst. This will materially assist in checking the spread of scepticism, and, if the Church happens to suffer from a bad reputation for stiffness, lack of zeal, and general uncharity, a few genuine and remarkable instances of personal and domestic renovation will do much to destroy such reputation.

These living specimens of the nearness and lovingness of God are the most needed of all arguments. Only by these can sophistries be split open, and sneers rebutted, and cherished convictions re-invigorated. Unless these can be displayed, a number of the most faithful of Christ's champions will be tempted to stand in doubt of the truth of their cause, and will feel sometimes as if they were drifting on a shoreless sea. It is imperative that evangelistic work be successful among coarser lives, for what discovery can equal in sadness the revelation that the Creed whose Articles are twined into my very soul, to which I have clung with passionate fondness, which has been steeped in tears and shaped into prayers, does not stand the trial imposed upon it by the practical necessities of intelligent yet sin-bound man? 'Tis then as if volcanic fires were bursting out of the rent ground, and gaping chasms were waiting for my shivering soul. Many a valiant heart has prayed that, ere that day shall come, the paralysis of death may do its work; and that day will come, unless by means of the Gospel, in city and country alike, are produced lives strikingly transformed.

But that day need not and will not come. The problem which vexes us cannot be insoluble, for God is in the world. He loves souls more than we can ever do. Redemption teaches us that He would rather pour a few drops of comfort into a suffering child of man than light new smokeless torches in the skies. And He is "King of the Ages." He is equally the Lord of Spirit, Matter, and of Time. All the contents of the Ages point to man and exist mainly for redeemed man. God has always hidden forces at work; and, without doubt, they are more powerful than are the forces we discern. His shot silk will cross the mean fibres which we have put together, and will make the texture both beautiful and strong. We cannot, then, afford to part with Paul's great thought that the very same power which wrought the central miracle of our religion—the Resurrection of Jesus—is the power which works now in the souls of men. "That power raised Him from the dead—and also raised me up to be an Apostle." We are filled with comfort. We are joyful in all our tribulation. From such a power, illustrated by such a deed, we may freely hope great things.

THE CHURCH IS GOD'S CHOSEN AGENT,

and He will fit her more and more for her work. He will give to her members a growing horror of all forms of inconsistency. He will bestow on those who take up the duties of charity a higher skill in conjoining the nourishing of the soul with the feeding of the body, and will teach pious specialists the best methods of penetrating with their influence homes of all kinds and grades. He will instruct his people how to give on principle and to give generously, and this will rectify a crying want of the times. He will provoke into a successful agitation of great social questions the very individuals best suited to this duty.

Societies springing out of the Church, good in their aim but ephemeral in their existence, shall by their dying give birth and strength to other societies whose scope shall be wide and whose salutary efforts shall be beneficial and long-continued. God's fingers drop no threads. He can equip fresh moral forces, braid them into the old ones, and make them ready for all contingencies that shall arise. The Crusaders' battle-shout, "It is the will of God!" can still draw out the enthusiasm of his pledged ones.

That enthusiasm will not be wasted. When I see a bad, brutish face, I may be for a moment confounded, but quickly do I propound the question to myself, "Have you never known the owner of just such a countenance as this thoroughly got hold of and changed by 'the glorious Gospel of the blessed God'?" And very soon my memory serves me well, and spells out some name, or photographs a set of features. The other day a cluster of portraits was presented to a godly pastor. It included quite a quantity of men who were three years ago dog-fanciers, pigeon-flyers, sots and swearers. Yes! lost appetites after goodness may be once more aroused. The sight of thirsty companions quaffing rich draughts of the water of life may make stolid sinners conscious at last of their own thirst. Hardened looks are sometimes little more than skin deep. Even reformatory lads display, not uncommonly, a fine cast of countenance. How have the graces of which the features are the indices found a home in youths whose ancestral history is so depraved? Lives which seem to have about them nought but evil have but to be brought under religious conditions and the prevalent naughtiness rapidly melts away. The walls of many a new house are only damp for lack of spouting, and a godly combination fastened to a sour nature may cause the thin streams of moroseness no longer to trickle.

We shall yet hear on all sides the rescued revellers, and the once fallen but now cleansed and humble youths who once figured as precocious offenders against law and morality, and middle-aged men who blush at the very remembrance of their past misdeeds, and women whose late guiltiness manifested itself indifferently in wrangling, covetousness, love of finery, neglect of home, singing in their turns the song of the man of Tarsus. "Howbeit, for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on Him to life everlasting."

THE CHURCH NEEDS THE HELP OF ALL

her children, but especially of her sweetest and bravest and fairest and strongest. The parable of Jotham is the parable of the masses. If the olive tree will not leave its fatness, nor the fig its sweetness, nor the vine its strength, in order to preside royally and beneficially over the trees of the forest, then King Bramble assumes the sovereignty, and from him goes forth a fire which turns into ashes many a princely cedar and shady oak, many a towering fir and flowering shrub, together with numbers of trees of lower degree. And so, if the sons of melody, the educated light-bearers, the skilful gladiators, the richly-blessed in qualities or in wealth, do not give of their sweetness, fatness, strength—do not consent to give up some of their advantages and joyous pleasures for the sake of obtaining a holy rulership over errant and peccant men; why, then, the tricksters and revolutionists, the drink-traffickers and book-makers, the secular Diotrephes and the secular Demas, will gain sway; and in the flame that will steal forth from this godless dominance those who selfishly declined the burden of Empire shall themselves be overtaken by insulted justice, and shall be in peril of sharing the ultimate fate of the souls whom they refused to guide and to save.

The battles of the Pyrenees, fought by British soldiers among the crevasses, and near the eyries of the eagles, did not offer to those engaged the honour which now is offered by our Captain to the Christian soldiers who will volunteer to take their part in the battles of the suburbs and the battles of the slums. We want no faint-hearted ones in our battalions. The spirit of cowardice might spread by their means even among the courageous. "Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from Mount Gilead."

THE END.

JERUSALEM.—The correspondent of The Record says:—The Mission of the London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews has been visited by two members of the Parent Committee, sent out, as is understood, at the request of the brethren here, to investigate the present very remarkable phase into which the Mission has passed. What the future development of the existing state of things may be it is of course impossible to foresee; but no one interested in the work of Missions amongst God's ancient people can witness without an increase of that interest dozens of intelligent Jews, young and middle-aged, listening with eagerness to the preaching of the Gospel, and many of them entering upon a course of training to fit them for the Christian life.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—3.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THE STARTING POINT.

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect."—Matt. v. 48.

THERE are many earnest religious people who cannot help feeling that there is a lack somewhere in their religious life, for which they cannot account. That it should be so is a grief to them and a perplexity—yet so it is. Instead of finding that religion cures all their cares, it is the one great burden which wearies them most. Instead of healing other failures, as it certainly ought, it is the one thing in which they do most grievously fail. Everything in the Word encourages the hope that religion will bring a new life, an abiding strength, a confidence, and joy; but instead of that it seems only to bring to them a sadder sense of weakness and troubled doubts.

Is it possible for us just to put our finger upon the source of the mischief? I think it is. Let us claim the help of that blessed Spirit who searcheth the deep places of the soul.

We have come pretty generally to this point, that the ground of our salvation is not in doing, nor in feeling, nor even in faith: the ground of our salvation is the finished work of our blessed Saviour Jesus Christ—faith is only the beggar's hand that takes it.

But the old subtle life of looking to ourselves is not dead because we have given it up in one particular. It lives on vigorously and tyrannises over us in a great many ways. It underlies our prayers; it fills us with chilly fears and fevers of doubt; it makes our hopes as variable as the weather or the state of our health.

Here is the great source of the mischief: We think we must make God love us by being good. If we are good—good enough—God will love us; but if we are not good enough, what hope is there? Said one of my little ones to the youngest, in that threatening tone which is usually adopted in teaching, "You must be good, you know, or father won't love you." That is how we think of God, and how we live toward Him. We are always trying to be good enough to make Him love us; and, of course, to do that one must be very, very good! Then comes again the troubled sigh over the dreary round of failure. "You see, I am so dreadfully bad; so unlike other people. I have so little faith—no love—no earnestness—nothing!" Here is the black source of this misery.

"You must be good, or father won't love you," said the little one. Then I called him to myself as God seeks to call us, and I said, gravely and tenderly, "Do you know what you have said? It is not true, my boy—not a bit true."

"Isn't it?" said the little one, surprised and doubtful.

"No," I said; "it is far away from the truth."

"But you won't love us if we are not good, will you?" he asked.

"Yes," I said; "I can't help loving you. I shall love you for ever and ever, because I can't help it. When you are good I shall love you with a love that makes me glad; and when you are not good I love you with a love that hurts me; but I can't help loving you, because I am your father, you know."

"Your Father which is in heaven." Alas! we speak it only as the utterance of a reverential homage. We think of it as a figure borrowed from an earthly life, and only in some faint and shallow meaning to be used of God. We are afraid to take God as our own tender and pitiful father. He is a schoolmaster, or almost further off than that, and knowing less about us—an inspector, who knows nothing of us except through our lessons. His eyes are not on the scholars, but on the book, and all alike must come up to the standard.

Let us look into the school. Here is one thoughtless and indolent, the lessons neglected for everything—when he comes up to the master no wonder he hangs his head and is full of confusion. Here is another dreaming, as people dream in hearing sermons, the mind wandering for half an hour, then waking up suddenly to find that the time is gone and the lesson unlearned. Here is another who does try at the sum, but it will come wrong, try and try as he may. Here beside him is another who sees the mistake and gets it right without any trouble at all. But the master knows nothing about trouble, he only looks at the answer. Here is the poor little maiden, God bless her, who has to be the mother at home, the mistress of the poor household, to see to all the family; is it any wonder that her thoughts are flying from the lessons back to other cares? but the master knows nothing about that as he calls her to himself. Here is the lad who has failed so often that he has given up trying. Here is a dull little scholar, born of dull parents, for half-a-dozen generations, who finds every task so dreadfully hard. Here is the clever boy who knows it all at a glance and says it. Here is the poorly little one with the headache and weariness, trying to keep back the tears that tremble in her eyes. All of them, dull and clever, weak and strong, anxious and easy—all are brought to the same lesson, the master measuring them not by themselves, but by the answers and the tasks.

Oh, I know those scholars—so do you. It is just the picture of our trying to serve God—trying to bring what He has commanded; the dull scholar, and the anxious scholar, and the poor, weak, tired scholar, all getting up the tasks, and in it all burdened with the fear of failure and of being turned.

Now the school is over. Home they come, bounding with glee. All the restraint gone, the troublesome lessons are done with, the fear of failure is forgotten. Why? They are at home now. This is the Father's house, and love is here. Ah, there is that lazy, thoughtless scholar, was there ever such a boy to work? And he who was dreaming, look how his eyes flash; he is all eagerness, and tenderness, and care. But this is harder work than lessons or sums? No! there is no work in it, it is only doing something for mother. Oh, the magic of love!

Here is the anxious little maiden; it is no burden to toil; there is no sigh over it now. It is for those she loves. Here comes the dull, slow child, she forgets all about her not being clever, her father loves her as much as the clever one every bit. Ah, and here is the sum that would not come right, with the master's cross drawn right down the slate. The father hears all about it and takes the little fellow on his knee, and holds the little hand in his and tracks the mistake up to its beginning and gets the answer right triumphantly. "There, you have done it at last!" says the father, cheerily. "Oh, yes, father, I could do anything when you help me like that," cries the lad, wondering if he shall be ever so clever. Home comes the little one who is poorly, and love sees at once the drooping eye and the heavy head, and soothes it with tender pity.

Now open the ears of the heart, timid child of God; let it go sinking right down in the innermost depths of the soul. Here is the starting point of holiness, in the love and patience and pity of our heavenly Father. We have not to learn to be holy as a hard lesson at school, that we may make God think well of us; we are to learn it at home with the Father to help us. God loves you, not because you are clever, not because you are good. He loves you because He is your Father. The Cross of Christ does not make God love us, it is the outcome and measure of his love to us. He loves all his children, the clumsiest, the dullest, the ugliest, the worst of his children. His love lies at the back of everything, and we must get upon that as the solid foundation of our religious life, not growing up into that, but growing up out of it. We must begin there, or our beginning will come to nothing. Do take hold of this mightily. We must go out of ourselves for any hope, or any strength, or any confidence. And what hope, what strength, what confidence may be ours now that we can begin here, Your Father which is in heaven!

We need to get in at the tenderness and helpfulness which lie in these words, and to rest upon it—Your Father. Speak it over to yourself until something of its wonderful truth is felt by us. It means that I am bound to God by the closest and tenderest relationship—that I have a right to his love and his power and his blessing, such as nothing else could give me. Oh, the boldness with which we can draw near. Oh, the great things we have a right to ask for! Your Father. It means that all his infinite love and patience and wisdom bend over me to help me. In this relationship lies not only the possibility of holiness, there is infinitely more than that.

The story is told of one of our most gifted poets, that when a little lad of six he was sent to what was called a "charity" school. Sensitive and timid, frightened at the master's look and voice, and at the cane, without which nothing was done in those times; he could only tremble over his lesson and blunder tearfully instead of saying it, going back beaten and bewildered to try again. Little wonder that he came to think himself as stupid as the master said he was, and despaired of ever knowing anything. At last the master's patience was exhausted, the scoldings and the canings were alike in vain. Seizing the little fellow angrily, he thrust him out of the school and sent him home as too dull to learn anything. The frightened child hid himself in his mother's arms and sobbed out all his grief. Then she sat beside him and patiently taught him his letters, and bore with a hundred failures, and praised his occasional success, and so led him on until he was a scholar almost before he knew it.

Here we are to begin, in the patient love of our Father. Think how He knows us apart and by ourselves, in all our peculiarities, and in all our weakness and difficulties. The Master judges by the result. Our Father judges by the effort. Failure does not always mean fault. He knows how much things cost, and weighs them where others only measure. Your Father. Think how great store his love sets by the poor beginnings of the little ones, clumsy and unmeaning as they may be to others. All this lies in this blessed relationship, and infinitely more. Do not fear to take it all as your own.

Your Father which is in heaven. Holiness is no exceptional privilege to which only the inner circle of God's favourites are admitted. It is the right of all his children. It is no height to be reached only by some few adventurous spirits of rare endurance and daring; it is the highway to the Father's house. It is ours by inheritance, the blessed portion of goods that falleth to us. Holiness is the natural life of our new birth. The moment we are in Christ the eternal purpose of all things in heaven and in earth leads up to this end, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love. If I am the child of God, all the wisdom and love and righteousness of the Father, all the great salvation which is in Christ and Him crucified, all the energies of the Holy Spirit, all the arrangements of the daily life, are mine to minister to my holiness. So God meets us on his side. How shall we meet Him on our side?

Oh, for an enthusiasm for holiness. A passionate and absorbing ambition to be like Christ in thought, and word, and deed. To live over again the life of Christ in doing the will of God and serving others; in courage and in patience; in great brotherliness and in utter self-forgetfulness; in restful faith and in consuming zeal; in the abiding consciousness of God's love, and in sight of the dread realities of the judgment and its eternal issues; in tender compassion for the fallen, and deepest abhorrence of sin.

Let us pray and wait for the gift of the Holy Ghost, who is come to make us realise this relationship in all its glorious fulness, by whom the love of God becomes much more than a thought—a blessed possession, shed abroad in the heart. "The Spirit Himself beareth witness with our spirit that we are children of God." And how ready is the Father to give us this gift divine. "If ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him."

A GROWING WORK IN SPAIN.

DEAR SIR,—Having just visited Figueras it occurred to me that your readers might be glad to hear something of the Mission carried on there. The work is growing and is only needing increased help to extend on every side. A new schoolroom for boys, one for girls, and a large hall have just been opened, and the bright, clean appearance of everything is most attractive. The building, owing to the zeal of Pastor Rodriguez, his wife and brothers, with three English ladies, has been very tastefully decorated with texts and pictures. In order to save expense to the Mission all the painting inside and out has been done by the brothers, the result being most satisfactory.

The Sunday evening services are well attended, and that means that these poor peasants have braved persecution for their love to our Lord. When they become Protestants their employers generally dismiss them, and it is a hard matter to find any work. We were told several interesting cases of how they had suffered willingly, nay cheerfully, that they might confess Christ before men. The school children number 150, and it is beautiful to hear the distinct way in which they repeat text after text, some having committed over one hundred to heart from various parts of the Bible.

The desire is to start the same kind of work in the sixty villages around Figueras where the Gospel has never yet been heard. One room has already been hired at Vilabertran, where these indefatigable Christian workers have commenced a Sunday-school and a service once a week. The result is most encouraging, and if those in England who are working for the Master could see for a few days, as we have done, the self-sacrifice involved in carrying on this Mission in and around Figueras, we feel sure they would gladly cheer the hearts of their "companions in labour" by sending some help in order to extend the advancement of Christs' kingdom in Spain.—Yours truly,

Barcelona, Spain. G. STOUGHTON.

A PLEA FOR THE FAR NORTH.

SIBERIA.

ALTHOUGH the readers of THE CHRISTIAN have pretty frequently of late had their attention directed to Russia and its needs by the travels and personal efforts of such men as Mr. H. Grattan Guinness, Dr. Baedeker, and George Müller, yet I have felt it incumbent upon me, before God, to place before the Christians of England the special and urgent needs of that part of the Czar's dominions known as Siberia. Although comprising in its vast sweep nearly one-third of Asia, it is inhabited by only a few millions of the poorest and most uncared-for of the human race. These millions, it is to be feared, are doomed to pass away without ever having had as much as a glimpse of the "Light of the World," who yet came to shine on the benighted wanderers on the steppes of Siberia. Where are the tender hearts and the willing feet that will take the Light out to these perishing millions? that will brave the snows and the cold, and the loneliness, and the utter isolation from the world, friends, and country, count himself as one dead to all these, lay his all upon the altar, and carry the Gospel of Jesus Christ out to them?

The only spiritual provision, of any kind, made for the various tribes inhabiting Siberia, is a visit once in three or four years from a Russian priest to administer the Lord's supper, baptize, &c. Yet the people are more heathen than Christian, being ignorant of the very first fundamental truths of Christian faith and doctrine. Though nominally Russians, yet these several tribes, especially those on the slopes of the South Siberian mountain ranges, are of Finnish origin (the locality being in fact the birthplace of the Hungarian and Finnish nations), each speaking its different language, though there is a strong resemblance between them. Their utterly neglected condition is proved by the fact that the Bible has not yet been translated into any of their dialects.

This alone would be a matter of urgent importance, but becomes an imperative demand when we bear in mind the appalling fact, brought to light by an eminent Siberian traveller, Professor Ahlqvist, who in scientific researches spent a long time among them, that these semi-savage tribes are being rapidly decimated by drink and syphilis. What should still more move our hearts and quicken our actions, is the indisputable fact that, according to all accounts, there is hardly a people on the face of the earth more ready to welcome and receive the Gospel, more longing and more grateful for it. Jesus lifted up there instantly draws all men to Him.

No sustained missionary work has been carried on there since 1840. In that year the Emperor Nicholas expelled the English missionaries who, under great difficulties, but with the most blessed results, had been labouring among the Buratans, a tribe east of the Lake Baikal, in the interesting region from whence, some years since, Professor Europæus despatched his famous post-card to Helsingfors University, announcing his discovery, in a stone cooking utensil of petrified soup, computed to be at least a thousand years old. There can be little doubt that the present humane Emperor would without much difficulty re-open Siberia to missionary enterprise, if only men can be found who, constrained by the love of Christ, will go and seek to win these wonderfully prepared peoples for Jesus; carrying the Gospel into the very heart of Asia, and there meeting with their brother toilers from China, coming northward and westward. May God lay this matter upon the hearts of some of his children, to take prompt and active steps for winning our benighted fellow-creatures on the steppes and mountains of Siberia to the cause of Christ and of order, both by the spoken word, and by the written testimony which God hath given us of his Son, translated into their vernaculars for the purpose.

FINLAND.

As many Christians in this country have become interested in Finland, I should like to add a few words about that country. God be praised for what He has done there, through the Holy Ghost, and still is doing. As a proof, however, of the spiritual "wickedness" rampant in ecclesiastical "high places," whence the masses have been wont to look for salvation, I may mention a single fact. At a conference of Christians, recently held in Helsingfors, convened by one of the most respected ministers in the land, who glories in having been a believer thirty years, the meeting could not come to any decision as to whether, in determining our own standpoint with regard to the teachings of Christ and his apostles, we were to be guided by the Word of God, or by Luther's writings. A number of Evangelical Christians present stoutly maintained and defended the supremacy of Scripture in all matters of faith and points of doctrine, insisting that the masses should be referred to the Word of God alone for guidance. The rev. Chairman, supported by his friends, would, on no account, aquiesce in this view, but vehemently claimed for Luther equal, if not indeed greater, authority than Scripture itself. As they could not agree upon this point, the whole Conference fell to the ground.

The people, of all classes, are thankful for the Gospel, and the only opposition comes from so-called Ministers of Christ, who from their pulpits openly denounce and inveigh against the preaching of a full and free salvation through faith in Christ alone. God, in gracious answer to the prayers of Christians in this country, did much for Finland last year. May more faithful and earnest prayer be offered up for the work of God in that corner of the world this year; the results will be even more blessed and glorious, to the praise and honour of Jesus Christ.

A REFUGE FOR EX-PRIESTS.

WE have received an appeal from Pastor C. Chiniquy, on behalf of his Home of Refuge in the United States for priests who are desirous of leaving the Church of Rome.

It will be in the recollection of many of our readers that Mr. Chiniquy appealed to Christians in this country twenty-three years ago for help towards this work of rescuing his brethren from the thraldom of popish bondage. He is now in this country holding meetings for the purpose of bringing before the Protestants of this country the great need of aggressive effort in seeking the deliverance of many who are nominally Romanists, but are longing to be free.

Mr. Chiniquy states that fifteen young men who have received a Christian education at his college are now preaching the Gospel in America; and that about 150 boys and girls also have been taught the truth through the help the Lord's people have rendered him from time to time.

As work increases, responsibility becomes heavier, and the more need of funds for continuing any good work. Mr. Chiniquy is very strong in his feelings against the idolatries of his former religion, and urges an immediate extra effort on behalf of those enslaved by popery and ritualism. Mr. Chiniquy's present address is 38, Parliament-street, London, S.W.; he will be glad to give fuller information to any who are disposed to help.

MAGGIE'S DIFFICULTY.

WHO does not remember their first day at school? How frightened and nervous you felt; how strange everything looked, and how hard the lessons seemed. It is generally a great trial when a child goes to school for the first time, and older people often do not know what little Harry or Nelly goes through when they set off, perhaps not liking to tell anyone how frightened they feel, for fear of being laughed at.

Anyhow, little Maggie, who was only nine years old, did not look very happy as she sat with her slate in her hand on the first day she went to school, for there were such large tears in her eyes, that she could not even see the figures before her: they seemed to dance up and down, looking sometimes very small, and sometimes very large, until she could not distinguish them at all, and at last, one of these tears fell right in the middle of the sum, blotting part of it out. This was the signal for more to follow, and then Maggie did not try to keep them back any more, but let them come as fast as they would without trying to stop them.

The trouble was simply that she could not make an arithmetical sum come right: do what she would, the figures came just the same, and would not "prove."

She had tried very patiently to find out her mistake for some time, but her efforts seemed fruitless; she could not discover where the error lay, and her brain only became more confused and puzzled each time she went over it; so at last she gave it up in despair.

"Why, Maggie, what's the matter?" said her teacher, presently, hearing a little sob.

"I can't remember how to do these sums," was the tearful answer.

"Then let me show you, dear;" and under the influence of that pleasant voice and clear explanation, Maggie's difficulties vanished like snow before the sunshine. Before very long the sum was finished, and pronounced to be right, and the little girl's face was bright with smiles instead of being wet with tears. "Why did you try to puzzle it out by yourself?" asked her teacher. "You should have asked me to help you. Next time you have any difficulty come at once to me, and I will put you right. I do not expect you to get on alone."

We, too, are often like Maggie, in that we try to learn our lessons in the great school of life in our own strength, and forget to ask help from our wise and loving Master, who is so ready and willing to aid us in our tasks. Maggie made her sum ever so much harder by not taking it directly to her teacher when she found it was wrong, and it is just the same with us—

"Oh! what peace we often forfeit,
Oh! what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Everything to God in prayer."

Let us learn, then, from little Maggie to take everything to Jesus—to get into the way of going to Him with all the details of our daily life; and whenever there arises "the smallest tangle, the tiniest thing," let us not try to put them right ourselves, but take them "straight to the King."

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

GREAT MEETINGS AT LIVERPOOL.

MANY of your readers will have shared the feelings that drew from one of the most faithful of them an exclamation of disappointed surprise, at the disappearance of "Messrs. Moody and Sankey's engagements" from the head of your weekly list of "Coming Events." Thousands of Christians whom distance and diverse other causes have prevented from seeing or hearing these Evanglists, have yet followed their movements, and read of their labours with a watchful and ever growing interest. But the lapse of time has almost exhausted the plan of the provincial campaign, which has been going on these eighteen months, and before many days are over the Mission of 1881-3 will be a thing of the past—all but its happy memories and rich results; these will remain as prized possessions of the Christian Churches throughout the land while time endures.

In the work of the successful evangelist it is especially true that "history repeats itself." Whether carried on among the refined and educated classes, the busy devotees of commercial and industrial life, the more simple-minded tillers of the soil, or the sunken masses of the "residuum," the methods and results of Gospel work are virtually the same. So there is little or nothing new that can be said about the Liverpool meetings in the main features of them. Some of the accidental surroundings would be worthy of more than passing remark if your space allowed.

The place of meeting, for instance, Hengler's Circus, has much about it that is unique. Mr. Moody has often remarked that circuses, as a rule, are constructed on the most sensible principles for the accommodation of popular assemblies. Hengler's Circus is a superior specimen of its genus, and one could hardly conceive of an auditorium better suited to the purposes of the evangelist. The seeing and hearing are so perfect in all parts of the house that no sort of physical strain is imposed on the audience, and they are left free to receive, unchecked, all the spiritual influences that emanate from the pulpit platform. When the building is packed to its utmost capacity from floor to ceiling, as it has been so often during the past ten days, the sight is a wonderfully stirring one, and could hardly fail to inspire even a much less sensitive or earnest preacher than Mr. Moody.

As stated in your last issue, the adjoining stables have been transformed into an inquiry-room, and anything better adapted for this special department of the work could not be devised. In a word, the Committee has spared neither pains nor expense in perfecting all the likely human arrangements that experience and collective wisdom could suggest.

With all its great seating capacity, estimated at over 5000, the Circus has altogether failed to accommodate the mighty multitudes that have flocked thither. The overflow has been provided for, afternoon and evening, at Emmanuel Church, near by, where Rev. T. E. Cleworth has been the preacher. That, too, has been crowded out on most week evenings, and an adjoining chapel has opened its friendly doors for the rejected of the Circus and the church. Further than that, a late meeting, for men only, was started in the middle of the week in Brunswick Chapel, at some five minutes' distance; here Professor Henry Drummond has taken up the special work that under his wise direction was so prospered of God during the Liverpool Mission of eight years ago in Newsome's Circus.

With so many ramifications, all in progress almost at the same hour, it is not possible for one spectator to give any adequate idea of the extent and scope of the movement. The great centre of attraction has of course been the circus, where Mr. Moody has invariably been the preacher, except on Friday afternoon and evening, when Mr. Cleworth was a most effective substitute.

On Wednesday evening I was fain to find a resting-place on the stairs, at one of the furthest corners of the top gallery. The words of the preacher, specially those addressed to backsliding parents, were unspeakably solemn. He had not known a single instance, he said, in all his experience where the falling away of parents did not result in moral and spiritual damage to their children. No one who has experienced the least defection or deadness of soul could doubt the absolute truthfulness of Mr. Moody's depiction of the unhappiness and sorrow that track the footsteps of those who consciously forsake the fountain of living waters and vainly seek refreshment at the broken cisterns of the world.

Another meeting in the Circus of singular interest was that of Thursday afternoon, when Mr. Moody spoke of "What Christ is and offers to be to his people." The address has become pretty familar to me through repeated hearing of it; yet it was invested with such extraordinary freshness and delivered with such an unction from the Holy One, that I was glad to yield myself unrestrainedly to all the moving and enthralling power of this glorious theme, as the preacher unfolded to view the varied aspect of Christ's work as Saviour, Deliverer, Shepherd, Teacher, and Guide. The discourse sparkled, too, with gems of terse and pointed epigram, each of which sent a thrill of emotion through the vast and attentive audience, as the gentle breeze ruffles the surface of the glassy sea.

Mr. Sankey's exquisite singing, at the same meeting, of "I've found a friend, oh, such a friend!" and the solo part of "Come, oh, come to Me!" admirably fitted in with the sentiment of the address, and helped to render this a meeting that will long and often recur to the memories of those who were privileged to come under its gracious spell. The perfect acoustics of the circus have greatly aided Mr. Sankey in presenting the Gospel to the people through the channel of sweetest song. So many overflow gatherings have, however, been a serious addition to his labours. After singing in the Circus he has proceeded to Emmanuel Church, aiding Mr. Cleworth not only by his song, but in the other parts of the service. Later still, he has on several occasions helped to sustain the interest of the men's meeting in Moss-street, conducted by Mr. Drummond.

LAST SUNDAY'S MEETINGS.

The morning of the Day of Rest rose bright and peaceful, but it proved to be anything but a day of rest for the Evangelists. Thousands of the Christian workers of Liverpool and its suburbs must have been very early astir. Long before eight o'clock the great Circus was crammed. The demand for tickets for this meeting was extraordinary, and far exceeded any possible supply. The many disappointed late comers were provided for by an overflow meeting at the College Hall, Shaw-lane. Thither Mr. Sankey went, after thrilling the eager expectant multitude in the Circus with two rousing calls to service: "Go Work in My Vineyard," and Miss Havergal's noble hymn, "Tell it out among the Heathen that the Lord is King." These messages, so pertinent to the occasion, wafted on the morning air, in sweetest, grandest tones, to the ears and hearts of the assembled Christians, were an admirable prelude to Mr. Moody's address. One of the brethren who led in prayer—a stalwart Presbyterian pastor—thanked God with much unction and fervour, on this bright resurrection morning of spring, when the buds and flowers were bursting forth on every side, that He had in his providence sent the evangelists "as a breath of spring" to the Churches in Liverpool; might the result be many swelling, bursting buds of faith and hope and zeal, and holy living in the days and years to come.

Mr. Moody commended to the workers his four famous "Qualifications for Successful Service"—faith, courage, enthusiasm, and sympathy. The Spirit of the Lord was upon him and his words were with great power. Many were busy with their pencils treasuring up the winged, barbed words of the speaker for future use. At some points in the address the hearers were deeply moved, and, as one friend remarked, there could not have been many dry eyes in the house. In describing the doings of the faithful four who carried the man sick of the palsy, and letting him down through the roof, laid him at the feet of Christ, Mr. Moody interjected a word for the critics and the fault-finders, lineal descendants of the wise men in our Lord's time, who objected to any such display of irregular and unconventional zeal. It takes neither brains nor heart, he said, to find fault, but those who are really in earnest about the salvation of others will not be daunted by anything that the croakers may say. The morally sick in Liverpool will never be reached simply by opening the church doors, and saying "Come in and be saved," or "Stay out and be lost." Christ came to seek the lost, and then to save them; his followers must tread in his footsteps.

Passing on to the question of courage in the Lord's work, and illustrating it by a reference to Gideon's army, Mr. Moody said he believed the Church of God in the present day would be ten times stronger if she could get rid of all the fearful ones in her ranks. She wants men and women whose hearts are on fire with the love of God, and with a consuming passion for the good of others. Many of the "wise men" in these times are afraid of enthusiasm, and talk of it as "spasmodic effort," "undue excitement," &c. &c. Where are all the people that were converted in Liverpool eight years ago? they triumphantly ask. "Thank God," said Mr. Moody, "I have met with them every day since I have been here. Every night my arm aches through shaking hands with those who tell me they were blessed at that time." It is not likely that the converts are going to pull the door-bell of those who stand aloof from the work and tell of their conversion. Would to God there were far more enthusiasm in all departments of Christian work than there is.

As he drew to a close he expatiated with most moving effect on the need and the power of human sympathy, and referred to the deplorable condition of many of the destitute children of Liverpool. The other night, walking down to the hotel, from the meeting, with a friend, about half-past ten, they fell in with a small ragged boy shivering in the cold. Their hearts were deeply touched by the apparent wretchedness of the little fellow. When questioned, the boy said his mother had sent him out to beg for pennies that she might buy whiskey. The friend who was with Mr. Moody took him by the hand and led him away to a place of shelter, where he could be cared for. These, said the Evangelist, are the kind of Christians we want. We have had plenty of long sermons; now let us go and carry them into practice. Let us begin to preach with our hands and our feet. If the spirit of the Good Samaritan were to actuate all the Christians in Liverpool, their number would no doubt be doubled inside of thirty days. Think of the many burdened, weary hearts in all our great cities, and the children worse than orphans. How long the Church has been in reaching them! Let us go after the erring ones and draw them on towards a better life. Let us show more practical sympathy with those who are giving their lives to the saving of the destitute and neglected children.

Before his address Mr. Moody made the welcome announcement that an All Day Convention would be held in Liverpool on Thursday, April 26, two days before they sailed for America. The details of this farewell gathering are not yet arranged, but the probable programme will be given in our next issue. It will be an occasion of great interest, and many friends from the three Kingdoms will doubtless be present.

The Circus was not long emptied of the Christian workers when it was again packed to repletion with those who purported to be "non-churchgoers." A glance at the audience was sufficient evidence that a great proportion of the crowd was of the right sort, though the hearty way in which the hymns were sung showed that many more had gained an entrance—to put it plainly—on false pretences. Mr. Sankey sang with great feeling, "Waiting and Watching." Mr. Moody's address was on "Christ seeking the sinner." He illustrated it largely from the stories of Bartimæus and Zaccheus, which he made to pass before the mental vision of the deeply attentive audience, clothing the skeleton outlines of the Scripture narrative, as he put it, in flesh and blood, and setting them walking around. His words went straight to many a heart, and the frequent resort to handkerchiefs was an outward symbol of the emotion that stirred within. The number of those who rose for prayer at the close speedily outstripped all calculation, and it almost seemed as if the great amphitheatre was one leviathan inquiry-room. Large numbers flocked to the stables, and the stalls were filled to overflowing with those seeking the way of salvation and peace. Again there was an overflow meeting in the College Hall, where Mr. Cleworth preached and Mr. Sankey sang.

The afternoon service was specially designed for women. They came out in such numbers that two overflow-meetings were needed. After the Circus and College Hall had been filled up to their uttermost capacity, the remainder were accommodated in Brunswick Chapel. Mr. Moody declared the counsel of God to the thousands in the Circus, Mr. Cleworth did a like service for those in the crowded College Hall, and Mr. Henry Drummond gave an address to his large audience on "Putting on Christ's Harness," clear as a sunbeam, and as luminous; the writer conversed at the close with a young fellow who had come in, guiltless of a Sunday suit, but in deep anxiety of soul; he described Mr. Drummond's short sermon as "splendid."

While each meeting had a preacher to itself Mr. Sankey was the singer at all three. Indeed, it may be said, "right here," that he has never before in all his experience had such a full day; he sang the sweet music of the Gospel at no less than eleven meetings in the course of the day. This afternoon in the Circus he gave a magnificent rendering of that prime favourite, "Behold what manner of love;" to the congregation in College Hall he delivered the pathetic song-sermon about the Jewish "daughter" who touched the hem of Christ's garment and was made whole; no less moving was his singing, to a new and characteristic air, of the well known hymn, "There is a green hill far away."

The evening work fitly crowned a day of rare opportunity and of large blessing. Being somewhat late, I experienced no little difficulty in finding my way to the inside of the circus, where I found Mr. Moody already in the heart of his discourse on "Sowing and reaping," addressed to a vast throng of men. Every point in this solemn exposition of eternal truth told; the Gospel arrows flew thick and fast, and the inquiry-meeting afterwards revealed the fact that some of them, though shot at a venture, reached their mark.

I can only add, in a word, that four other meetings were proceeding simultaneously with that in the circus—at the Baptist Chapel close by, at the College Hall, where Mrs. Menzies addressed women, at St. Augustine's Church, where Mr. Cleworth was the preacher, and at Moss-street Chapel, under the presidency of Mr. Drummond. At all these overflow meetings, except the first mentioned, Mr. Sankey was present, and sang. It was a busy and blessed day. This meagre outline report cannot convey any just conception of the hold which the work has taken in Liverpool, at the close of a week's meetings. In view of this encouraging fact, the Evangelists have decided to extend their stay over next week at least, and, it may be, up to the last days of their present sojourn on our shores.

THE WORK IN LEEDS.

The Mission in Leeds is being continued in the Coliseum, under the ministry of J. M. Scroggie. His manner of presenting the claims of the Gospel is different from D. L. Moody's, yet it is "in demonstration of the Spirit and in power," and it leads to the same result in the conversion of many souls, and the return of wanderers to the Father's home. It was at one time decided to close the Mission with the meetings to be held to-morrow, the 8th inst. Influenced, however, by the growing interest manifested, and a telegram from Mr. Moody expressing sorrow at the prospect of so early a close of the Leeds Mission, Mr. Scroggie, after such conference with friends as was practicable, stated the case to the audience on the 5th inst., which rose in mass to express desire for the continuance of the meetings. They will, therefore, be held for at least another week.

It is evident that the seed sown by Messrs. Moody and Sankey and their coadjutors in the earlier part of the work is now springing up in spiritual results. Very many who held back are now coming forward for personal conversation, and are led to accept Christ as their Saviour. Not a few deeply interesting cases have occurred, but for the present I will name only one. A young lady found out a man who, when a boy, had been turned out of his Sunday-school for misconduct. Though now married and middle-aged, he had never been inside a place of worship until this week, when she persuaded him, with no small difficulty, to come to one of Mr. Scroggie's meetings in the Coliseum. He came again, and now has confessed Christ, and become, it is hoped, a changed man. A case like this, most unlikely to be reached by the ordinary means, proves the value and necessity of special efforts such as those now put forth by these honoured servants, to whom God grant abundant blessing.

Leeds, April 7. T. Harvey.

MR. QUARRIER'S ORPHAN HOMES.

An interesting ceremony took place at the City Orphan Home, James Morrison-street, Glasgow, on April 3. The occasion was to wish God-speed to a band of a hundred children on their departure to Canada. Eleven such bands have been sent within the past thirteen years to the new homes in the Far West. This time only the boys are going, the departure of the girls being postponed till May. In the unavoidable absence of Sir William Collins, who was to have presided, Mr. James White, of Overtoun, took the chair.

Mr. Quarrier stated that there were 100 more children in the Homes now than at the same date last year, although they had since then sent 150 out to Canada. Alluding to the expense of maintaining the children in the Homes, he remarked that though it took £25 a day, or £175 a week, to keep the large family they had at present, money was always forthcoming, and they never required to put off payment of a tradesman's account.

Miss Bilbrough, from Canada, was then asked to address the boys, and the enthusiastic reception she met with at their hands clearly indicated her popularity. She had been in Canada for thirteen years, and had received some 4000 boys, and placed them out in homes there. They prospered much better than they ever could do in the old country.

Rev. Mr. Howie gave his testimony from actual experience at home, and from what he had heard from people in Canada, of the good work accomplished by Mr. Quarrier.

A SWISS RETREAT FOR WORKERS.—Dear Sir,—As you have been so kind formerly to mention "La Retraite" de Mdlle. de Greyerz, for lady workers, governesses, &c., who need rest and a Christian home for a long or short period, may I ask you to mention that this "Home" is now at Weissenstein, a pretty country house surrounded with pine woods, twenty minutes only from Berne. —Address La Directrice de La Retraite, Weissenstein, Berne, Switzerland.

Notes and Comments.

THE Rev. A. F. Beard, D.D., pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Syracuse, New York, has been appointed to take charge of the work in the American Chapel in Paris.

A Conference on Spiritual Life is to be held at Richmond during the last week in April. We doubt not it will be profitable to many. An advertisement gives all particulars.

We are glad to find the labours of Mr. John Bost are not forgotten. M. E. Leris, of Castres, has just bequeathed to the Asylums the sum of 50,000 francs, and a mansion worth 100,000 francs.

The Freeman informs us that "a most cordial invitation has been sent from the Churches in Leicester to the Council of the Baptist Union, to hold their autumnal meetings this year in that interesting central town."

News from Berlin reports the work of Mr. Von Schluembach to have been such a success that those who have been blessed, and the ministers whose hearts have been stirred by its means, are arranging for its continuance. A new Y.M.C.A. has been started, which, if rightly conducted, may become a power for good all over Germany.

The tendency of the world is to shut out God. "There is no fear of God before their eyes" is sadly true to-day. We are glad to notice the following remark in this month's Evangelical Christendom:—

Men who have no God to worship and adore are not likely to be ennobled with any Godlike quality. . . . . Materialism is necessarily a debasing creed, and morality has no sure and certain basis apart from religion, i.e., Christianity.

Principal Rainy has been giving the students of New College some sound advice on "Preaching." The Doctor contrasted the results of "legal" and "Gospel" preaching respectively, urging the latter as the only means "of bringing back sinners to God." The following passage in his address describes the cause of all true success:—

It is one of the good features of the modern time that the central place in Christianity is our Lord's Person. His wondrous self has become more generally recognised; hence, preaching revolves more constantly on this centre.

So far as statistics are concerned, the following, taken from the Protestant Mission Decennial Statistical Tables, show the growth of Missions in India, &c.:—

The number of native Christians in India, Burmah, and Ceylon was: In 1851, 102,951; in 1861, 213,370; in 1871, 318,363; in 1881, 528,590. In India alone there were: In 1851, 91,092; in 1861, 138,731; in 1871, 224,258; in 1881,417,372. The rate of increase in India from 1851 to 1861 was about 53 per cent.; that from 1861 to 1871 was 61 per cent.; that from 1871 to 1881 has been 86 per cent. The number of communicants is, perhaps, the best test of progress. In India, Burmah, and Ceylon the numbers stand thus: For 1851, 17 306; for 1861, 47,274; for 1871, 78.494; for 1881, 145.097. In India alone the numbers are: For 1851, 14,661; for 1861, 24,976; for 1871, 52,816; for 1881, 113,325. Thus the number nearly doubled between 1851 and 1861; it more than doubled between 1861 and 1871; and again it has more than doubled between 1871 and 1881.

Efforts are being made in many quarters to introduce false doctrines, and deadly errors of various kinds, under the garb of religious feeling, and even of Christian fervour. Meetings where prayer and Gospel hymns figure on the programme, are held, at which themes quite opposed to Christian faith and Bible teaching are at first subtly introduced, and afterwards freely discussed. It behoves all to whom truth is sacred and precious, and who care for the souls of others, to be on the alert, and to do what they can to counteract such movements.

One of the books spoken of by Mr. Joseph Cook in his lectures on Spiritualism, and referred to by us in our Notes and Comments a few weeks ago, as about to be issued by Spiritualists as superseding the Bible, and giving to the world a new revelation, is already, we find, advertised for sale in our own country under the title of "Oahspe, a New Bible, in the words of Jehovah, and his angel ambassadors." The publishing association by which it is issued, urge the formation of clubs for the purchase of the volume, offering it on reduced terms where this is done. It is also recommended that the book be read at the meetings of such clubs, and its principles discussed. Surely words of warning are called for, and should be spoken by our ministers, and religious teachers everywhere, and the blasphemous pretensions of modern Spiritualism should be exposed with no sparing hand.

The following facts are well worthy of special notice, not only as an illustration of devoted and laborious service for the Lord, but also as an indication of the desire for the Word of God which appears to prevail:—

The Rev. Henry Lansdell, D.D. (recently returned from a tour in Central Asia), travelled over 11,000 miles, distributing the Scriptures in Russian, Sclavonic, Hebrew, Chinese, Mongolian, Kirghese, Persian, Arabic, Turkish, Polish, German, and French. He was enabled to make a permanent arrangement, by which the exiles passing into Siberia might be supplied with copies of the Scriptures to take to their distant destinations. He also supplied prisons and hospitals, and sold a large number of Kirghese and Chinese Scriptures in the markets at Kuldja, where the people gathered around him like bees, and speedily purchased all he had to dispose of. Of the 11,000 miles travelled by Dr. Lansdell, 5000 miles were accomplished by rail, about 3000 by water, and the remainder on wheels, or on the backs of horses and camels. The last three modes of travel involved the hire of 900 horses, 330 drivers, and eight camels.

In the last two numbers of the Methodist Recorder articles have appeared on the subject of the union of the different Methodist bodies. It is to be hoped this effort will be persevered in, for everyone will admit that a united testimony for the Lord is as daylight to dark, especially in the presence of so many formidable foes as at present assail those who profess faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

The unification of the Methodist bodies in Canada seems practically effected. The proposed basis of the union has been almost unanimously approved by the Primitive Methodists. Returns to hand show that in 27 circuits 1271 approved of the basis, whilst only 269 voted against it.

A far higher and broader unity than even this is the necessity of the Church of God. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," wrote the Apostle Paul to the Corinthian saints. The manifest unity, as here expressed, is what the most spiritual in all the Churches long for. The Word of God must be the basis of fellowship for those who are indwelt by the Spirit, if our Lord's prayer is to be answered so far as the Church of God is concerned. For this let all Christians labour and pray.

God has sent a good man to London; a young preacher of the old Puritan sort—as free from religious cant as from the cant of modern thought. We refer to the Rev. Ossian Davies, who has just entered upon the pastorate at New-court Congregational Chapel, Tollington-park. An unpretentious and unassuming man, with Welsh poetry and fervour, a Scotch love of facts and figures, an English directness of expression; but above all, a man with the fear of God before his eyes, and the love of the Lord Jesus and his Gospel in his heart. This, at least, is the impression we have received after hearing his two sermons on last Lord's-day.

In these rapid days there is a tendency to thought without meditation, and to an exercise of the brain in disproportion to that of heart and conscience. We should therefore keep before us the special need in the ministry of a preaching and a life which lead the people to say, not "What a clever preacher!" but "We will go with you, for we see that God is with you!"

The Resolution Sir Wilfrid Lawson proposes to move on Friday, the 27th inst., on Local Option, is to the following effect:—

That, in the opinion of this House, the best interests of the nation are seriously affected by the continued delay in giving effect to the Resolution adopted and reaffirmed by the House, declaring that a legal power of restraining the issue or renewal of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors should be placed in the hands of the persons most deeply interested and affected, namely, the inhabitants themselves.

This would seem to be a self-evident proposition, and we might suppose would be sure to prove successful in bringing about the action desired, and already declared desirable.

But it is surprising how much pressure is required to induce a large proportion of our legislators to rise above the interests of a class, and legislate simply in the interest of reforms calculated to benefit the nation at large. There is such a thing, we suppose, as a national conscience, but it is terribly hard to arouse it on some questions. The result of the discussion the other night on the Opium traffic shows this to be the case. Although the resolution brought before the House by Sir J. Pease only proposed to give to the Chinese Government the right to arrange its own import duties, it was nevertheless negatived by a majority of sixty.

There is reason to believe, however, that progress was made by means of the discussion, spite of the majority voting against the resolution. The Government did not, as on previous occasions, meet the matter with a direct negative, and Lord Fitzmaurice made admissions on its behalf which would lead us to hope that means are being considered by which the traffic may be greatly modified, if not wholly surrendered. He said that "the Government were fully sensible of the importance of the question, and, considering the great interest shown, not only in that House, but out of it, in the matter, as the time approached when the decennial revision of the treaty of Tientsin would naturally take place, the whole Opium question would be certain to be forced upon the attention of the Government."

The following words of Mr. S. Smith, the new M.P. for Liverpool, are worthy of special regard, and have a ring of Christian manliness about them which we cannot too highly commend :—

Not only would the change of policy be productive of material advantage to this country eventually, but it would raise us in the estimation of all the races of the world. There could be no doubt that our dealings with the Chinese with regard to opium were a great blot on our escutcheon in the eyes of the whole world. Moreover, this opium traffic was felt by many of our own people to be one of the great national sins of this country, which we had not atoned for or withdrawn, and it would be a relief to their feelings to do away with this iniquitous trade. Again, its abolition would give Christianity a chance. By our cruel and unjust treatment of the Chinese we had done our best to make Christianity abhorrent to them. What could they think of our Christianity when we presented them the cup of vice with one hand and the Bible with the other? They could only conclude that our religion was a huge hypocrisy. He believed that a change of policy towards the Chinese would bring blessings upon this country, for wherever a nation took a right course it gained by it sooner or later.

The paragraph referred to in the following letter found its way into our columns last week in the absence of the Editor, who certainly would not have inserted it :—

Dear Sir,—As you have copied into your Christian of this week a paragraph about this Orphanage which appeared in a recent impression of a Bristol evening paper, and as you introduce the quotation with a sentence which assumes that the statements in that paragraph are "facts," I must request that, by the insertion of this letter, you will allow me in an equally prominent part of next week's Christian, to assure your readers that the paragraph in the Bristol paper was published entirely without our sanction or knowledge. On its being shown to us we immediately communicated with the proprietor of the paper, and learned from him that the paragraph was the work of a sub-editor, and was the substance of a conversation which a gentleman resident in the neighbourhood had held with him. Further, that this person was in no way whatever connected with this institution, nor did he derive his information from anyone connected with it. May I be allowed, once for all, to state that no reliable information regarding the state of our funds can ever be obtained except through the annual reports. All newspaper statements, therefore, purporting to give information derived from private sources should be always received by the public at their exact value—which is ever "nil."—I am, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

James Wright.

New Orphan Houses, Ashley Down, Bristol.

We have received a mass of correspondence on the subject of "Faith Healing," and that on both sides. Few themes claiming Christian thought require more caution, or prayer for Divine guidance and preservation from error, than this. A letter has been sent us by the Rev. C. H. Wainwright, M.A., of Blackpool, which has already appeared in print, narrating the death of his own sister, notwithstanding the prayers of Mr. Karl Andreas. Mr. Wainwright's feeling is so strong in the matter, and the facts he narrates are so painful, that he says the certificate should have been, "Died from the imposture of faith-healing."

One case of any kind, however, cannot determine for or against a general principle. We have testimonies from some whose genuineness and sincerity is beyond doubt, who declare that they have derived great benefit at Bethshan. If the simple point at issue were, "Is the Lord able to heal the sick in answer to prayer?" every believer would of course reply, "Undoubtedly so," and that with, or without means, humanly hopeless and incurable or not. But as the matter is being treated, much more is asserted than this, and the subject is a wider one than in its present form we can find space for in our columns. We should advise all who can do so to spend a Wednesday afternoon at Bethshan, and see and hear for themselves what is there set forth. One of our correspondents suggests that if "A Surgeon," and others, would go in an unbiassed spirit to some of the Wednesday afternoon meetings at Bethshan many difficulties would be removed, and the friends who conduct the work there would be less misunderstood.

It is a striking feature of the times in reference to Christian work in heathen lands, that there is a greatly increased thirst for religious information, and readiness to receive books and tracts aiming to impart it. The last annual report of the Calcutta Tract Society, just issued, testifies to this in a very marked degree. The total issues for the year have been, by sale or free gift, 403,566, as compared with 294,333 the year before.

The report states : "These figures are very noteworthy. Formerly all tracts were given away gratuitously, and in many cases it was difficult to induce people to receive them at all; they seemed to feel as if some defilement attached to the tracts, and as if loss of caste might result from receiving them. After some time this prejudice died away to a large extent, and people were ready to receive tracts freely. There is evidently now a great desire on the part of the people to obtain tracts. All tract distributors testify to this."

Many missionaries have written to bear testimony as to the readiness with which tracts are received, and the good which they do. Many cases have come to our knowledge in which the recipients file the tracts as they receive them, and read them over more than once. Frequently tracts are asked for by name, or if one is offered to a man he replies that he has it already, and would like a different one. Ladies engaged in zenana work bear testimony to the acceptableness of the tracts among the inmates of the zenana, and report that the girls in the schools state that the tracts they receive are read by their fathers and brothers. The amount of light and comfort which has been imparted by the 260,000 vernacular tracts that have been distributed during the year, must be very great.

On Sunday week petitions were signed in all the churches of the Romish Archiepiscopal diocese of Westminster, by desire of Cardinal Manning, declaring that the laws relating to the protection of young girls are inadequate, and urgently need amendment, particularly in the case of those who are without property, or parents and guardians. The petition urges that the age of protection, now fixed at thirteen years, should be raised in all cases to eighteen years, that it should be made a distinct offence to receive any minor into any house, or upon any premises, for an immoral purpose, or otherwise to promote immoral relations with any minor under the age of twenty-one years, and asks that the law may be altered for those purposes in the present session of Parliament.

The terms of this petition are by no means too strong or urgent. Such legislation is imperatively called for, and that without delay, and it behoves all sections of the Church to use their influence in promoting the accomplishment of such ends as are therein aimed at. There is a fearful laxity of morals showing itself amongst us, and young minds, poisoned by the light and frothy literature which streams forth from the press in all directions, are in danger of becoming an easy prey to the myrmidons of vice who lurk about their path.

TO ENGLAND.

"The throne is established by righteousness."—Prov. xvi. 12.

ENGLAND, my country! can it, can it be,
That thou art falling from thy high estate;
That "glory is departing" e'en from thee,
And that like Israel's shall be thy fate?
England, O England, is the hour gone by,
When, as a banner, we this truth unfurled—
That "over all, it is the Lord most high,
Who reigneth in the kingdoms of the world."
O sons of England! shall your laws disown
Allegiance to the eternal King of kings;
Shall they henceforth claim earthly rule alone,
And "right divine" be 'midst forgotten things?
Kings reign by righteousness, true right divine,
The guardian-angel this of England's throne.
O'er her vast empire Heaven's sun shall shine,
With light and glory still illume the crown,
And on her shield no shadows dim shall fall,
If God be honoured first, as Lord of all.

A CALL FOR CHRISTIAN LADIES

TO HELP DWELLERS IN RAILWAY-CROSSING COTTAGES.

DEAR FRIENDS,—As we read the record of our blessed Lord's journeyings when on earth, how frequently we are reminded that his loving heart went out after the lonely villagers at these bye-way places. Did He not find some of his most precious opportunities to speak to men and women? Sometimes alone, at other times the twelve were with Him, going through every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; the result was that many "heard the Word, kept it, and brought forth fruit with patience."

In our land we have 6000 or more persons in charge of railway crossings, requiring a monthly book-packet of cheer. These thousands of families, who dwell in the cottages where public roads cross the level of the lines of the railways of Great Britain, are remote, in the majority of instances, from towns and villages. These dwellers alone, unable to leave their watch and ward over the lives of the millions who travel by railway, are seldom seen or spoken to, except by those who drive the vehicles, and whose only wish, naturally, is to pass as rapidly as possible across the line lest their horses should take fright.

The Land Agent of the Great Eastern Railway, deeply interested in the welfare of railway men, has for the past three years, with a band of twenty-three ladies, remembered these isolated cottagers on his line, and the post has carried to them month by month copies of the British Messenger, Cottager and Artizan, Friendly Greetings, British Workman, &c. These poor folks have received the papers most gratefully, and many have been the touching letters sent in acknowledgment. Many of them cannot write, and some are very aged, just able to raise the flag, having been at their lonely post more than thirty years.

We now desire to extend this happy, unseen service for the King over all the railways in the kingdom. Having obtained the names of the cottagers, may we ask for lady-volunteers, each at her own expense to undertake twelve, or more, families to whom they will send the above papers. In due time we hope to link each railway line, and the distributors' names, under a local superintendent, so that we may secure united prayer for blessing upon the Mission.

The Home of Industry will be a convenient centre, and the Secretary, Miss Watson, assisted by other voluntary lady helpers, will aid by correspondence, or, where possible, a personal interview, the furtherance of this much needed Mission; and by united prayer upon the monthly packets sent through the land, to witness to souls of Jesus our Lord, who died to save the lost, we may look for a rich blessing in the ingathering of many precious souls.

Yours in service for the Master,

Home of Industry, Annie Macpherson.

THE EAST LONDON INSTITUTE.

THE story of the ninth year of the East London Mission Institute, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. H. Grattan Guinness, has just been told in an intensely interesting Report issued by Mrs. Guinness in the March number of "The Regions Beyond." Aptly entitled "Toiling On," it records numerous facts and incidents illustrative of the spirit of faith and patient endurance in the service of Christ; it furnishes fresh testimony to the certainty of Divine aid being rendered to all who trust "in the living God."

The college work is first referred to; fifty-one new students have been received into the Institute during the year, while fifty-four have left for various Mission stations—thirteen in Europe, nine in Asia, eighteen in Africa, ten in America, and one in New Zealand. Three female missionaries have also been sent out this year, a new Home for training such having been established. The students have, both at Hulme Cliff and at Harley House, a testing process to pass through, which ensures their being able and willing workers at the end of their curriculum; indeed, the whole course is one of ardent and diligent labour, such as none but those willing to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ" would be likely to maintain. At Harley House, seven hours a day of study, and two of practical work, and at Cliff, nine hours' study and plenty of manual labour in addition, together with evangelistic efforts of various kinds, form the rule of college life. We do not wonder that in some cases probationers do not remain, or that, as the report states, "The Institute acts as a sieve, straining out all who are not physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually strong men, fit for the arduous life of a missionary."

Yet there appears no overstraining; kindly consideration of human limitations enters into all the arrangements made, and cheerfulness and health would seem to be the constant companions of toil. The evangelistic work of the students is of a most varied and practical—we are thankful to see also successful—character. No fewer than twenty distinct Missions have been assisted by them in London districts during the year, beside independent efforts in connection with the Bible Carriage, tract distribution, and open-air preaching.

The Livingstone (Congo) Inland Mission furnishes a page of history at once stimulating and touching in the highest degree. It forms a record of self-denying and heroic effort worthy of a place second to none in the annals of missionary enterprise. The brethren employed in it have indeed proved themselves men who do not count life dear unto them, so that they might fulfil the ministry they have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God. In the face of sickness and death, hardship and imminent peril at every step, they have advanced with a courage and devotion truly apostolic. Not a few have succumbed to the peculiar dangers of their task; again and again have the hearts of our friends who direct the Mission been stricken by tidings of devoted brethren having fallen in the fight. Yet those who survive remain undaunted; with only redoubled energy and fearless faith they press forward to the front.

Twelve brethren and two sisters form the staff at present occupying the field. The principles of action laid down in the Report for the guidance of this important and specially difficult sphere of Mission effort, seem to us eminently wise, practical, and worthy of confidence. It is gratifying to read such words as these:—

Our stations between Mataddi and Manyanga, planted at intervals of thirty or forty miles, extend over 100 or 110 miles of a route traversed by no Europeans save ourselves at present. Our brethren have dwelt peaceably among the people for five years, and never once had any collision with them at any of the stations. The people are thoroughly friendly, trust and respect us, rely on our promises, entrust their children to our teaching and care, and understand our motives in going amongst them. Our missionaries have learned the language, and are training some of the lads for teachers. They are freely supplied with native produce by the people, who are also willing to act as carriers for them over the whole line.

Much is to be expected ultimately from all this, as one of the brethren writes: "We sow the seed and wait." The waiting for results on a large scale may be sometimes weary, but the harvest must be sure, and soon.

The work among the Bedaweens of Arabia, among the English in India, evangelising on the Ural Mountains of Russia, all come in for a share of notice, and excite feelings of joy and hope in the mind of the Christian reader.

Space would fail us to follow this delightful record through all its inviting pages; our readers will do well to obtain it for themselves, as they may through the publishers, Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton, or from Harley House, Bow, E. (price sixpence).

Just a word, in closing this notice, as to finances, the account of which is specially worthy of note. 2400 donations have been received during the year, making a total of £17,710, as against £16,359 the year before. This amount has been sent in sums varying from a few penny stamps to a thousand pounds; "some from aged pilgrims on the verge of eternity, and others from schoolboys and schoolgirls, and even little children." Mr. and Mrs. Guinness and their daughter gratuitously devote themselves to the directorate and superintendence of the work; they even pay for their residence in the Institute, while all arrangements are made with an evident regard to the stewardship for Christ the direction of the Mission involves.

We can but rejoice in what is being done in connection with this valuable branch of the Lord's work, and pray that among the other agencies employed, the East London Institute may continue to grow and abundantly prosper, to the glory of the dear Lord and Master it so devotedly serves.

A NEW EFFORT IN THE EAST END.

WE have received a communication from Rev. H. Burnside, Vicar Designate of the Church of St. Saviour's, Forest-gate, E., appealing for aid in the completion of the building. The church is to hold 1000 persons, and its cost will be £7000, of which £3000 is still required. The patronage is vested in Evangelical trustees; our one aim, says the writer, is the glory of God in the conversion of souls, and "to know nothing among the people save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified." A temporary iron church has been erected just over two years, and has already had to be enlarged. The Sunday-schools muster an average of over 350 children, and are on the constant increase. A goodly band of earnest Sunday-school teachers and district visitors is at work, besides a Scripture reader and mission woman. Mothers' meetings, cottage lectures, Bible classes, open-air preaching, temperance and missionary work, &c., are in full action.

The population in the district is growing with abnormal rapidity. But the class of residents is such, that it is utterly impossible for them to give much pecuniary aid in this project. The treasurer, Mr. Alfred Fowell Buxton, of 62, Threadneedle-street, London, E.C., will gladly acknowledge any contributions that friends of the work may send.

SHELTERING HOMES, LIVERPOOL.

DEAR SIR,—This winter has been a busy one with us and we have had much blessing upon our work, which has greatly prospered during the past twelve months. On my return from Canada last autumn, we opened a branch home for little girls, and this additional accommodation has enabled us to shelter about 140 children.

Last week I accompanied our sixteenth band (numbering sixty-eight boys) as far as Ireland, on their way to Canada, under the charge of their skilful teacher. There was many a one in that band whom I rejoiced to see safely on the way to the new land, where a purer, happier life would open for them. I had watched them with trembling many months, for fear of their bad and depraved relatives withdrawing them, and dragging them back into the sea of wickedness from which they had been rescued. Altogether, they are one of the most hopeful bands we have trained. We have the encouraging fact that 95 per cent. of those formerly placed out are doing well.

The following letter is one among many lately received from our young emigrants. It is from one of two lads deserted and left on the hands of their old grandmother; he has been out nine years:—

"Beloved Mother,—I have been uneasy that I did not get your answer to my letter with the two photographs. I want to tell you who they are photos of. It is my wife and I. I am in the boot business, and I can earn three pounds a week (British currency). I am so comfortable and happy. I am sending you in this letter a little sum of money, but in a little time you shall have more, for I hope to have you and Annie out in this country before long. The state of this country is prosperous and good. Wishing you a Happy New Year, I am, your affectionate son, "W. J. W."

I have also received a letter telling of two sisters comfortably married, inviting me to their homes, and telling in most touching terms their gratitude to God for good Christian husbands, who neither smoke nor drink. These girls were not only fast going to ruin themselves in Liverpool, but would have led to ruin many others.

I ask the prayers of your readers for the band of boys now upon the water, that God will bless them in the land whither they go, and also your readers' sympathy and practical help in the preparing of the band of girls to sail later in spring with me. Our addition at Girls' Home, of course, makes an additional running expense, and though it also enables us to shelter a larger number, increases our emigration expenses. As some of your readers kindly contribute to our funds, we shall be glad to forward them a report on application.

Yours, in the Master's service,
Louisa Birt.

"THE BRITISH HOME FOR INCURABLES."—His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury has become a Vice-President of this National and deserving Charity, the Annual Festival of which will be held on April 20, under the presidency of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge. A special appeal for help, urgently needed, is made. The offices are at 73, Cheapside, &c.

CHILDREN AND PEACE.—The Editor of the Sunday School Chronicle (of 56, Old Bailey, E.C.) remarks:—"We have observed an advertisement for a series of lively and interesting Peace tracts, suitable for circulation among juvenile readers. The offer of payment for them seems to be good, and it is possible that some of our readers may be interested in the subject, and be able to write some of them. Inquiries on the matter should be addressed to Mr. William Robinson, West Bank, Scarborough. It is of supreme importance that our children should be early taught to recognise the evil of war. Nothing will disarm the nations, and relieve them of the military burdens that now crush them, save the spread of a right 'public opinion' among the people as to the advantages of peace, the possibility of settling national disputes by arbitration, and the claims of that human brotherhood which the Christian religion glorifies."

PREACHING CHRIST IN A SPANISH CATHEDRAL.

A YOUNG English lady, who, with her father, is on visit to Spain, sends to relatives at home a most interesting account of the varied sights and experiences met with in that land of priestly misrule. We are permitted to extract the following description of an Easter service and sermon in the Roman Catholic cathedral at Barcelona. It will be as welcome and gratifying to our readers as it was to the writer. Our only regret is that she was unable to preserve full notes of the remarkable discourse which she so well reports in outline:—

"We went to the cathedral on Easter Sunday, intending afterwards to go to the English service, but curiously enough we were so impressed with what we saw and heard that we remained through the service. It had just begun when we went, and of course there was a great deal of ceremony—a long procession of bishops, priests, &c., round the church, and many extraordinary manœuvres, accompanied by exceedingly fine music and singing. When this had been going on for some time one of the priests mounted the pulpit, took off his hat to the people all round, and then began his discourse.

"You must imagine a very fine cathedral, with thousands of people kneeling on the floor, the ladies all in black mantillas. When the preacher began all stood up and for forty minutes stood motionless, listening as I think I never saw men listen. The preacher had a splendid voice, and I shall never forget the first Spanish sermon I heard. I understood a good deal, which surprised me. He began, in a low deliberate way, to speak to the people of their duty to consider Christ as the Way, the Truth, and the Life, on this morning of his Resurrection. Then came a description of the Resurrection, the influence it has had in the world, is having now in our lives, and is to have hereafter. Then came a description of the sins of the world, the awful nature of sin, the great need of repentance and confession.

"Lastly, he made an earnest appeal to the people—oh, so earnest—to come to Christ. He showed God's love to us, Christ's love to us, the joys of holy life, and the terrors of neglecting salvation; and from his own experience spoke as a minister sent by God to entreat them to "haber fé, fé, fé," (have faith, faith, faith). The men and women all around us were in tears. Papa said that merely from watching the man he was so moved that he is determined henceforth to preach the Gospel with more earnestness and fire, so as to touch people's hearts as well as their heads. Such a man as this priest must carry a blessing to the people, even if there are coverings that at times hide what is true. We came away feeling that we had indeed met with Christ, though as unexpectedly as the woman of Samaria, when she went to draw water at the well."

JUVENILE MISSIONARY BAND.—Mrs. Frank H. White's Report, which is just issued, shows that her "Band" is a true helper of Missions. We notice £33 of the receipts are sent to foreign lands.

SHANKLIN, ISLE OF WIGHT.—Miss Ruth Brryman conducted a fortnight's Mission here, closing Monday, April 2, with a farewell tea, when 340 sat down; after which a most profitable meeting was held, and Miss Hamilton, Blackgang, Miss Cotton, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, and others taking part. The crowded audience denoted the great appreciation in which this young evangelist is held. We cannot say how many have been brought to the Lord, but on Sunday evening thirty or more anxious inquirers were spoken to, and numbers each evening have yielded themselves to the Lord. It has been remarked there has never been such a move in Shanklin before. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Miss Cotton are continuing the meetings with much blessing, and had they but a suitable hall, many more could be reached. Shanklin is in need of a good Mission Hall, a wooden building would do; if any of the Lord's people should have it laid on their hearts to send means for one, it would be filled by souls who are thirsting for the water of life and hungering for the bread of God.

"HOLD THE FORT" IN ARMENIA.

INCIDENT IN CONNECTION WITH "SACRED SONGS AND SOLOS."

A COPY of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's volume of hymns lately reached one of the Turkish post-offices in Armenia to the address of an American missionary. Of late (writes our correspondent) the Imperial restriction on the importation of foreign literature, as well as on the printing press, have become more stringent than ever, so, as a matter of course, Moody and Sankey must pass under the eagle eye of Bukhsheesh Effendi, the Governor-General's factotum, who knows a few words of English. He was all the sharper on this occasion, because he had very recently passed by inadvertence a book consisting of letters from one of the New York papers, the author of which roundly denounced the misgovernment he had witnessed in Armenia during the campaign of 1877. And this volume was addressed to the same quarter as the present hymn-book. "Dogs!" exclaimed Bukhsheesh Effendi, as he turned over the leaves. "Hold the Fort! What fort? Treachery, as I live! May Satan seize them!" They were patriotic songs for the use of the Armenians, those hymns, and the musical notation proved it; and that particular song, "Hold the Fort," must have reference to an intended insurrection. So "Hold the Fort" was cut out by order of Bukhsheesh, and the expurgated volume sent to its destination.—Daily News.

OUR BLUE JACKETS.

DURING the past year the thoughts of many have been drawn towards our brave seamen and marines on the burning sands and under the burning sun of Egypt. I must thank the readers of THE CHRISTIAN for the books and text-cards so kindly sent; they were forwarded to Egypt, and with the "blue backs" did good work. I had a band of Gospel Temperance men on board almost every ship engaged in the war; and multitudes of letters have come to me with such bright testimonies! I could tell many incidents connected with the war: it was a testing time to many of our men; thank God they have come out "strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."

A great field of usefulness has been opened for the "blue backs" in the United States Navy. They are distributed officially on board every ship in that Navy, and I hear of much blessing among officers and men; very many have also signed the pledge after reading the letter.

I am glad to report increasing prosperity at our Sailors' Rests at home. Our Portsmouth Sailors' Rest has done so well that we are already crowded out—in our bar, our reading-rooms, and our dormitories. I am adding to the refreshment bar and reading-room, and hope to increase the dormitory accommodation as the funds come in. If any reader should feel inclined to become a subscriber to our Gospel Temperance work or Building Fund, I shall only be too glad to give any further information. The fact that kindred institutions are working successfully at Portsmouth, and that we have to turn away numbers, shows how the brave fellows are endeavouring to escape from the evil that is around them, and every true Christian will, I am sure, be willing to aid them.

BIBLE FLOWER MISSIONS.—Miss Macpherson's (Home of Industry) Report of the "Bible Flower Mission" for 1882 is before us. Those who have flowers in their gardens, or can gather wild ones, could not, we think, help sending some if they read this Report. We are sorry to notice that over £29 has been paid out of nearly £50 for "carriage of hampers," and Miss Macpherson has been obliged to make a donation of over £8 on the side of receipts.——The Metropolitan Tabernacle Bible Flower Mission's Report shows a distribution of 17,616 bunches of flowers among five or six different institutions in South-East London. The account of the year's work is well written.

A WOMEN'S HOME FOR WINNIPEG.

TOWARDS the end of February The Liverpool Courier published two letters from an English lady who recently went to Winnipeg. After giving a most entertaining account of the climate and other surroundings, she writes: "The growth of this town is really marvellous. Houses spring up on all sides like mushrooms, and another springtide of emigration is expected to set in soon. In fact, we hear that a large number of servants have already arrived at Montreal on their way to Winnipeg. Poor things! they little know what they are coming to! Here they land in a strange place, after a long and weary journey, with not a friend to help them, nor home of any kind to go to: merely those emigrant sheds which were put up in a hurry last spring, where dirt, discomfort, and overcrowding are the chief features; or some low hotel or boarding-house near the station, and few of these are fit places for respectable women. Now we, the women of Winnipeg, are most anxious to start a Home for these homeless women, where for a very moderate sum they may live decently and comfortably until suitable situations are found for them. A registry will be kept, and washing and plain sewing taken in, so that none need be idle, and after the first start the home may be self-supporting. A gentleman here has promised £1,000 on condition that we raise £250 without further appeal to the gentlemen, as money is very scarce in the city this winter. It is, however, not possible for us, comparatively few and with no independent means, to do this unless we have help from without; but we are so sure that if those at home only knew the temptations which beset these poor girls from the very outset they would willingly give us the needed help."

In a subsequent letter, dated February 20, 1883, extracts from which are sent to us by a friend, the same lady says: "The idea of starting a Home for women here has met with such hearty approval on all sides that the first public meeting on the subject was held to-day, and we have formed a committee of two ladies from each of the eight congregations in Winnipeg. As the need for the Home is even greater than we at first saw, and we have already 100 dollars in hand, we mean to take a room, or rooms, at once, and begin. One of the chief features of the Home is to be a large sitting-room where shop-girls and servants can spend their leisure time profitably and comfortably, and we can become personally acquainted with them, so that they may not feel as if no one cared what became of them. This has been the excuse for much of the evil that exists here."

Fuller information may be obtained from Mrs. Muir, 2, Royal-circus, Edinburgh, and Mrs. Sandeman, 35, Great King-street, Edinburgh, either of whom will be glad to receive contributions towards this most worthy object.

LIVERPOOL SHELTERING HOME.—Mrs. Birt's ninth annual Report contains interesting details of the good done by sheltering and caring for the orphan and fatherless children. The address is Mrs. Birt, Byrom-street, Liverpool.

THE MARYLEBONE MEDICAL MISSION is a boon to many, and is carried on, like that of Dr. Saunders, in conformity with the principles of the Word of God. Any help may be sent to Dr. Chambers, 43, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, London, W.

COW CROSS MISSION.—The seventeenth Report of this Mission, pictorially illustrated as usual, is issued. The headquarters are now at Gloucester Hall, Upper Gloucester-street, in the centre of Clerkenwell, and midway between the open-air preaching stations occupied by the Mission. The work includes the usual programme, viz., Sunday-school, Mothers'-meeting, Blue Ribbon Army, Band of Hope, Penny Bank, Children's Dinners, open-air and indoor preaching, &c. £286 were deposited in the Penny Bank by the poor people. The income for the year is £469, and a balance remains in hand of £90. Some letters are included showing good results, especially from the open-air preaching. The address of Mr. Wm. Catlin, the Superintendent, is now 17, Claremont-square, Pentonville, N.

MEDICAL MISSION IN ROME.

MR. JAMES WALL'S Medical Mission work among the poor in Rome is of a deeply interesting and practical kind, and is eminently successful, considering the special difficulties by which it is attended. It has now an average weekly attendance of from 250 to 300, a new hall having been erected for the purposes of the Mission, in a poor and densely populated district. During last year, 1096 cases received treatment, which means a far larger amount of direct Christian influence and Gospel effort than appears upon the surface, many being thus brought within its reach who otherwise would not come, and the way being open for not a few visits to families otherwise inaccessible.

More helpers are greatly needed, while if only means were forthcoming, extension could most advantageously be made. One most desirable direction for this presents itself in the fact that a shop adjoining the new Mission hall is at present used for the sale of wine. This Mr. Wall is anxious to obtain, and turn into a temperance café. We sincerely hope this may soon be within his reach, and commend him and his work, not only to the prayers, but also to the practical aid of those who have it in their power to help.

BIBLE STAND, CRYSTAL PALACE.

YOUR readers will no doubt rejoice with us in the fact that more than a quarter of a million of Gospels, in French, Dutch, and Flemish, have been delivered in Belgium by book post, to as many individuals residing in 2447 towns and villages during the last two years. We have still about 40,000 more nearly ready for Brussels and its environs; this will complete Belgium.

In the early part of March we forwarded 920 Gospels to Vienna by the same channel. These being the first lot sent, it is very satisfactory to know that they are faithfully delivered by the Viennese postal authorities.

The most convincing proof of this is the number returned, through the dead letter office, of persons having left, or gone without address, the average being about 5 per cent. This number refers to large cities, where the population is continually fluctuating; in smaller towns and villages where the residents are more stationary the returns are from 1 to 2 per cent. We are also daily sending fifty Gospels to Ireland. We have directories for Spain, Vienna, and Ireland, to which we could easily dispatch half a million or more of Gospels, had we the funds.

What greater joy can we have than to be able to say, as did the Lord Jesus, "I have given them thy Word." And what greater proof can there be that God will own and bless this work, than his own promises. "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Are not souls born of God by the incorruptible seed, and sanctified through the truth? Martin Luther said, "God does more by his Word alone than you and I, and all the world besides, by our united strength." Six pounds will post 1000 Gospels either to Ireland, Vienna, or Spain.—Yours, in the love of the Truth,

William Hawke.

THE FISHERS ON THE IRISH COAST.—Sir,—I hasten to thank the good friends who have so promptly sent various parcels of books, tracts, &c. In reply to questions I would say, that as this place is thirty miles from the nearest railway, it would be better to use the book post than the rail. Your readers will be glad to know that our services are fairly well attended, and we hope these will be the means of doing much good. Perhaps it may give more confidence to those who wish to help us when I say that the effort is quite unsectarian. The Rector presides over Church and Dissent in this matter.—Yours, &c., William T. Quigley, Commanding Coast Guard.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

WE have received the tenth annual report of this Association, from which we learn that nearly 9000 copies of the Word of God have been placed in as many hotel bedrooms. 137 libraries (aggregating about 12,000 volumes, and valued at £3000) have been set up in hotel commercial rooms since the work began.

The Beneficent Fund for relieving commercial travellers in distress through sickness, temporary loss of employment, or other misfortune, is doing Christ-like service. The members and donors are about 2000 as compared with 300 ten years ago. A special effort to raise £1000 towards more Bibles and libraries has not yet reached £400. This is owing to the sudden death of the late secretary.

The work of the Association is a good, solid, unostentatious one, and well worthy of the prayers and support of the Lord's people. Full information will be supplied by the Secretary, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

MISSION TO ZULU KAFFIRS.

ROCK FOUNTAIN, IXOPO, NATAL.

LETTERS continue to be received from Mr. and Mrs. Elbert S. Clarke, with favourable accounts of the progress of their Mission. Their religious services, and their school for Kaffir children, are steadily maintained. They have a Christian native teacher, James Sodibo, a truly reliable and genial character. He not only gives satisfaction as a schoolmaster, but during the holidays he is very helpful in the missionary journeys which Mr. Clarke takes among the native population. Mr. Clarke has now in view the employment of another Christian Kaffir, George Utzebar, who had some years of training under Mr. H. Grattan Guinness, and who has since been pursuing his studies at Lovedale College in South Africa. His father's kraal is not far distant from Rock Fountain, and it is hoped that his efforts to introduce the Gospel among his own people will be attended by a signal blessing.

Mr. Clarke also proposes the establishment of two new Mission stations, in similar localities, and each about ten miles from Rock Fountain. They are designed for the benefit of an increasing Kaffir population who are flocking into that part of the country, to occupy a district assigned to them by the British Government, in lieu of territory that they have given up to European settlers. In these localities are also a considerable number of white settlers, who are entirely destitute of religious teaching, or opportunities for public worship. Preparations for one of these out-stations are already far advanced. Mr. Clarke has invited Mr. George Angus to go out and take charge of it. Mr. Angus was in Zululand at the time of the war with Cetewayo, and he then became intensely interested in the natives, and had a great desire to take to them the message of the Gospel. He was afterwards requested to go to the Congo, as a member of the Livingstone Mission. He remained there more than a year in charge of the steamer sent out by that Mission to navigate the lower Congo. His health was completely broken down by the terrible climate, and he was compelled to return.

He is now very much restored, and has, during the winter, visited many parts of England, giving lectures on Mission work on the Congo and among the Zulus, the interest of which has been greatly enhanced by numerous paintings and curiosities, illustrating life in Africa. He will continue to deliver his lectures on Africa in places where there is an opening for them during the summer. Those who would like to have a visit from him should communicate with Mrs. Samuel Fothergill, Claremont, Darlington.

MR. GEORGE BLAIKLOCK has recently visited Penybout, Llandrindod, Dolaw, and Llangunllo, and held Blue Ribbon meetings, which were very successful. This week he is conducting a second Mission at Knighton.

FROM THE CANADIAN BACKWOODS.

IT may interest you to know that The Christian reaches us regularly through the kindness of a friend. Its pages are always fresh and welcome, and, after perusal, the little paper is scattered to lonely settlers—the lumberman's shanty and the railway navvy's camp.

During the past winter I have preached to large gangs of men in shanty and camp, and have received a kindly welcome. These men are gathered from many parts and are of various sects—Protestants, English and French Catholics, and some hoisting no religious or denominational flag at all. Yet when gathered for worship they are orderly and respectful, and after reading the Word they all respond to the invitation, "Please stand up for prayer."

During my seven years' residence in Canada I have had more Roman Catholic hearers than I had during thirty years of public service in England.

The winter, of course, is the great harvest time for the lumberman in the woods. The shanties are temporary homes built for the men for the winter's work. A shanty is generally some sixty feet long by thirty-five to forty broad. Kept warm by large stoves, and fairly lighted with windows, double rows of bunks afford sleeping-berths for tired men. The foreman and cook have a corner reserved for themselves. These are astir at 3.30 a.m., then the teamsters are called to go out to their horses to feed and harness them, and return to breakfast at five. Then the teamsters go out and hook on to their loads of logs prepared the night before—and away under the stars they are often found two or three miles away, before the peep of day. Sometimes they have a draw of six or seven miles on the snow and ice to the creek, where they deposit their load on the ice, waiting for the moving of the waters in the spring. The ice on one of these creeks sometimes contains 100,000 logs, the cut of one winter! In the shanty the choppers are grinding and whetting up their axes, the foreman all alert for the first streak of dawn; when it peeps, you hear his voice, "All abroad!" and out streams the gang for the woods.

Sermons need to be short and to the point. On a Sabbath you have more leisure, but on a week-night evening you must take care not to preach them to sleep. You must adapt yourself to the situation. In one of these services the cook was the one I had to negociate with. He wanted me to proceed as he and his mate were washing up the tin cups and plates. I proposed to wait till the clatter was over. Then "other preparations for the morning had to be made." So I delivered my Master's message with my back to a large cook stove, and the only noise was that of the cook peeling potatoes for the morning meal.

Within the last few years immense deposits of iron have been discovered in these parts, and just now a railway is under construction to tap some of these ore beds. Some 800 men are now employed making the road, and as opportunity offers I seek to reach these needy ones with the offer of the bread of life. May I ask your readers to pray that that bread may not be offered in vain?—Yours in the Gospel.

The Ridge, North Hastings, Ontario, March 12. H. T. Miller.

HADLEIGH, SUFFOLK.—Crowded meetings were held here for ten days last month by members of the Cambridge Alliance. 829 took the blue, of which 642 were new pledges.

KIRKBY STEPHEN.—A Gospel Temperance Mission is proceeding here, conducted by Rev. A. Scott, of Lancaster, and other speakers. The Christians in the town are united, and there is great good resulting from the work. J. W. B.

THE LATE MR. GARFORD.—We are desired to correct a misstatement in the obituary sketch of this young American evangelist, that recently appeared in these columns. It was stated in the American paper from which we quoted that some of his relatives in this country were connected with the brewing trade: this we are informed is not the case.

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

LARGE and enthusiastic meetings were held on March 26, Bank-holiday, at Kilburn Hall. The Anniversary of took place on the evening of the 3rd inst., and Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, the Director of the Mission, referred to the opening of the Hall twelve months ago with much encouragement. The prayers offered on that occasion had been graciously answered in the conversion of not a few souls, some of whom had been scattered and others had found a home in neighbouring Churches, while some remained there to carry on the work. The lease of the hall expires in December; and, notwithstanding that the building (originally an Episcopalian Church, though a deserted one) is now the scene of a comparatively prosperous work of God, with good attendance on the wettest nights, yet the land has been bought from under them by the vicar of the parish. There had been difficulty in getting another site, but one had been at last offered, and they must look to the Lord for guidance as to the future.

Mr. J. G. McVicker quoted Ezra v. 11 and Acts xi. 20, 21, as indicative of the character of the work. It seemed a simple thing to believe a message; but the things the Gospel deals with are utterly outside the natural man, and unless the invisible hand of the Lord be working with and through our words, they will not save the people. "The disciples at Antioch turned" —not to the preachers, to a building, to a new sect, or to a new form of worship, but to the Lord, and this brought them together. It needs that eyes be given to "See the grace of God." After twenty-three years of service for the Lord, the speaker would re-echo Barnabas's exhortation that with purpose of heart the converts should cleave to the Lord, and so much the more in that the lease of their lives might not run to December.

Mr. John E. Jack remarked that "hard" places were grand places to work in, inasmuch as God's power is made perfect in weakness. Many promises, such as Malachi iii. 10, were conditional, but there are no bolts and bars on God's side of the windows of heaven; and, if we pull them away from our side, the blessing is so weighty it shall break down those windows. Body, soul, and spirit laid on the altar, and self burned up, then shall God's work prosper. Whether we see fruit from our labours or not, God is blessing his word; and our faithfulness, not our success, is valuable in his eyes. Let us observe the conditions of blessing, and there shall not be room enough for it in us; it shall flow out to others.

After a few words of cheer from Mr. F. E. Paynter, Dr. McKilliam read part of Exodus xxxvi. In the work of the Tabernacle, the giving, the working, the fitness of men—all was of the Lord. The name Bezaleel means Under the shadow of God; and unless workers abide under the shadow of the Almighty, the wisdom and understanding that can come alone from the Lord is lacking, and the heart is not in the work. The secret place of the Most High referred to in Psalm xc. 1 is surely Christ Himself. Whether successful or tried in our work, we are all secure in Christ. The men engaged on the Temple were all working with the king, for his work. If we regard Christian work as merely ours, jealousy and sectarianism begin. Though engaged twenty years in Christian work, only for the past ten years had he known what it was to do it as the King's work and under his shadow, and recognised that the Lord must take care of his own work and the poor servant as well. It is one thing working with the brain and another thing working with the heart. If we minister human energy, tradition, brain power, other men's sentiments and ideas—all will fall flat and useless, because nothing but the Spirit gives life. The speaker closed by a most interesting detailed description of his experiences in the Lord's work at Blackheath, full of instances of the way in which God had honoured the mighty power of prayer as wielded by his servants. He incidentally referred to a copy of Mr. Hurditch's new magazine, Footsteps of Truth, being sent to a convert in America, which resulted in an eager application for more. The speaker expressed the conviction that infidelity would yet feel the power of the spiritual praying Church before she was taken up from the earth.

Mr. Henry Morley said that notwithstanding the necessity for prayer, there was danger of neglecting to give praise to God. The past demanded praise, the future called for watchfulness.

Mr. Tom Jones had opened the meeting with prayer, and Mr. E. Ives closed it in like manner.

The next gathering of a special character will be held at Kilburn Hall (D.V.) on Whit-Monday, May 14, and is looked forward to with much interest.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

THIS now widely extended movement was the theme of two interesting gatherings held on Monday last in Exeter (Lower) Hall, to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the work. At the afternoon meeting, presided over by Rev. Geo. Savage, of St. Mary's, Isleworth, the Rev. J. Harford Battersby spoke of the benefit he had witnessed arising from the Union at Keswick.

The Chairman said this Children's Scripture Union was but one of several outcomes of the work of the Children's Special Service Mission, established some sixteen years ago in Mildmay, and which had so spread that it was difficult to measure its extent. With regard to the Scripture Union, he was rejoiced to find that its ramifications now extended to so many parts of the world, and that there were in Great Britain alone some 1200 local secretaries engaged in overlooking the children's reading, and in very many cases holding regular meetings for them. He noticed that the Union was specially adapted for children, the portions selected being short and easily read, and conducted on a plan of consecutive reading, so as to go through the whole Word of God, which ought to be treated as a letter from a dear friend, and read from beginning to end, and not here and there.

Mr. E. T. M. Dennes followed with some hints as to how to conduct Scripture Union meetings, and gave the outline of an excellent object lesson on "an inkpot."

The Rev. W. S. Stanton thought the fact of over 120,000 children being brought into daily contact with the word of God was one of deep solemnity, and we ought to pray earnestly every day that God would make it a means of quickening souls into life. We need to press upon the children the importance of making time for reading and thought over their portions, and seeking to find something therein for themselves. We must not forget that the Bible is for reproof, correction, instruction in righteousness, and the members should be taught to look for the Lord Jesus in every portion.

Mr. T. B. Bishop then gave some particulars of the extension of the Union. He stated that while 120,000 was the number of members mentioned on this year's card, it was really now far larger. More than 150,000 cards, in English alone, for 1883, had been issued, and allowing for a number in the hands of the secretaries, we were within the mark, considering the number of foreign branches, in reckoning at least 170,000 members in the whole world. The work had been most warmly taken up by many friends in France, Germany, Italy, Sweden, Holland, Bohemia, and also in India, China, Australia, and the United States. The German branch alone numbered 10,000 members, while there were branches in about ninety towns in France, and from many of these most cheering news of the usefulness of the work had been received.

In the evening George Williams, Esq., presided, and Mr. Bishop gave, from a pile of letters, a number of extracts, telling what blessing had resulted from the daily reading of God's own Word, and how the work had been entered into in various foreign countries. Amongst others, workers in Cambrai, Chaux de Fonds, Barcelona, Lisbon, Rome, Caltonisetta, Torre Pellice, San Paulo (Brazil), Beyrout, Paramatta (New South Wales), bore their testimony to the usefulness of the work of the Children's Scripture Union, while numbers were now reading in various towns of the Holy Land; and the latest addition to its ranks was Madagascar, where the missionaries have printed 4000 cards, and hope soon to enrol a good number of daily readers in this Union, amongst the 100,000 children they have under instruction.

The Chairman said he felt the Christian public, and Christian parents especially, were much indebted to the Committee and the 1200 local secretaries who were so heartily working in this great effort to spread God's Word. There was deep cause for thankfulness, as they looked back and saw how from a membership of 7000 at its commencement, four years ago, this Union could now count at least 170,000 members. Those connected with the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations over our land would, he felt, look with deepened interest on this movement, as they saw in it a means of adding to their ranks in the future a number of earnest members and workers from among these young Bible readers. He saw that the card was now translated into fifteen different foreign languages, and he trusted this was a pledge of the growth of the Union, till the whole 240 languages in which the Bible is now printed should have their cards of membership, helping to the regular and systematic reading of the Word.

Mr. J. W. Jordan gave an address upon the study of the Word of God, and showed how it was a quickening word, a sustaining word, a guiding word, a preserving word, a sanctifying word, the complete word, and the eternal word.

Mr. Geo. Banaster spoke of the importance of getting hold of the boys, and how they in their turn would become centres of blessing to others in their schools. He gave some deeply interesting incidents, showing how lads in some of the public schools and colleges had been laid hold of and had become earnest workers for Christ. He was endeavouring to start a yacht for the purpose of visiting several of the watering-places round the coast during the summer time, so as to hold seaside services for the children on the beach, and he asked their prayers for the Olive Branch, which he felt sure would be an attraction to the boys wherever it went.

Mr. Edwin Arrowsmith gave some stirring words on the pressing need for a quickened energy in this all-important question, how to save the children; and drew some thrilling pictures of the ignorance of spiritual truth, and of the apathy of many professedly religious. He, too, pressed the importance of looking after the boys, and had found the value, during a Mission, of holding services specially for them.

Mr. McClure gave interesting particulars of an institute he had commenced at Greenwich for boys of the lower class. It was open every evening, and the Scripture Union portion was always read at the close. There had been several encouraging cases of conversion.

Rev. W. S. Standen suggested the desirability of enlisting the interest of day-school teachers in the work of the Children's Scripture Union. Then he would say, try to get some more local secretaries. He wanted to see this work spread till there should not be a village in the country where there was not an earnest worker among the children.

Mr. F. Aldous said that he was seeking to solve the problem of how to interest Christian children in Christian work, and described the varied agencies in connection with his Sunday afternoon service for better-class children at Angell Town Institute, Brixton. Amongst other agencies there is a "Waste Not" Society, which supports four orphan children, and a benevolent box for providing teas for poor children; while some children read to the sick and aged in almshouses; and there is a Sunday-school taught by the elder young people attending the service. Mr. Aldous gave a description of the way in which he conducted the regular afternoon service, at which about 800 children attend. The branch of the Scripture Union in connection with the service numbers 1200 members, including many who have removed to distant parts of the country, but who still love to keep up their connection with it. After some hearty words of congratulation from the Chairman, the meeting was brought to a close.

HOW A CHRISTIAN MEETS DEATH.

CAPTAIN JAHEEL BRENTON CAREY.

IT does not seem right to withhold from our fellow-believers the strengthening and comforting testimony of a child of God's last moments after four years of suffering in Christ's school of discipline; of trials borne bravely by Almighty help and endured patiently through Almighty grace. Capt. Carey was in perfect health on February 9, when his last bright cheerful letter was dated, taking down "time expired men" to Bombay. On the 16th he returned to Karachi, struck evidently for death, and grew rapidly worse. When his faithful wife told him that he was probably about to be taken, and asked if he were "afraid of death," he answered instantly, "Afraid! no! it's going home!" And a beautiful smile lit his face, as she mentioned meeting his Saviour and his lost little boy. She asked if she should pray for his recovery. He said, "No—pray for easy moments before I go." An hour after, with but one moment's struggle, his wearied spirit departed to perfect rest and joy, leaving those who best loved him to "sorrow not as those who have no hope."

RICHARD WEAVER IN EDINBURGH.

MR. WEAVER'S meetings have been increasing in interest week by week. Last Saturday he paid a visit to Carrubber's Close Mission, and addressed a crowded audience, when many found blessing.

In the Drill Hall, on the Sabbath, he spoke twice. In the evening he preached from Isaiah xxxv. 5, to several thousands of people. Many were in tears as he spoke of God's wondrous love. The after-meeting was a truly blessed one, while the inquiry-room was filled with the anxious, asking, "What must I do to be saved?" A lad, some fourteen years old, after he had seen the Saviour, cried out, with glistening eyes, "Oh, let me run and fetch my sister!" he was so overjoyed. Men and women praised the Lord for removing their burdens, and a great number went away rejoicing and glad.

Three United Presbyterian Churches had desired Mr. Weaver's services, but he commenced his fourth week here in Brighton-street Church, as it had been previously engaged. On Monday many professed to find peace. One man, of middle age, exclaimed while Mr. Weaver was speaking, "I see it! I see it! I see it!" A woman, whose husband had been converted a year ago, and who had never ceased praying for her, professed to find the Saviour. A man who had put in a long petition, stating that he had been searching for Christ for fifteen years, and asking Mr. Weaver to pray for him, came up the next night, with a happy face, and said, "The Lord has pardoned me." An old woman, upwards of sixty years of age, who was sober, but had been partaking of liquor, was spoken to by a sister in the meeting, who showed her two verses, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven," and "God is love." The poor woman began crying as the love of God for sinners was revealed. "Have you never lost a child whom you loved?" asked the sister For reply the old woman, trembling, and with tears streaming down her face, took from her pocket a small parcel. After taking off various wrappings, there was displayed a Sabbath-school ticket, with the words, "God is love." "My child's dead and gone to glory," the poor woman replied, "and that was what she gave me when dying." Before the meeting was over she professed to find the Saviour she had despised so long.

We have only mentioned a few cases. A great amount of work has been done, and the amount of good to souls has far exceeded the expectations of those who asked Mr. Weaver to Edinburgh. Blessing has been largely poured out, and hundreds of prayers have been answered.

STRANGERS' REST, 163, ST. GEORGE-ST.

WORKERS' MONTHLY MEETING.

IN addition to the many proofs we have of the favour of God in this blessed work for Him, is his manifested presence at our monthly gatherings. The utter absence of all conventionalism, the oneness of spirit, the desire to glorify God, expressed both in speaking and in prayer, are very apparent. Last Thursday night's meeting was no exception to this.

After a quiet waiting time at the Mercy-seat, specially remembering Germany and its needs, asking God to use his servant going forth on the morrow, Dr. Ziemann read Isaiah liii. 10, saying with what power the words "The pleasure of Jehovah shall prosper in his hands" had come to his own heart. It would be useless to attempt to describe how the Spirit of God touched our hearts through the words given to our brother. Suffice to say, the God-side of Christian work was brought home most forcibly.

Jehovah's pleasure: He was longing to bless poor lost ones. His love, past telling, was manifested in that He spared not his own Son. It was to be in sympathy with Him, to get into harmony with God's thoughts and will, to know something of his tenderness and love for a lost, ruined world. Then we, too, should see Jehovah's work prospering, and should share his pleasure. Dr. Ziemann reminded us that each time he had left for Germany in his three recent visits he had gone direct from the "Strangers' Rest," where prayer and praise were continually ascending to God for his work there. He greatly encouraged us, and confirmed our faith in God's power and goodness by giving many instances of God's special guidance. In one case the price of a hired hall was to be raised considerably, but God overruled it, that the authorities of the place offered a larger hall, and that free of cost.

Cases of parties postponed, concerts and amusements forsaken, and halls crowded to hear the message of God's love to sinners; individual cases of those in high life forsaking all for Christ, gladdened our hearts. We were asked to pray especially for the pastors of Germany, who in many instances were very earnest, and really desirous to extend the kingdom of God.

Dr. Ziemann has fifty-two invitations, thirty of these from pastors, to visit the different towns and tell the "Old, old story." We then joined in singing "Sowing seeds of kindness," remembering it was "Sowing for the Master," and with further waiting upon God our happy meeting came to a close; we bid our brother God's blessing on leaving and shall look with joyful expectation for the answers to our prayers. One striking fact to be remembered is that Dr. Ziemann goes forth simply with the Word of God and in the power of the Holy Ghost, and neither needs or desires any other attraction. We who have laboured over five years at the "Strangers' Rest," can testify to the power of God's Word, relying upon the Holy Spirit to make it a living word.

DREADFUL FIRE IN RUSSIA.—Mr. Aaron Sternberg, 16, Poplar-grove, West Kensington Park, W., sends us the following distressing letter from his sister: "Jerusalem after its destruction could not have looked worse than Paneves looks to-day. A terrible fire broke out at one o'clock last night, two hundred houses were burnt down one after another, there being no proper fire-engines to extinguish the flames. The poor Jews occupying the little shops, and two hundred and sixty families, are lying about in the fields homeless and destitute, and it is so cold; they saved themselves with hardly anything on their backs. The poor things have been saving up for months, so as to welcome the great Feast of Passover, and now they are in such a state of misery. If only kind English hearts could witness this appalling sight they would be touched to the very quick. They are now collecting to construct sheds for them. In the next street, two little children were burnt to ashes in their cradles. I shall never forget the terrible sight, it was heart-rending." We shall be happy to receive any contributions for this object.

THE PARADOX OF GRACE.

WHEN the body, racked and worn,
Droops at eve and aches at morn,
Yet with daily strength endued,
Soul and spirit rise renewed,—
Let me cry, with truthful tongue,
"When I'm weak, then am I strong."

If, as hours slowly drag,
Powers droop, and senses flag,
Dews of Heaven cool my brow,
Comfort comes I know not how,—
Can I find a fitter song,
"When I'm weak then am I strong."

When a hundred foes surround,
Sins assault, and woes abound,
On my Saviour's arms I fall,—
Swift He bears me out of all;
Trusting souls have found it long,
"When I'm weak, then am I strong."

When temptation's swelling force
Almost turns the vessel's course,
Timely grace assists my need,
On I haste with added speed,
Louder, sweeter, swells the song,
"When I'm weak, then am I strong."

When my prayers refuse to flow,
Dead my heart, my comfort low,
Jesus' prayers an answer win,
While the Spirit groans within;
Never can the cry be wrong,
"When I'm weak, then am I strong."

"IN EVERLASTING REMEMBRANCE."

THERE has lately passed away to her home above one whose beautiful Christian character and earnest labours of love have left a sweet and lasting remembrance, not only in the hearts of her bereaved family but among a large circle of friends. This lady, Mrs. R. E. Turner, was best known, as to active work for God, in the poorer parts of Westminster, adjoining as they did her home in St. George's-square. There she undertook, in fellowship with a devoted Christian friend, the late Hon. Mrs. Lefroy, the charge of one of the ragged-schools instituted by the late Miss Howell, and carried on this work with unwearied interest till the school premises were taken down. Out of this school grew an Industrial Home for destitute girls, afterwards removed to its present quarters in Oakley-street, Chelsea.

Mrs. Turner's constant, self-denying, personal visitation among the poor was a means of true blessing to many, and deep were the regrets of her humble friends when failing strength obliged her to give up such work. She was gifted with a rare brightness and sweetness of appearance and manner, which, while making her attractive in every society, in itself brought cheer and comfort to the homes of poverty and sorrow.

And no less was she loved and valued by friends in her own rank of life, those especially who, united with her as fellow-workers, enjoyed the benefit of her warm sympathy, her fervent spirit, her vigorous mind. On the Ladies' Committee of the Foreign Evangelisation Society, the Bible Society, the Young Women's Home at Manor Hall, Hammersmith, her aid was greatly prized, and it usually devolved on her to open the committee meetings with prayer.

THE McALL MISSION.—This week the Rev. R. W. McAll, of Paris, and Mr. Newell, an American gentleman who has succeeded the lamented Mr. Dodds as his helper, have been holding a series of meetings in London, and giving most interesting accounts of the work in France. We hope to give a more detailed account in our next.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

RYDE.

A MISSION here, conducted by Rev. James Weller, was recently brought to a most successful conclusion. The week evening congregations were large; at the thanksgiving service the Church was crowded.

BUSHY HALL, VILLIERS-ROAD.

The gathering at Bushy Hall was greatly gratified by receiving a visit on Tuesday, April 3, from Mr. Denham Smith; the hall was very well filled by a most attentive and earnest audience, and many expressed themselves as greatly helped by the clear scriptural knowledge they had received from his address.

DUFFIELD, DERBYSHIRE.

Early this year a meeting was convened by circular, of Christians of each of the four denominations who have places of worship in this place. The Duffield Christian Union was formed, and one of its first steps was to invite the Evangelisation Society of London to send down an earnest preacher of the Gospel. Mr. George Gillingham, of that Society, has conducted a five weeks' series of meetings, and from the first the interest has grown; the wave of blessing has spread, and a glorious harvest of precious souls gathered for Christ. Over 130 have professed to yield themselves to the Saviour. In some households whole families have now experienced a change of heart. The village has been moved mightily by the passing by of Jesus of Nazareth. On Monday, April 2, Mr. Gillingham bade a crowded meeting of friends and converts farewell, a number of whom promised to endeavour to meet him in heaven. The Duffield Christian Union are caring for the future welfare of those recently brought to the Lord. Several meetings each week have been already arranged, and it is trusted they will prove a source of strength and grace to those who have just entered upon Zion's ways.

G. W.

REV. F. P. HAMMOND IN BERMUDA.

As we intimated some weeks since, Mr. Hammond, with his wife and three friends, has paid a visit to Bermuda, a lovely island, about 700 miles S.E. of New York, and a famous resort of seekers after health and pleasure. Mr. Hammond went there not for pleasure but for labour for the Master, at the invitation of some of the pastors of Hamilton. Union meetings have been held in five different parts of the island, and over 700 have given in their names as professing conversion. The meetings were continued in most of these places after Mr. Hammond's return to Brooklyn.

A pastor of a Presbyterian Church writes to the New York Observer as follows: "Our people had become so accustomed to the ordinary routine of religious services that they were somewhat surprised at the novel methods used in Mr. Hammond's meetings. They were especially shocked at the idea of an inquiry-meeting. Now there is little opposition, and we find a difficulty in speaking to all who remain, anxiously asking what they must do to be saved. God has blessed the instrumentality used, and many have been born again. About 700 persons, gathered from the different places where meetings have been held, profess to have been converted. A great blessing has been poured out upon those who have long been in the service of the Lord; they have received a new baptism of the Spirit. To-day we take farewell of our brethren from abroad, but we intend to continue the special services, as we believe the work has only begun."

CONFERENCE HALL, MILDMAY PARK, N.

The Lord is still giving blessing here with the ministrations of our brother, George Needham. Many of the saints have been refreshed through the Thursday afternoon Bible readings and the Sunday morning meetings for Christian workers. These are continued throughout this month. In the nightly Gospel services, too, which are conducted with much wisdom, precious souls have entered into light and liberty. The goodly gatherings of railway men last Wednesday and Friday evenings swelled our numbers; and amongst these men quite a number manifested anxiety and some found rest. Many more had already joined themselves to the people of God.

We desire to see larger meetings in the remaining weeks of April, and invite the co-operation of the Christians of North London in bringing the careless to listen to a clear, free, and full Gospel.

J. E. M.

BRYNMAWR.

Twelve years ago, Mr. Rodway, of Stroud, held Gospel services in the English Congregational Church of this town. The Word of God was blessed to many souls; seventy-four persons professed faith in Christ. Fifty-one of these joined the Congregational Church, and it is pleasing to know that many of them continue unto this day, while others who have emigrated to America and Australia are telling the old, old story of redeeming love in those lands.

From the week of prayer, held in the beginning of this year, it became manifest that the Holy Spirit was striving with the people, and one after another came over on the Lord's side. As this good work has continued, Mr. Rodway has again visited us, and conducted six days' special services with most blessed results. Thirty-two persons have been led to seek the Saviour. The good work still goes on.

D. Daw, Pastor.

Rev. W. H. Aitken, April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.

Mr. T. E. Murphy, April 8 to 22, Belfast; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.

Mr. Francis Murphy, April 22 to May 22, chief towns of Norfolk; May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.

Mr. Henry Thorne, April 13 to 15, Lincoln; April 18, Bury; April 21 to 30, Macclesfield.

Children's Special Service Mission.—Mr. Banaster at Thetford, April 7 to 12; at Southsea, from April 17; Mr. E. Arrowsmith at St. Matthew's Schools, Brixton, April 16 to 20 at 7 p.m. Mr. Spiers now at Brixham, South Devon.

Major and Mrs. Evered Poole commence a Mission in the Drill Hall, Kingston-on-Thames, on April 13, for seventeen days. Every arrangement is being made by the Local Committee to ensure its success, and a daily prayer-meeting is held from 4 to 5 p.m., for God's blessing on the work. Mrs. Evered Poole will speak in Exeter Hall in the afternoon of April 26. On the 1st of May they commence a Mission at Frome.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

BELGIUM.

ON many sides sympathy with the disciples of the Gospel is to be remarked amongst the Roman Catholic population. It is particularly shown by the readiness with which the people go to hear the Gospel preached in the burying grounds, where it constantly happens that from 500 to 1000 hearers press round the open grave to listen to the pastor.

A PEACE UNION

Exists at Osnabruck, Hanover. Its object is to oppose the embarking in lawsuits, and its members undertake to engage in no suit until the arbitrators of the society have endeavoured to obtain an amicable settlement. The Union last year numbered 684 members, and, out of twenty-five cases submitted to it, twenty-three were peaceably arranged.

HAUTES ALPES, FRANCE.

Pastor Remond writes that an important movement towards the Protestant Reformed faith is now progressing at Montmorin, a hitherto Roman Catholic Commune. He purposes visiting the place to establish evangelistic preaching, and, if possible, arrange for the settlement of a regular pastor. He asks for the prayers of Christian friends in this country.

BASLE.

The religious movement reported some weeks ago still continues. On Sunday afternoons the great hall of the Vereinshaus continues to be filled with men and women, who listen attentively to various Gospel addresses, and join with much spirit in the singing of lively hymns. Formerly the presence of men at an afternoon service was a most exceptional rarity; here they form a respectable proportion of the audience, the great majority of whom are not drawn from other ordinary congregations, but a new flock collected from the indifferent masses, who are being visited in their homes, and instructed more thoroughly in the Word of God in smaller gatherings.

La Tempérance is the title of a new monthly paper, the organ of the Swiss Temperance Society.

PARIS.

The Paris committee of the Mission Intérieure held its general assembly on March 13. The meeting was large and sympathetic, and the proceedings lasted up till half-past ten p.m. The object of the Mission Intérieure is "the awakening of the Church in view of the evangelisation of the masses." The expenses have risen to 30,000 francs, while the receipts are 1200 francs behindhand. Both the encouragements and the difficulties of the situation were presented in very interesting addresses by various speakers, and a collection at the meeting produced 144 francs.

FRANCE.

Temperance coffee-houses have been established with very encouraging results at Barnave and Poyols (Drôme), in connection with the Protestant Mission there.

In Lorraine and Champagne very great facilities exist for evangelistic work. At N., a small town near the German frontier, with but twenty to thirty Protestants, the Mayor has placed the Salle de Justice de Paix at the disposal of Mons. Hocart, an evangelist sent out by the French Methodist body. Here a Gospel address on "True Christianity" was listened to with great attention by 200 persons. At Saint Dizier (Haute-Marne) the same address was repeated to an audience of several hundreds, chiefly men, in the theatre. Here also the authorities showed the greatest kindness and courtesy. We look for great spiritual results.

The expenditure in connection with Mr. McAll's Mission in France amounts to the sum of £1000 per month. The Saint Honoré salle has been enlarged, and the rent, £400, is provided almost entirely by friends in Philadelphia. Mons. Saillens sends enthusiastic accounts of his reception in America.

SOCIETÉ EVANGÉLIQUE DE FRANCE.

Extracts from the reports of agents of this Society, in various Departments, show that an encouraging work is going on amid the deepest spiritual need and superstition. In the Department Creuse, a man who had decided to abjure the Roman profession and become a Protestant, stopped, pen in hand, to declare that, if Protestantism was "a religion," he would have nothing to do with it. He was confounding religion with superstition, a mistake which was soon rectified. At another place, in Corrèze, at a catechism class, held by the evangelist, a young girl of 17, daughter of a bourgeois family, stated, in reply to a question, that Nazareth was the son of Jesus (!). Everywhere the meetings are crowded, and doors are opening in fresh places, which, however, cannot be occupied for want of funds.

There has been a religious awakening in the Canton de Berne, owing to the indefatigable labours of the missionary, Mons. Schrenck, whose efforts are everywhere crowned with marvellous success. It was in consequence of a visit to England—"the most delightful time in his life," he says—that M. Schrenck felt the need of a more satisfactory conclusion to his meetings, and to meet this need, his preaching is now always followed by after-meetings and private conversations. He has worked alone, without help from the pastors, and in independent buildings, not places of worship. As a result, "believers have been strengthened, the lukewarm fired with a new zeal, and the newly awakened may probably be counted by hundreds. Other evangelists have received a new stimulus; the influence has passed like a breath of life over the greater number of our meetings." One, for forty years a member of the Société Evangélique, says he has never seen anything to compare with it. There is no trace of excitement or fanaticism.

MR. F. MURPHY IN MANCHESTER.

THE success which has attended the special Gospel Temperance Mission conducted nightly during the past week by Mr. Francis Murphy, at the Circus in Chepstow-street, affords abundant evidence of the increasing popularity of Temperance principles. Each evening the building has been crowded with sympathisers, largely consisting of men and women, and general enthusiasm in the cause has been manifested. Mr. Murphy's addresses have naturally formed the chief attraction during the week. The homely language employed and the genuine pathos imparted to certain personal reminiscences suffice to engage every mind, and after witnessing one of these gatherings it would be difficult to mention any other public assembly where speaker and audience are bound by a closer tie.

It is claimed for the present Mission that on no previous occasion have more satisfactory results been obtained. From its opening on Sunday down to Thursday night, 2144 pledges of total abstinence from intoxicating drink had been signed, 3458 "blue ribbons" had been issued, and 1920 "thorough-going" ribbons—a pledge against indulgence in drink and tobacco—given out to earnest converts. It is proposed to continue the meetings nightly until Sunday the 15th inst., and confident hopes are entertained that when the Mission is over ten thousand fresh adherents to Temperance will have been won through its agency.—Manchester Guardian.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For our Conference at Weston-super-Mare last week, for the deepening of the spiritual life. The Lord has done very great things for us whereof we rejoice. A mighty wave of blessing has passed over us. With all our hearts we praise the Lord.——For much blessing at Brynmawr and Tredegard the last two weeks. ——For much blessing upon a three weeks' Mission held by Mr. G. Andrews, of the Evangelisation Society at Langley, near Guildford.——That God has so stirred up his people throughout our land to prayer and action concerning the "Affirmation Bill;" also that there is so much more time than was hoped for. May He enable them to stand, in unwavering faith, upon his glorious word in Psalm xlvi. 5—11.

PRAYER.—That God will bless work being carried on in the Italian army.——For the work in the evangelical hospital at Rome.——For blessing on distribution of tracts in Italy.——For an aged lady who for many years has been longing for joy and peace in believing, but who even now says she has neither part nor lot in the matter. She would be grateful to be prayed for.——For a young man dangerously ill, that he may be restored to health, and that this affliction may be sanctified to the saving of his soul. This is an urgent case. He has a young wife and newly-born babe.——For a young Christian man who seems in consumption, that, if it is God's will, he may be restored.——For a husband, that he may be saved from strong drink; and that God in his infinite love may call him to Himself, and that guidance and strength may be given to his trusting, but afflicted wife.

PLACES.—For four days' special services at Congregational Chapel, Waunlwyd, Mon., by Mr. Opie Rodway, to commence on Thursday, April 12. ——That God will richly bless some Evangelistic services in a country-place in Ireland.——For special services to be conducted by Mr. Monck and Mr. Samme, of the Evangelisation Society, in Ranlyn Hall, Church-street, Upper-street, Islington, from the 12th to the 15th inst.——For a revival of the Lord's work in the Highlands of Scotland.——That God would cause a mighty awakening in Hamilton, N.Z.——For blessing on an eight days' Gospel Mission at Trinity Rooms, Crawford-street, W., from 15th to 22nd, conducted by Mr. James J. Scroggie.——William Catlin desires prayer for wisdom in conducting Gospel services in the streets, lanes, and alleys of Clerkenwell.——For the Protestant Portuguese schools and converts in Madeira, and on the "Sailors' Rest" and Temperance work in that place.

CONVERSION.—For a young man and his wife, Roman Catholics, the former brought up a Protestant.——For three brothers in a foreign land, that God would answer speedily the many prayers offered for them.——For a mother and her four children and grandchildren, long prayed for.

Notices of Books, &c.

SOME APRIL MAGAZINES.

China's Millions gives as usual interesting accounts of the work of the China Inland Mission.

The Jewish Herald continues its article on "Jewish Feasts and Fasts." This month's number contains that of "The Passover."

The Universal Instructor (Ward, Lock & Co.), parts 29 and 30, 7d. each, sustain the reputation of former issues, and present a wide field for those desirous of self culture.

Parts 23 and 24 of Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary (Ward, Lock & Co.), 1s. each, have reached us; we cordially endorse our previous commendations of this standard work.

The Rosebud (Jas. Clarke & Co. 3d.) is full enough of quaint and beautiful pictures and stories to satisfy the most exacting occupant of the nursery.

The Biblical Treasury, published by The Sunday School Union, contains lengthened expositions of the Epistles to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon. Quotations from some of our best authors adorn its pages.

Young England (Sunday School Union) contains an interesting account of the work and death of Dr. E. J. Southon, who laboured in connection with the London Missionary Society at Urambo, Central Africa.

The Anti-Slavery Reporter is replete with valuable information relative to the suppression of slavery and its attendant evils in different parts of the world; we earnestly commend it to all the friends of human freedom.

Among the many choice things in The Sunday Magazine (6d. Isbister & Co.) we select for special commendation Dr. W. Morison's short sketch of "James Clerk Maxwell," and Mrs. Murray Mitchell's account of "Mission Fields in South India." This serial continues to keep in the forefront in the excellence of its illustrations.

Evangelical Christendom, the organ of the Evangelical Alliance (Johnson, 121, Fleet-street) contains deeply interesting news of the Alliance and intelligence of the Lord's work in different parts of the world. A warm tribute of esteem and notice of the life and labours of the late W. E. Dodge, U.S., is a modest yet worthy reference to that good man.

The Church Missionary Intelligencer (C. M. House, Salisbury-square. 6d.) contains an account of the Calcutta Missionary Conference. It is a matter for devout thankfulness to God that missionaries labouring under the auspices of various societies, and with different views on Church government, and even points of doctrine, could meet and discuss such subjects as were there considered.

The Christian Church (S. W. Partridge & Co. 6d.) opens with an article on "Ireland," and after noticing the various elements of trouble in the sister isle, states that "the Church of Rome is the great enemy of British rule in Ireland." This may be true to a great extent, but the Gospel alone can enlighten the people of Ireland. There is an able article in this magazine on "A Few Words with an Evolutionist."

The politico-ecclesiastic articles in The Congregationalist (1s. Hodder & Stoughton) are an outstanding feature of the magazine; this month "The Present State of the Anglican Church" is discussed with spirit and ability from a Liberal and Nonconformist point of view. The recently published correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson is the subject of a friendly criticism, though the writer is impartial enough to point out how disappointing the work is in its bearing on the great spiritual problems of human life, here and hereafter.

Good Words (6d. Isbister & Co.) has in recent numbers been full of unusually excellent reading. This month our good friend Mr. Richard Heath discourses very pleasantly on "The Paris Ouvrier;" Mrs. Garnett cleverly describes an evening "With the Salvation Army" at Bristol; Mr. Skelton ("Shirley") brings to a close, all too soon, his fascinating sketches of "Alpine Resting-places."

Two of the briefest articles in The Quiver (6d. Cassell & Co.) are among the best from a philanthropic standpoint—"The Poverty of Kilburn Park," and "Work Among the Gipsies." The "Short Arrows" seem to multiply every month; this time a good word is said for many excellent institutions. The number contains a new and good musical setting to Bishop Heber's immortal missionary hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains."

In The Sword and Trowel (3d. Passmore & Alabaster) Mr. Spurgeon leads off with some brief but weighty advice on Always Doing One's Best. The writers that follow him, including his son Thomas and another namesake, seem to have obeyed this advice, and between them give the reader a feast of fat things.

The Sunday at Home (6d. Religious Tract Society) has a fine sketch, executed by that rapidly rising artist, Mr. F. Dadd, of the Queen and Princess Beatrice knitting quilts for Netley Hospital. Rev. H. C. Adams begins a series of articles on "Heroic Women" with a promising instalment on "Heathen Heroism." Miss Hesba Stretton furnishes some most interesting glimpses of Ragged-school work in London, with a view to show how great the need is yet for such efforts in this "loud and stunning tide" of human life. We can only mention with a word of warmest approval the following, from the same publishers: Leisure Hour (6d.); Friendly Greetings (4d.); Cottager and Artizan, Child's Companion, and Tract Magazine (1d. each).

The Clergyman's Magazine for this month (Hodder & Stoughton. 1s.) is full of instructive matter. The first of a series of articles on the "Apocryphal Gospel" is a sharp criticism, and worth reading. The seventh letter to a "Divinity Student" contains excellent advice on preaching. Such sentences as "The Christian preacher comes to his congregation as a herald, or authorised messenger from God." "Here, then, is what we have to preach—Christ, the manifestation of God, the Saviour of sinners," have a good ring about them. Warning notes are not wanting, e.g., "You might preach very nicely, and only make them sleep all the sounder." "The snore from the pew is often only the echo of the snore from the pulpit." We commend the magazine.

The Welcome (6d. S. W. Partridge & Co.) this month, as always, justifies its title. The "Men and Women of Mark," whose portraits are sketched both with pencil and pen, are John Milton, Rosa Bonheur, John Ruskin, and Sir Salar Jung—a most select group. Besides these we have an abundant supply of engravings, poems, descriptive articles, narratives, and sundry gleanings. Married folks will be specially attracted by the large and finely-executed frontispiece of the British Workman, "Praise your Wife," with the accompanying story, from the practised pen of J. W. Kirton. The Band of Hope Review, with a full-page engraving of a Wounded Pigeon, has a word of praise for our royal Princess, in espousing the cause of these feathered favourites.

The Wesleyan Methodist Sunday School Magazine, and Our Boys and Girls, are full of interesting matter, as usual. The Manchester Christian Worker, The Church of England Temperance Chronicle, Hand and Heart, Child's Own Magazine (new series), and Old Jonathan, are full of readable matter and illustrated.

We have also received the following April Magazines:—The Scripture Readers' Journal, Pearl of Days, Our Own Magazine, and Notes for Bible Study.

Mission and other Appeals.

The Commercial Travellers' Christian Association.—It is earnestly desired to complete the special effort for £1000 for the sending out well-bound copies of the Word of God for the commercial bedroom table, and libraries of standard works to commercial hotels. Not £400 has yet been subscribed. Will you help? Donations will be received by the Secretary, Mr. John Wells Thatcher, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

The Rev. E. Cerisier, late Professor at King's College School, Somerset House, and now pastor at Sauveterre, near Pau, France, is in London, and wishes to appeal to the English Christians for building a school-house in his parish. £100 have already been found. £300 more would be necessary. M. Cerisier is highly recommended by the Revs. Th. de Felice, E. Casalis, Em. Frozard. Donations would be thankfully received by D. Matheson, Esq., 120, Queen's-gate, S.W.

Melior-street Mission.—In the parishes of St. Olave Southwark and Bermondsey, among the people employed at wharves and tanneries, most valuable service has been rendered by this Mission for thirty-five years. Owing to the death of many former friends, the place is in danger of being closed for want of funds. The trustees earnestly appeal for help. The sum of £100 is urgently needed to put the premises into repair and meet other claims. Mr. John E. Stobr, 199, Newington-butts, S.E., is financial secretary.

900 MOTHERS OF ENGLAND

Are wanted to contribute ONE POUND each for the erection of "THE MOTHER'S HOUSE," for Orphan Boys, at Swanley. The House will ready for the Orphans this summer. Will each mother who reads The Christian pray for these fatherless boys, and try and help them?

Gifts will be most thankfully received by Mrs. A. O. Charles, 19, Alwyne-square, Canonbury; by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, at the Office of The Christian; or by the Secretary, at the Homes for Little Boys' Offices, Ludgate-circus.

THE DEEPENING OF SPIRITUAL LIFE.

A CONFERENCE will be held (God willing) at the NEW HALL, RICHMOND, SURREY, from 24th to 27th APRIL inclusive. As the space is limited, applications for Tickets to H. F. Bowkbe, 106, Church-road, Richmond, Surrey. Reserved Tickets for the Four Days, 5s. each. Other Tickets free.

A SALE of USEFUL and ORNAMENTAL ARTICLES

Will be held on WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, April 11, 12, and 13, in the MEMORIAL HALL, London-street, Bethnal-green

(Close to the Junction Station of the G.E.R.).

The Sale will be opened at 2 o'clock on WEDNESDAY by Mrs. F. A. BEVAN; on THURSDAY, at 3, by WILLIAM FOX, Esq.; and on FRIDAY at 3, continuing each evening open till 10. The profits are to be devoted to the extinction of the debt on the Mission Hall, Thrawl-street, amounting to £400, and to enable the Committee to meet the generous offers of two kind friends who have promised £100 each on condition that the whole be raised by this effort. An earnest appeal is therefore made under these exceptional circumstances to the readers of The Christian to visit the Sale, and assist by buying such articles as they might need, or in any other way contribute towards making the project a success. THE SALVATION ARMY.

MAY MEETINGS in EXETER HALL on MONDAY, APRIL 16th.
Morning at 11: "HOLY LIVING."
Afternoon at 2.30: More "HOLY LIVING."
Evening at 6.30: "THE SALVATION ARMY at HOME."

The GENERAL in command, assisted by Mrs. Booth, Miss E. M. Booth, Mr. Bramwell Booth, Mr. Ballington Booth, and Commissioner Railton. Music and Singing will be conducted by Mr. Herbert Booth.

During the day a few specimen cases of change wrought in individuals will be given. God willing, Jane Johnson, the notorious woman of Leeds, who has been over 240 times before the magistrates, and who, notwithstanding falsehoods to the contrary, is still rejoicing in God her Saviour, will speak. There will also be present the Champion Prize Fighter of Yorkshire; Orange Harriet, the notorious character from Barnsley; the converted Publican from Luton, and some other similar characters, who will describe what God has done for them, and whose experience may be taken as illustrations of what He has done for thousands of others.

The following will also take part:—Barkworth, the Travelling Boxer; the Deaf and Dumb Brigade, the Blind Seers, and other Converted Publicans and Sinners.

Admission (by ticket only) Free. Reserved, 1s. each, or 2s. for the three meetings, from all the London Officers, and 101, Queen Victoria-street; 20, Charing-cross; the Eagle Hotel, City-road; Regent Hall, Oxford-street; Congress Hall, Lower Clapton.

Letters to the Editor.

MISS WHATELY'S WORK IN EGYPT.

Dear Sir,—I find that an idea has been taken up by some visitor who must have totally mistaken what he heard—that my work in Egypt for over twenty years has been solely an educational one. I can truly affirm that with prayer and tears have I laboured all this while for the good of souls, to make known the Gospel of salvation. Although I could not, of course, oblige scholars to profess themselves Christians, they have always been taught the Scriptures fully. The first text, which I myself learned in Arabic, and taught to my first little school of ragged girls, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life," has been the head and front of the teaching from that day to this. It may seem superfluous to say this, as most of your readers are aware of it, but the mistaken notion having been printed I feel obliged to contradict it.—I am, dear Sir, yours truly, M. L. Whately.

Cairo, March 26.

BLACKGANG, I.W.

Dear Sir,—In your issue of March 29 is a request from Blackgang, for the fellowship of the Lord's children in the matter of additional accommodation for the many who every Lord's Day assemble for work and worship. Having been privileged to see something of the work there, I can bear testimony to the great need which exists for an additional building. The greater portion of those who worship at Blackgang belong to the poorer class, such as fishermen, coastguards, and farm labourers, and come from villages within a circuit of several miles, often bringing young children with them. In consequence of the distance to and fro, many can only avail themselves of one service, who, if some accommodation was provided for meals, &c., could otherwise stay the day, thus securing greater spiritual refreshment. There is a good hall, but some class-rooms are badly needed. God has wonderfully owned the labours of our sisters in that part of the island during the past ten years, and surely the hall, the birthplace of coming precious souls, should no longer be merely rented, thus entailing a burden upon our devoted brother, Mr. Charles Reade, but should be secured as the permanent home of the Mission.

I know of no work more deserving, and would earnestly commend this matter to the prayerful consideration of those to whom the Lord has entrusted his silver and gold.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, William T. Float.

The Manse, Foxton, Market Harboro'.

CLEANSING BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

Dear Sir,—With regard to the above subject, it appears to me to be of the utmost importance for us to bear in mind the scope of the Apostle's argument. He is seeking to lead believers into the "fulness of joy." This joy can only be experienced by those who are walking in fellowship with God. If a man is walking in darkness (or disobedience to God) he is a stranger to this fellowship, and if he professes to be living in the enjoyment of it his profession is false (1 John i. 6), for sin on the conscience makes fellowship impossible.

But suppose a believer is walking according to the will of God, so far as he knows it, and has, therefore, a conscience "void of offence," is he without sin? No, certainly not. There is much sin in the believer of which he is not conscious; but this does not hinder fellowship with God. But does he not need to be cleansed from that sin, as much as from the sin of which he is conscious? Most assuredly he does, and "nothing but the blood of Jesus" can do it; and obviously the design of the Apostle is to show that even though we may be "walking in the light," and have a conscience "void of offence," yet we are not without sin, and, therefore, need continual cleansing by the blood of Jesus Christ.

And the man who says he is without sin, because his conscience does not convict him of it, is deceived (ver. 8). This is the case with numbers in the present day. They talk about being without sin because their consciences do not condemn them. This does not, however, prove their sinlessness, but rather their deficiency of the "truth." The Apostle guards us against this error.

In verse 9 he shows us what is to be done in the case of known sin. We are to confess it, and to receive the promised forgiveness and cleansing. To fail in this is to get out of fellowship with God, and so to lose that joy which comes from the consciousness of his smile. W. S.

PLACES FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

Sir,—Will you allow me to plead with Christian ladies among your readers for help in placing out the young women who have been in the Anchorage House. It is when a young woman has finished her training, and has to return to the world again to earn her living, that the time of deepest anxiety comes to myself and those who work with me.

Even though, by the grace of God, the girl may be truly repentant, and may have given her full trust to the Lord Jesus Christ as her Saviour, we feel it still most necessary to watch over, to counsel, to strengthen, as far as we possibly can. It must be remembered that we are all animated by the one and only desire of winning souls to the Lord Jesus. Every detail of the "Anchorage" work, every step that we take, is subordinated to this one desire.

We cannot accept the various places that are offered to us for young women in worldly households, as we feel so strongly that the key to the girl's future life (humanly speaking) is the service she will be placed in when she leaves the shelter of the Anchorage House.

I most earnestly desire to find service for repentant girls in Christian households, and I pray that some of those who wish to do some service for the Lord will help me to find such places.

The girls are in most cases good servants, and while in the Anchorage have been very carefully trained, more particularly in habits of punctuality, tidiness, and cleanliness.

Will any who sympathise with those of their sisters who have passed through a time of sorrow and humiliation help me towards giving them a fair start? If they will write to me, I will gladly give them details of those for whom service is now required.

We give freely ourselves towards the financial needs of the "Anchorage," and Christian friends help us liberally; but the kind of help I am now trying earnestly to plead for, is one equally (if not more) important, and one that can be given by many who are by circumstances debarred from giving the other.

If I have taken up much of your space, I can only urge the deep importance of the subject, and my wish that thorough and faithful help may be given to all those whom God has led into the shelter of the "Anchorage House," and this thorough and faithful help is greatly dependent on the household in which we can place the girls, when the time has arrived for them to go back to their worldly duties.

L. (Mrs. H.) Stuart Wortley.

FOURTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

EXTRACT from a LETTER of F. J. HARSANT, High-street, LEISTON, Suffolk.

Writing me (Dec. 1) on behalf of a young man (who has since derived much benefit) Mr. Harsant says:—"I myself, under God's blessing, got very great good from your medicine. I was given up as in a hopeless case of Consumption, and told by a leading physician in London that I could not live through the year; but after following your treatment I recovered. I am now in good health, and have been preaching at various Baptist Churches in Suffolk."

CASE of Mrs. W. LUCAS, ALRESFORD.

The following are extracts from recent letters:—Sept., 1882.—"Your medicine was the means of restoring me to health five years and a half ago, and I trust it will again. I am now suffering from extreme weakness."

About Christmas-time I received the following:—"You will be glad to hear that your most valuable medicine has quite restored me again. I return you many thanks.—E. LUCAS, Brown Candever, Alresford, Hants."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

By GEORGIANA M. TAYLOR.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. Handsomely bound in Morocco, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON says:—"Gladly we give a word of warm praise to this lady's efforts; her verses are true 'heart-breathings,' and so are sure to find an echo in many a loving, listening heart. Moreover, they have about them the 'smell of a field which the Lord hath blessed;' and we are quite prepared to hear that He has been pleased to use them to His glory. We shall rejoice if our good word furthers the sale of these devout versicles; for we understand that the profits are all devoted to the support of an excellent Home for Young Women, under Miss Taylor's charge, which is doing a great and good work among shopwomen and dressmakers in Leamington."

THE CONSUMPTION EMULSION

After many years' trial is universally pronounced by Physicians and Doctors to be the most valuable and successful preparation ever recommended in the treatment of Consumption and all wasting diseases. Dr. ALABONE, of Lynton House, Highbury Quadrant, N., in his treatise, "Consumption: its Cure by an entirely New Remedy," states: "I have rarely ever found the Emulsion fail in arresting the rapid wasting of consumptive patients, and to increase flesh and strength. I have recommended it to some thousands of patients, with marvellous results." Send for copy of testimonials received from Doctors, Clergymen, Ministers, and late sufferers, of its wonderful effects. Price 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s. per bottle. Considerable saving is effected by taking the larger sizes. To be obtained at all Chemists. Wholesale—BARCLAY & SONS, Farringdon-street, E.C.; or from the Proprietor, W. B. TRICK, A.P.S. Chemist, 93, Green-lanes, London, N.

Choice Sayings.

Being Notes of Expositions

OF THE SCRIPTURES.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

EXTRACTS FROM "CHOICE SAYINGS."

The New Creature.

AS a vessel takes its shape from the mould, so should our will be formed in the mould of the will of God: then shall we have everything our own way.

Pleasing the Lord.

A CHILD of God ought to be ever committing himself into God's hand, that God may direct his way for him. The natural man deviseth his own way; but God would have His children hang upon Him for counsel and guidance in everything.

The Christian's Walk.

TO be a true witness for Jesus, I must be much in his company, hear his voice, and observe his ways. How can we know the character of one with whom we have but little intercourse?

Holiness & Faith Healing.

Every Monday, Trinity Church' Triangle, Hackney.

6.30 p.m., Faith Healing; 7.30 p.m., Holiness. Speakers various.

Conducted by Rev. JOHN ALLEN.

ST. JAMES'S HALL, Regent-street and Piccadilly.—On and after Sunday Evening, April 8, Mr. Josh. Proudman will conduct a series of Gospel Services, supported by a select choir. All not in the habit of attending places of worship are earnestly invited. All seats free. An opportunity will, however, be given for contributing towards the expenses. Doors open at 6.30; service commences at 7. Mr. Proudman will be happy to receive the names of Christian persons, with good voices, willing to assist in the larger choir, which will lead the singing of the congregation.—Tickets for the platform will be sent on application to Mr. Proudman, at 48, Jenner-road, N.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE LEAGUE.—The ANNUAL SERMON at the METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE will be preached on Sunday, 29th April, at 3 p.m., by the Rev. R. H. Lovell.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE LEAGUE.—The ANNUAL MEETING will be held in EXETER HALL, Strand, on Monday, 30th April, at 6.30 p.m. William Crosfield, Esq., J.P., of Liverpool, will preside; and the meeting will be addressed by the Very Rev. H. H. Dickinson, D.D., Dean of the Chapel Royal, Dublin; the Rev. Llewelyn D. Bevan, D.D., London; the Rev. Joseph Wood, President of the Primitive Methodist Conference; William Fowler, Esq., M.P. for Cambridge; Heywood Smith, Esq., M.D., London; C. Ernest Tritton, Esq., London. The Temperance Choral Society (Conductor, Mr. Birch) will sing the Coronation Anthem (Handel) prior to the Chair being taken; commencing at 6 p.m. Admission Free. Tickets for Reserved Seats, 1s. each, may be obtained at the Offices of the League, 37, Strand.

A HOME for Swiss Governesses looking for situations is shortly to be opened under the patronage of the Rev. Paul Descoeudres, minister of the Swiss Church, Endell-street, Bloomsbury, and a Committee of Swiss Ladies.

The Committee have a suitable Matron in view, and are only waiting for funds to secure the house they have selected. £400 are wanted to start the Home. Will the Lord's people help in this work of faith? The number of Swiss governesses coming over to this country is increasing from year to year, and a Christian Home to receive them is much required.

The same Committee has already started an agency for governesses and maids under the care of Mrs. Albrecht, 6, Fitzroy-street, W.C. Donations will be thankfully received by the Rev. P. Descoeudres, 7, Houghton-place, Ampthill-square, and by Messrs. Morgan & Scott.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS, E.C.—At the last Quarterly Committee Meeting it was proposed by Rev. Dr. Edmond, Chairman of Committee, and agreed to nem. con.: "That in view of the rapid growth of the Mission, embracing weekly addresses at Albion Hall, London Wall; instruction in Night School, Harvey-street, Hoxton; Bible Readings at Barbican House, House to House Visitation, Scripture and Tract distribution, &c. (with occasional help to distressed believing and inquiring Jews from among the Refugees), besides the Brighton Branch work during the summer, conducted by Mr. Warschawski and his assistants, the claims of this work as an instrumentality much blessed in its manifold operations should be brought under the notice of the friends of Jewish Missions for their prayerful consideration and sympathy." The last Annual Report is replete with interesting information, and will be forwarded to any address. Free-will offerings towards the maintenance of the work will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Rev. Dr. Edmond, 97, Highbury-hill, N.; Colonel Brockman, 19, Addison-gardens, Kensington; Edward Jarvis, Esq., Treasurer, 10, Kingsland-green, N.; or by the Head Missionary and Superintendent, Paul Warschawski, Barbican House, 6, Farleigh-road, Stoke Newington, N.

HOME FOR AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND WOMEN, 90, Junction-road, Upper Holloway, London, N.—Funds urgently needed. Resources are seriously taxed by illness, age, and infirmities. Inmates need so much care. Will friends send help in this emergency? Report sent on application.

Henry & Ann Bright, Hon. Superintendents.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. Kearney White, R., Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, Shaftesbury.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of The Christian; or to the Secretary, James Atkinson, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N.

GREAT COLEMAN'S, near Ongar, is now opened by Dr. and Mrs. S. C. Griffith to give change of air and rest to educated people of limited means. For particulars, apply to 45, Finsbury-square, E.C.

HOME FOR DESTITUTE LITTLE GIRLS, The Dale, Upperton-road, Eastbourne, Sussex (late of Plaistow).—Contributions received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott; or Miss Lee, at the above address.

THE COMMITTEE of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for contributions in aid of the poorer patients and their families. The smallest gifts in money and clothing will be thankfully received by the Committee.

Gratefully acknowledged:—"Readers of The Christian," per Morgan & Scott, £8 15s. 6d.

MRS. WILKES proposes to be at home every Wednesday from Two till Five o'clock, for the purpose of seeing friends of Rescue Work. Trains from Liverpool-street to St. James-street Station, Walthamstow, every half-hour. "The Elms" is within five minutes' walk of the station. The Elms, Coppermill-lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

ZENANA AND MEDICAL MISSION. Home and Training School for Ladies, 71, Vincent-square, Westminster, S.W.—The Annual Meeting will (D.V.) be held in Exeter Hall, Wednesday, April 25th. Chair to be taken at 7 o'clock by the Dean of Westminster. Supported by Sir R. Temple, the Revs. J. H. Rigg, D.D., E. E. Jenkins, M.A., Trevor Filleder, M.A., W. Sinclair, M.A., Dr. Heywood Smith, Dr. Newsholme and Dr. Lazeron. All friends are cordially invited.

LORD'S DAY SOCIETY.—The Annual Breakfast and Meeting will be held at St. James's Hall, on Friday morning, April 20th. Breakfast will be served at 9 o'clock; the Meeting will commence at 10 o'clock. Francis A. Bevan, Esq., the Treasurer, will preside. The following gentlemen will address the Meeting: Sir John Coode, Kt., C.E., Sir John Kennaway, Bart., M.P., W. S. Allen, Esq., M.P., J. H. Lydall, Esq., Rev. Jarvis Finch, Rev. W. Wetton Cox.—For Tickets for the breakfast, apply as below. John Gritton, D.D.

For Delicate or Backward Youths

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

SURREY HOUSE, 52, CLAPTON COMMON, LONDON, N.E.

Entrance at any date, Fees in proportion.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL,
WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal—Dr. Cranage, M.A., Author of "Mental Education," "Three Lectures on the Tabernacle in the Wilderness," "The Mark of the Beast," &c., &c.

Vice-Principal—Robert Weston, Esq., T.C.D.

Head Master—Mathematics: T. Woodcock, Esq., B.A., Wrangler, and late Scholar and Exhibitioner, Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Master—Classics: H. May, Esq., B.A., late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford; with other Masters.

Dr. Cranage's undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington, Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. Exhibitions, dependent on entrance examinations, are offered each April, July, and December; two of the value of Ten Guineas per annum, for seven years for boys under ten years of age; two of the value of Twenty Guineas per annum for five years, for boys under fifteen; and one of the value of Fifty Guineas per annum for boys under sixteen, for three years. The next Term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, May 3rd.

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE AND THE SIMPLICITY OF HEALTH.

By B. COPSON GARRATT.

I need not remark, as regards the bestowment and withdrawal of life, that it is solely in the hand, and at the command of the Great Spirit, the God and Father of us all, who wills that all His creatures should be happy in the healthy enjoyment of the life which He has given.

In the fulness of this desire He sent a life-giving Saviour to bring life and immortality to light. Do we believe and accept this truth? Then away with every doubt as to any hindrance on the part of our common Father to the attainment of what He has so bountifully ordained as the birthright of all His creatures—not suffering and death—but life, physical and spiritual, above and beyond any human power to describe. I refer you to the life and deeds of the Great Physician for an embodiment of this good news. May I venture to say that by His grace I have not only tasted of His goodness, but am desirous to extend a knowledge of its blessings on the lines so definitely laid down by the Great Exemplar Himself. The thought I wish to fix in the minds of His disciples is this—that the true priests of God should care for our life in all its aspects, that they may come into the direct line of apostolic succession and feel the importance of the trust committed to them.

It is from a consciousness of the importance of this commission, "Go work to-day in My vineyard," that I so directly appeal to them, on behalf of the work in which I am, and have been for some years past, successfully engaged—namely, ministering to the sick. If I am doing this in a God-appointed way, to ' ur. alone I owe the inspiration; I, therefore, ask their o-operation in extending a knowledge and practice of the truths which have already brought health and happiness to many of God's suffering children who thought their weaknesses were irremediable.

If I were advocating any pet medical theory or proprietary right in any so-called remedy for the ills of humanity, I feel I should be open to censure for taking the line of appeal here laid down.

No man has any proprietorship in God's gifts of pure air, water, sunlight, Magnetism, or oil, as prescribed in James v. 14, but may as markedly develop and apply their healing properties as the hydropath has already done with respect to the health-giving virtues of water. I do not make these statements as a mere theorist or experimentalist, but appeal to the thinking portion of the community, who surely can discern the essential difference between the practice of medicine and the art of healing. Medicine is only corrective. The idea of cure comes with all completeness when the patient is healed.

There are multitudes of chronic sufferers who cannot be aided either by medical or surgical skill; moreover, the complicated difficulties in the practice of medicine are well known to both patient and practitioner. To what extent these difficulties prevail in the treatment of chronic ailments, as compared with acute affections, needs no comment.

My views on medicine, as expressed in the published essays, are based on some knowledge and experience of the sanatory effect of natural and uncompounded remedies.

The law of Magnetism, as applied to the art of healing, gives the latest and best illustration of what Science and Art, in combination with natural law, can effect. This is increasingly manifested in the experiences of my patients. The list of 850 names of those who by Magnetic Treatment have recovered from various chronic maladies will show that in devoting my energies to the perfecting of such a remedy I have not laboured in vain.

It has long been my desire, if possible, to write some earnest words of truth and soberness on the topics referred to. Could I choose subjects more directly claiming their attention and interest than—The Missing Link to Success in Christian Work.—Healing by the Prayer of Faith, or Faith and Works. — The Mystery of Life and the Simplicity of Health.—The Philosophy of Health and Healing.—Worry: its Dangers and Remedy.—Nervous Exhaustion and Physical Prostration: their Cause and Cure.—Mental and Physical Maladies.—Toil and Rest: Day and Night.—Magnetism and Electricity: their Curative Properties Explained.—The Hygienic Value of Magnetism.—Medical Reform and Appeal to the Medical Profession.—The Unseen; or, Spiritualism, Mesmerism, and Magnetism Scientifically considered.

Can be had separately at 1d. each. 16, Finsbury-square, E.C.

I shall always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment.

FOURTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of MR. THOS. SMITH, of HORNSEY.

This patient sought my advice in April last—somewhat unwillingly (though under medical attendance which did no good), but urged by a friend who knew how successful my remedies have proved.

This was a case in which spitting of blood, with severe cough and great weakness, were indicative of that state of the lungs almost invariably terminating in confirmed phthisis when not altered by judicious treatment.

After following my instructions for a month, the patient reported "great relief"—and began to contemplate a sea voyage.

Being desirous to bear testimony to the good he had received, the patient wrote me, Feb. 13, saying:—Your medicine completely set me right. I consider it a wonderful medicine, and shall be glad to recommend it. Please use this communication, and refer anyone you please to me.—Thos. A. W. Smith, 21, Thorpedale-road, Hornsey-road, N.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

The Christian.

"THE TRIUMPH OF ANTICHRIST."

WHAT atheists think and say of the position taken by the religious press, and by multitudes in the Christian Church, in relation to themselves and their claims, may be gathered from the following quotations from a series of letters which have just appeared in The Newcastle Daily Chronicle, owned by Mr. Joseph Cowen, M.P., which has a large circulation in the North of England. They are headed "The Triumph of Antichrist," and assuredly the facts to which they call attention, and the spirit in which they are written, point but too ominously in that direction. Such a triumph is to come; it shall be but short-lived, but none the less will its attendant circumstances fill the world with disaster and dismay. The writer of the letters in question says:—

Let me venture to say that, in the long roll of centuries elapsing between the time referred to and the present day, there has never been an Easter when the Christianity and the Civilisation of England have been so much estranged as they are now. The fact is, the nursling has outstripped the nurse; and the religion which was at the birth of our civilisation, and nourished it through the centuries, has not only been left far behind, but is widely pronounced to be an absolute drag upon modern progress. For proof of this estrangement, I would draw your attention to the public attitude now so generally assumed by the Christian sectaries of England. In short, a great change has come over these people; and I am prepared to show that every man who despises the conventicle, repudiates theology, and denies God, has reason to rejoice because of that change.

After alluding to the character of the charge brought against the imprisoned free-thinkers, as being like the full-developed monster in contrast with the lifeless embryo, when compared with the blasphemy for which trials were instituted in the first half of the present century, the writer congratulates his fellow unbelievers on "the sympathy and indignation which, nevertheless, their imprisonment has aroused among evangelical Christians." He proceeds:

It would have rejoiced the hearts of atheists in the olden time to see the progress of our days, when, for the consolation and enlightenment of the downtrodden poor, the atheistical pamphlet is fast taking the place of the Methodist tract. It would have pleased them to behold the number and variety of the leaflets and brochures that are circulated broadcast, and without let or hindrance, among the populace.

The policy to be pursued in reference to those who cannot yet be induced to look thus favourably on the cause of atheism is then sketched, and the growing number of sympathisers thus rejoiced over:—

Of course it is not to be supposed that the cruder forms of infidelity should be at once palatable to all the rank and file of chapel-goers, any more than the suckling can digest and draw nutriment from solid food. But familiarity with the subject, as the result of persistent propagandism, will clear away those difficulties in due course; and, in the meantime, I should counsel secularists to deal gently with our chapel-going brethren, and avoid, for the better advancement of the cause, the more violent forms of exposition and description. Believing that blasphemy is no crime, what we want to secure first is the total abolition of the law against blasphemous libel. To this end, Mr. Foote has already addressed an earnest appeal to the "Ministers of Christianity and their flocks;" and, I am glad to say, the appeal has not been in vain. One Christian minister (the Rev. Mr. Sharman, of Plymouth) has already announced his intention of giving up his charge that he may be free to take an active part in the movement for getting rid of the obnoxious law, as well as for abolishing the Parliamentary oath, and every other symbol indicating that God is still a power in the State. Many other denominational ministers have expressed their horror of the prosecution, while a number of godly folk are, to my knowledge, subscribing money to the fund that has been established for securing the freedom of the infidels. If this is not cause for rejoicing, I know not what is.

Although two long columns are filled with particulars, the writer adds:—

Did space permit me, I could multiply still more remarkable instances to justify the satisfaction of atheists because of the change that is coming over the religious denominations. Rapid and satisfactory as that change has been, infidels ought not to be disconsolate because of its consummation being still prolonged. The history of the world is the history of how difficult it is to tear up the roots of superstition; but if the progress of infidelity among Christian sectaries continues, the dawning of the better day towards which all unbelievers look is not so distant as one might suppose.

Referring to plans proposed for secularising education to a more complete degree, and quoting words of Mr. John Morley, M.P., upon it, he says:—

These are noble precepts; and when they have been carefully applied and their gradually improving results handed down for a generation or two, then will dawn upon old England that happy time which "Freethought" philosophers have foretold, when the little child will repeat to its approving parent Shelley's dictum—"There is no God!"

In closing the second letter, we specially note the following words:—

I have referred above to the now popular cry among Dissenters about religion having no connection with politics. In this phrase is the kernel of the whole subject. The idea conveyed by it is, both philosophically and historically, of paramount interest, pointing unmistakably to the triumph of Antichrist.

Were such utterances as these confined to some one unknown source, they might be regarded with unconcern, but they are in accord with the general tone of infidel sentiment, and represent the jubilant convictions of atheistic leaders all over the country—we may say the world. The facts upon which these hopes are based are but too manifestly real. The tone of the Christian press, and of the Christian community, is but too accurately represented. Our fathers maintained a firm, uncompromising spirit of resistance and of dogmatic antagonism to forms of infidelity far less deplorably outspoken than those with which we are confronted. But the policy of to-day is that of toleration, and even political patronage and public support of the claims of those who lead the van of atheistic progress.

Whither is all this tending? The attitude of the Church, as represented by not a few of her leaders, is that of making smoother the lines along which infidelity, of a most determined and ribald character, pursues its march. Our young people are learning to look upon its leaders as men to be respected, and qualified to legislate and pioneer for others. Religion is being relegated to a separate sphere, instead of being regarded as entitled to rule all our actions and permeate all our influence. We can see in these signs of the times nothing but cause for sorrow and concern, and all the more so because many whom on other grounds we esteem, and whose position in the field of Christian action we honour, are found on the side of this, to us, mistaken policy, and essentially anti-Christian spirit of latitudinarianism. This attempt to mix light with darkness, Christ with Belial, and truth with error, cannot be of God, and we see much which indicates that those who advocate it pull down with one hand what they build with the other.

The tide of infidelity and its companions, communism and lawless disregard of the rights and privileges of others, has set in; all over the world it gathers volume and force. We know from the revealed word of prophecy, as, for instance, from St. Paul's second Epistle to the Thessalonians, that it is destined, prior to our Lord's manifestation, to spread and deepen, until it reaches its dire culmination in the reign of the Man of Sin. It is written concerning those who have been visited with the light of truth, but have refused to receive it, "God shall send them strong delusion (or as the revised version has it, "a working of error"), that they should believe the lie."

How solemn is the warning conveyed by this, not only to the World, but also to the Church, and how needful on the part of all who profess the truth are solemn, thoughtful concern lest unwittingly they be found helping forward the cause of that error which shall engulph an ungodly world in its fell delusions and soul-destroying snares. We earnestly plead with Christian men to look closely and with set, prayerful purpose, at the distinctively Christian side of the question, before they commit themselves further to a policy of political and social alliance with avowed Atheism, and Godless rule.

CARRUBBER'S CLOSE MISSION, EDINBURGH.

THE second annual social meeting of the Carrubber's Close Mission Gospel Temperance Society was held on Monday night, April 2, in the Oddfellows' Hall, Forrest-road. The hall was densely crowded, every available inch of room being occupied, while hundreds who had expected to purchase tickets at the door had to go away disappointed. Mr. T. R. Marshall, president of the society, occupied the chair. He expressed the delight he felt at seeing such a great meeting.

Mr. Barclay said that the society was instituted in March, 1881. During the first twelve months 500 members were enrolled, and in the second year 7000 members. They had several cases in which liquor sellers had to renounce their calling, and in which those living in the most depraved parts of the city had reformed under the influence of the society. Branches had also been established by the society throughout Edinburgh, and in villages and towns in different parts of Scotland. At the Leith branch no fewer than 2000 members had been enrolled; while in the House of Refuge, Canongate, much good work had been done.

Principal Cairns said he was glad to have that opportunity of saying how much he valued what had been done by the Carrubber's Close Mission, not only for Edinburgh but for our country and our common Christianity. He did not believe that anything in the world was adequate to grapple with and destroy intemperance save the Gospel. Ex-Bailie Lewis said that more effort had been exercised in the cause of Temperance during the past year than during the last fifty years, or, indeed, the whole history of Temperance organisation. Nevertheless, they had but touched the fringe of the great evil they were met that night to protest against. Intemperance, he maintained, blocked the way of the sanitary reformer, the educationist, and the preacher of the Gospel. The Rev. W. M. Falconer, Rev. Henry Cowan, and Rev. Dr. Adamson also addressed the meeting. In the course of the evening the Carrubber's Close Temperance choir, consisting of 100 ladies and gentlemen, sang a number of hymns. The hall was beautifully decorated, through the kindness of Messrs. R. B. Laird and Sons, nurserymen, and Bailie Cranson, of Edinburgh, a gentleman who has done much to further the carrying out of the new premises being built for the Mission.

BIGGAR, N.B.—A good work of grace has been accomplished here in connection with the labours of Mr. J. Mitchell, evangelist, from Edinburgh.

"The Christian" Pulpit.

HATH, OR SHALL HAVE.

By CHEYNE BRADY.

THE rules of grammar are very important, but they are too frequently disregarded. Few compositions are free from grammatical errors. Even in the Queen's Speech critical eyes profess to detect mistakes, and, according to newspaper critics, few letters or writings of public men are exempt from blunders.

Now, strange as it may appear, disregard of the rules of grammar is often the cause of the doubt and uncertainty of many earnest Christians. We consider that a clear regard to the tenses in Scripture would carry certainty and peace to numbers of questioning souls, who read not only the past, but also the present, as still future.

Forgiveness, acceptance, eternal life, the heritage of every believing sinner, is often thought of as future. Sonship and vital union to Christ are objects of hope; gifts already bestowed are asked for; promises freely pledged are postponed to an uncertain future.

Let such a reader now give full force to the tenses in the following texts, and the Holy Spirit credit for having indited the exact truth, and we doubt not a great veil will be lifted from his heart, and he will apprehend that in the past he was eternally saved, in the present he possesses eternal life, exceeding great and precious promises, and that the future opens up to him the fulness of blessing with a glorified and sinless body, a crown of glory, and a "for ever with the Lord."

(1) As to forgiveness and eternal life.

Read carefully these words of our Lord Himself: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my Word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, HATH everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but IS PASSED from death unto life."

Grasp by faith the plain meaning, the full force, the common significance of that little word HATH. Do not alter the language, do not misread the word. It is the present tense, it is not future; it is not shall have, or, may hope to have; it is HATH. It is here and now yours, and not a thing to be put off, or expected, or hoped, or waited for. Do not put off to a future time, considering it to be a hope that by-and-by a fuller manifestation of Christ will be made to your soul, or that when you come to die you shall enter heaven and have eternal life. Nay, the words are clear and unmistakable; apply them thus: "I have heard the Word, I believe God who sent Jesus, and now I KNOW that I HAVE eternal life—the life of Jesus; I know I shall never come into judgment for my sins, because Jesus bore their penalty. I know I have passed from eternal death and misery unto eternal life and happiness. Perhaps I do not feel, but I believe God, and know these things to be verities."

It is unbelief to question the record, it is sin to contradict God's Word. It is faith to set to your seal that God is true, and well-pleasing to Him. Look up in the face of your Father, and cry, Abba Father, I believe thy word; I HAVE ETERNAL LIFE.

In the first chapter of Colossians we read the following confirmatory passages:—

"God HATH delivered us from the power of darkness."

"God HATH translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son."

"In Christ WE HAVE redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins."

And in Ephesians we learn that—

"God HATH quickened us together with Christ."

"HATH raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus."

Is it not rank unbelief to gloss over the meaning of God's plain words with our interpretations? Why alter God's present into man's future? The word of God says now, objectors guard against the now by changing it to perhaps. Unbelief alters the present into the future.

Praise the Lord, O my soul, thank Him for the gift of Christ—for salvation. O my soul, believe, possess and enjoy, the grace so fully and freely given.

(2) As to union with Christ.

Yes, we are now united to the Lord Jesus Christ. Think of that, "one with Him." His life our life. The Word of God is clear on this point. "He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit." Henceforth you may and ought to adopt these words, "I have been crucified with Christ; nevertheless, I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved ME and gave Himself for ME."

Do not let any false timidity or sense of unworthiness rob you of these privileges. These and such like texts are the truth of God and are written for this very purpose, that you may have confidence and boldness, and that "your joy may be full,"

(3) Complete in Him.

Read and inwardly digest. "Ye are complete in Him," and "as He is, even so are we in this world," and "He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified." Beloved, let no one defraud you of the stability, the solid joy, of such words. There are many who fritter away these texts. Do not allow the very abundance of grace to be a stumbling block to its reception, nor the timid shrinking of lukewarm Christians to derogate from the power of such blessing. By virtue of your union to the Lord Jesus, you stand complete, you are as He is. In Him you are perfected for ever; and that now and here, not to be postponed until by and by in heaven. Praise the Lord.

(4) Meetness.

Again, meetness for heaven is an object of desire and hope, a thing almost universally considered to be of our own preparation, and practically postponed to an indefinite future. But what saith the Scripture? "Giving thanks unto the Father, who HATH MADE US MEET to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." What! HATH made us meet, now meet, already fit for heaven? Certainly, God says so; our part is to believe it. Believe God and give thanks. O my Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast made me in Christ Jesus meet for glory. "Stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved."

(5) Fulness.

One of the distinguishing characteristics of the present Gospel dispensation, as contrasted with the Old Testament dispensation, is that of promises fulfilled, facts accomplished. In Christ all the promises of the Old Testament have been realised. Christ Jesus, the great fact of facts. He has been received by us, and all things, all promises, all blessings, are filled up in Him, and received by us when we received Him. Christians lament and bewail their lack of grace and Christ-like qualities, but what saith the Scripture? "Of his fulness HAVE ALL WE RECEIVED, and grace for grace." It does not say out of his fulness we may receive now and again; no, but of his fulness HAVE all we received, once for all. That is to say, by virtue of our union to Him we are united to Him, and, as it were, connected with the spring of blessing which perennially flows through the whole body of Christ; we are joined to his fulness; his fulness is ours. "In Him all fulness dwells." In Him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." "In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," Moreover, it is written that "his Divine power HATH given unto us ALL THINGS that pertain to life and godliness."

(6) False Humility.

Humility is lovely, but unbelief is not humility; unbelief is subtle pride and selfism. Unbelief is not infirmity, but sin. It is a device of Satan to teach believers that it is humble to stand afar off, humble to be poor and miserable, humble to hope and expect, humble to doubt; whereas, on the contrary, true humility abnegates self altogether, sets to its seal that God is true, that the state of self has nothing to do with the question, that it is just because self is irremediable that grace is spontaneous, free, and unconditional.

(7) Trust.

The more you believe Him, the more you trust Him, the more you recognise the link to be fixed, the nearer you come, the oftener you sit at his feet, the longer you lie on his bosom, the more honour you pay Him. Faith is honouring to God, and, as it were, the greater faith, the greater flow of blessing. Blessing is pent up by unbelief, God is robbed of glory by unbelief. Unbelief puts a tap on the conduit, and only turns it now and again. Faith is the cemented link, never to be severed.

(8) Do not Make God a Liar.

Read the gracious remonstrance that the Holy Spirit has indited on the subject of unbelief in God's testimony. He says, "If we receive the witness of men," that is, if you believe the word or testimony of a fellow man, "the witness of God is greater;" and ought to be implicitly believed, though, in fact, we find ourselves giving greater credit to what we hear from one another, than to the Word of the Living God. But the Holy Spirit proceeds, "This is the witness of God, which He hath testified of his Son: He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; HE THAT BELIEVETH NOT GOD HATH MADE HIM A LIAR; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God HATH GIVEN to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son HATH life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that YE MAY KNOW that ye HAVE eternal life."

ALL THINGS.

Let us abandon all doubting, fearing, hoping, wishing, feeling, and just believe only. Let our language be "I KNOW WHOM I have believed, and am persuaded He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day." "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." "For WE KNOW that all things work together for good to them that love God." "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things."

Let us accept these divine realities as accomplished facts. Let us go up and possess the goodly land and feed on "the old corn of the land," and enjoy here in this present moment the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ. Let our souls revel in them as in a continual feast and we shall not hear the chronic groan, "Lord, help our unbelief;" we shall not always be craving from God that which He has already bestowed, continually begging for blessings which Christ has bought for us, the Father has given us, and the Holy Spirit witnesseth to. We shall not leaven our very hymns with miserable doubtings, with utterances of unbelief, with contradictions of what God says.

Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin;
The blood of Jesus whispers peace within.
Peace, perfect peace, with sorrow surging round;
On Jesus' bosom nought but calm is found.
Peace, perfect peace, our future all unknown,
Jesus we know, and He is on the Throne.

WHITE SLAVES IN LONDON.

SIR,—May I trespass on your space with a few words, urging on Christian men and women to consider the grievous wrong done to the girls and women employed in the large drapery establishments of our city? It occurs to few who enter these places to make their purchases, to consider the lives of these female assistants (young girls principally), whose daily toil means standing from eight o'clock a.m. to, usually, nine p.m., except the short period allowed for meals.

I have been led to these remarks by being struck by the look of intense weariness in a young girl's face, who was serving me, very recently, at one of our large West-end shops. She had to ascend some steps to procure for me the article I required, and the deadly pallor that came over her face at the exertion startled me into the inquiry if she had been ill. "No; only tired. So many hours standing—and these 'sales' (there was one on then) are extra fatiguing."

I missed her when I returned a few days after, but not knowing her name could hear nothing as to the cause of her absence; but seeing the head of the department looking curious as to what I was asking about, I told him, and he replied, "Oh, knocked down most probably from the work, and had to give in; the girls can't stand it long; twelve hours—no rest to speak of; none worse off than we drapers' assistants, male and female. That young girl you speak of, I think I know her. That's nothing! You should see what we have sometimes—three or four of them carried out fainting."

"But," I said, "there is a movement to try to shorten the hours, and induce the heads of establishments to give seats to their assistants." "It is rumoured that there is another movement going on among the masters," said he gravely, "to lengthen the hours." "You should stand together and protest against it." "No use," he replied. "As long as ladies and gentlemen make their purchases at unreasonable hours we must sell to them. They could prevent it. The masters won't."

I wrote down his words, which made a very painful impression on me, and determined me to make an appeal to all right-thinking men and women to wipe out their share in this cruel wrong. Let them make it a rule to have all their shopping done before five p.m. A very trifling act of self-denial for them, but what a boon and blessing to the poor tired shopwomen. J. F. A.

Kensington-gardens, W.

ROYAL VICTORIA COFFEE HALL, WATERLOO ROAD.—On Friday, April 20, a number of distinguished members of the legal profession will address a Temperance Demonstration in this popular place of meeting. Sir Thomas Chambers will preside, and amongst the speakers will be Professor William Barber, Q.C., Messrs. E. W. Fithian and Thomas Sutherst, Barristers-at-law; Messrs. Swinford Francis, J. Maude, J. M. R. Todd, and S. Watson, Solicitors. Admission may be obtained at nominal prices, ranging from 1d. upwards.

AMONGST THE KABYLES.

MY DEAR SIR,—The warm interest which many Christian friends in England have expressed in our missionary enterprise amongst the Kabyles, encourages me to tell you of the steps we are now taking to further it. The sun shines gloriously on the distant hills of the Beni Jennad, in the sight of which I am writing, and so God appears to be smiling upon us, encouraging us to go forward.

A party of seven Christian friends—four brethren and three sisters—arrived on this north coast of Africa a month ago, drawn here by their interest in the work, and some to be permanently engaged in it, amongst them Major-General Haig, whose well-known missionary spirit led him to found a Mission in North-west India. He has now returned to Europe, and has come across the Mediterranean to explore the country and see what can be done for the Arab population. Mr. E. H. Glenny, the treasurer of the Mission, has come to study the needs of the Mission on the spot and report to friends in England. Mr. J. H. Bridgford, from Bray, near Dublin, an architect, has done us much service, kindly giving us his advice, his professional help, and recommending the purchase of some ground adjoining our own. Mr. Wallis has now returned to England, and also one of our sisters, who proposes to qualify herself by medical study for usefulness in the Mission field.

The two sisters from the South of England have obtained temporary lodgings at Mekla, about a mile and a half from this station. They are at their own charges. Three hours after their mule journey, on their arrival, they were in the midst of the Kabyle women. One sister is French, having a French diploma qualifying her as an "Institutrice." She has also a diploma of the English Obstetrical Society, which qualifies her for the treatment of women. The other sister has been also much blessed in Christian work in England. They thus describe their entrance amongst the people: "Our welcome here appears to us most wonderful. The Kabyles had been told we were coming, but such a demonstration we did not expect: husbands sending to invite us to eat in their houses; women crowding round us when we went into their village, kissing our hands, and in every way expressing delight; but each day since, our hearts have been more touched by the words, 'Soyez les bien-venues' from the men, and the gratitude of the poor dear women. For the simple remedies we are able to use, they bring us eggs and some Eastern dish of curdled milk. To-day one poor old thing, in great pain, called for her Mother, as is their custom. The women have no God; He is only for the men. The dirt, and consequent suffering, no person living at home could imagine, and we long for the Lord to send some medical man for the poor bodies suffering so much; but, above all, we beg our heavenly Father very soon to let the true Light, even the loving Lord Jesus, shine into many of these dark, hopeless hearts."

Mons. Marchal, a French brother, is provisionally accepted. He understands building, the boys around love him, and cling to him. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb, of Partick, Glasgow, are preparing to come over in the autumn, to live and labour for the Kabyles. Our present small Mission-house is utterly unfitted as a permanent residence, especially in the heat of summer, but will do as a store-house and for temporary lodgings. To provide suitable accommodation for a Mission party of five it is absolutely necessary to erect two residences. We have obtained some ground, entered into a contract with a French builder at Mekla, and are putting up one house with five rooms, which will cost us, with a well and the ground, £880, exhausting the funds in hand. This is to be finished in two months. The remaining part of Mr. Bridgford's plan of the additional house of the same size, at the cost of £352, we hope to proceed with when funds are forthcoming, as we do not intend to go into debt. When finished, the buildings will form a compact square. I have just laid the first stone of the first house—"For the glory of God, and in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ."

In addition to this, we shall require furniture, support of missionaries, passage and outfit, temporary tent, the ordinary Mission expenses up to the end of the year, and sundries, amounting to about £800. The cost of the buildings is much more than it would be in other circumstances, on account of the difficulty in a mountainous country of bringing the materials from such a distance. I am thankful to be able to say that the interdict by the authorities about dispensing medicine has been removed.

Mr. Mayor is opening up a new station amongst a neighbouring tribe, where he hopes to be sustained independent of the Kabyle Mission.

It is difficult to convey to others, in words, the charm attaching to these interesting people and lovely country; the friends who are here feel the inspiration. But when we regard the words of our blessed Lord, ere He ascended, "preach the Gospel to every creature," and when we think of its being thus far down the nineteenth century, and yet the boon has been withheld, how the heart glows with the desire that the fulfilment of our Saviour's expressed will should be retarded no longer. It is a privilege to us to give ourselves to such work in order to present the Gospel for the first time to the Kabyles, and we are assured that many will also feel it to be a privilege to have their share in the work by assisting us with pecuniary means, as the Lord may have prospered them, to put up the remaining part of the house, and provide for the support of the Mission party.

Yours sincerely, GEO. PEARSE.

UNION HALL MISSION.

THE annual gatherings of friends connected with this Mission were held on Thursday week in Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, afternoon and evening.

In the afternoon the meeting was addressed by Mr. J. G. McVicker, Colonel Puget, Mr. A. C. P. Coote, Mr. John Churchill, and Mr. C. Russell Hurditch. We all felt that God was of a truth in our midst and speaking most graciously to our hearts.

At the seven o'clock meeting, Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Henry H. Morley, Mr. Wm. R. Lane, and Mr. Edmund Ives, gave addresses. Extracts from the report, read by the Director of the Mission, gave a very cheering account of God's goodness and blessing upon all departments of the work. The friends hope, by the Lord's grace, still further to extend the work by tents and new halls, as the way is opened up for them.

Will your readers pray for the five different branches of this Mission? ROBERT BILKE.

TEA TO RAILWAY MEN.—On Friday week the young ladies interested in the Mission to Railway Men gave them an excellent meat tea, in St. Matthew's Schools, Queen's-road, Chelsea. Over 100 attended. After tea some most earnest addresses were given by gentlemen connected with the Church, navy, army, and the law. All went away apparently much refreshed from what they heard.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

LOOK at THE RAW MATERIAL out of which Christ makes his saints. We have heard the command of our Master—"Be ye therefore perfect." At once we have looked within us and sighed a troubled sigh. Everything there is against us—disappointment and failure meet us everywhere. No faith; no earnestness; no love; no strength of purpose; self spoiling every thought; sin creeping over our holiest things; so much of ill-temper, and indolence, and worldliness—everything bad. "Not for me," we think; "this high life is far away out of my reach. I am not able to meet the demands of lowest duty and commonest claims of religion—with nothing good, nothing wise, nothing fair, a place stript of everything but confusion and failure—this is no palace for the King." And, lo, at the threshold standeth the King Himself. "This is the place I seek," saith He; "Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Thank God, that is where holiness begins. Not in our strength and goodness, but in our poverty and emptiness. Set that in the forefront of the thoughts, as it is here in the forefront of the Lord's Sermon. Holiness is not a rapturous triumph away up somewhere in vague heights of glory, steadfast and splendid like a sun. It is just a poor heart that makes room for Jesus.

Blessed are the poor in spirit. Did we not agree that this perfection was likeness to God—correspondence to God? Here is the beginning of this correspondence: My emptiness answering to his fulness. What God seeks in the world is room. "There was no room for Him in the inn"—well, then the manger shall have Him, and the bleak shed where the cattle lie. Lowliness and poverty cannot shut Him out if there is but room. This is ever the first step in discipleship, coming down to be low and poor enough. "Because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked,—I counsel thee to buy of Me gold tried in the fire that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve that thou mayest see."

And do not think of this only as an entrance-gate into discipleship which we must pass at the outset, but which is ever left further behind as we get further on. Being poor in spirit is always the first condition of perfection however far on we go, and whatever we attain to, a condition ever deepening as we receive. Then am I poorest in spirit when I am fullest of God.

Blessed are the poor in spirit. How can it be otherwise? Whatever I have of myself is so much independence of Jesus—for all that I can do without Him.

But if I have nothing I must beg of Him. If I have nothing I must accept his gifts. If I have nothing I must depend upon Him for everything.

Oh, blessed poverty! Put that together, dear soul. Begging of Jesus. Taking from Jesus. Depending on Jesus. That is the A B C of holiness. This poverty of spirit is unfolded in the verses that follow. Let us note well every feature of it.

Do you say that if conscious emptiness and failure are the first conditions of holiness, then are many of the world's worst nearer to the Kingdom of Heaven than some of the Church's first? Well, that is what the Master told us long ago, that drunkards and harlots shall go into the kingdom of God before the Pharisee—the self-satisfied. But to the true disciple this failure is a source of deep and bitter grief. The thought of all that sin has wrought within the soul fills us with an upbraiding mournfulness; no excuses can lessen it, no explanations lighten it. There is a right consciousness of this poverty. Blessed are they that mourn.

Blessed are the meek. This is constantly associated with a willingness to learn. We are to receive with meekness the engrafted Word. A quiet teachableness is the next mark of the disciple. We put down preference and prejudice and stout self-will, and we sit longing to hear the Master's voice. Here again is the correspondence. Christ's eagerness to teach, met by a spirit that is eager to learn.

Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness. God's yearning to give met by my great longing to receive.

Then, in the disciple, this poverty begets a pity for all. My failure is to compel in me a patient and merciful thought of others. There is to be in all things a single and steady aim after the right and true (ver. 8). And that with a gentle spirit that neither avenges nor resents (ver. 9); yet with a courage which bravely endures persecution for the sake of the kingdom of heaven.

SEE WHERE THE DISCIPLE IS FOUND.

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect.—These words can only be rightly heard when we are in the right attitude. They bless us only when we hear them from the great Teacher Himself.

At the beginning of this chapter there are two words that should be underlined in our Bibles and deeply graven in the memory and heart. "His disciples came UNTO HIM, and He opened his mouth and taught them. . . . Be ye therefore perfect."

UNTO HIM. We separate the word from Him, and so we lose it. Christ's teaching is always vivâ voce—He opens his mouth and teaches us. This is the reason why the reading of the Bible and the hearing it are so often but dead and dreary forms. We forget to come unto Him. Then the precept is no more the gracious Word proceeding out of his mouth—it is shrunk and shrivelled into a mere opinion of the preacher's; the commandment is either a wearisome utterance, or else it is a grievous burden which we strive vainly to carry, for without Him we can do nothing; the promises, if we hear them at all, are but faint echoes that come to us from afar, bringing no healing, breathing no virtue. But we come UNTO HIM. Then the precept is full of a Divine authority; then the commandment is full of a tenderness and love which make it a glowing promise; and at his feet, within reach of that Hand, the promise is transformed into a blessed inwrought possession.

No man may be able to tell me altogether what holiness is, but what of that? I know where it is—just at the Master's feet.

It will be very helpful to you to think always of holiness, not as something in us, but as a power in Jesus.

Sit down, dear soul, sit down at his feet; look up into his face. By the height and depth, the length and breadth of the cross, try to measure the vast purposes of his love, and the immensity of his grace to help. Then from his lips hear the words, infinitely tender and full of power: Be ye therefore perfect.

He who thinks of holiness as a something in himself, at once limits it by all kinds of measurements and mismeasurements of what he is and is not; and of the tall sons of Anak and of the size of Jericho's walls; and feebleness whispers, "We are but as grasshoppers."

But if holiness is a power in my Almighty Lord—his power to help and bless me—where are its limits? Who can measure that?

Do let this truth sink down into the soul's depths: Holiness is all in Jesus, and we can find it nowhere else. YE ARE COMPLETE IN HIM.

Once I went forth to look for Repentance. I sought her day and night in the City of Mansoul. I asked many if they knew where she dwelt, and they said they had never seen her. I met one, grave and scholarly, who told me what she was like, and bade me seek her earnestly; but he did not tell me where she was to be found. Then, all sad at heart, and wearied with my search, I went forth without the city walls, and climbed a lonely hill, and up a steep and rugged way, until I came in sight of the Cross, and of Him who hung thereon. And lo, as I looked upon Him, there came one and touched me. Then instantly my heart was melted, and all the great deeps of my soul were broken up.

"Ah, Repentance, I have been looking everywhere for you," I said.

"Thou wilt always find me here," said Repentance; "here, in sight of my crucified Lord. I tarry ever at his feet."

Again I went forth, to look for Forgiveness. I knocked at many a door in the City of Mansoul and asked for her. And some said they thought she did live there sometimes: and some said she used to, once; and some said she came there occasionally when the weather was fine to spend a Sunday. Then up came one whom I knew by name as Unbelief, with a voice like the croaking of a raven, and he said that Forgiveness never was there and never would be, that she was much too fine a lady to live in so low a place as that and among such a set as they were. So I came forth wearied and sad, and as I reached the city gate I met again the grave scholar, and he gave me much account of her birth and parentage, and he showed me her portrait, and told me of her gracious works, and he bade me seek her earnestly, but he did not tell me where I could find her.

So I went along my way, looking, but well-nigh in despair, when it chanced that I found myself again upon the high hill, climbing again the steep and rugged path. And I lifted my eyes and saw once more the Cross and Him who hangeth thereon, and lo, at the first sight of my dear Lord, Forgiveness met me, and filled my soul with holy peace, and a rest like heaven itself.

"Oh, I have had a weary search for you," I said.

"I am always here," said Forgiveness; "here at my Master's feet."

"Long afterwards I wondered within myself where Holiness dwelt, but I feared to go in search of her. I knew she would never be at home in the low lands and busy streets of Mansoul. All whom I asked about her answered doubtfully. One said that she had died long ago; indeed, was buried in Eden before Adam came out. One said that she lived away at the end of the Valley of the Shadow of Death, her house was on the brink of the river, and that I must hope to meet with her just before I crossed it. Another argued almost angrily against this notion. "Nay," said he, "she lives further on still; search as thou wilt, thou shalt never find her till thou art safely across the river and landed on the shores of the Celestial City."

Then I remembered how well I had fared aforetime on that Holy Hill, and went forth again. So up the lonely way I went, and reached the top of it and looked once more upon my blessed Saviour. And lo! there was Holiness sitting at the Master's feet. I feared to say that I had been looking for her, but as I gazed upon the Crucified, and felt the greatness of his love to me, and as all my heart went out in love and adoration, Holiness rose up, and came to me all graciously, and said, "I have been waiting for thee ever since thy first coming."

"Waiting where?" I asked, wondering.

"At his feet," said Holiness. "I am always there."

For the Young.

A JUVENILE BAZAAR.

IN a country house about fifty miles from London live some young girls, who had been interested in what they had heard about our Zenana Mission. They began to wish they could help to bring happiness to the women and children of India, who are kept shut up, and know nothing of the free happy life that most English girls lead, or worse still, know nothing of the blessed Saviour, who alone can make us all truly happy.

Well, these young English girls wondered what they could do, and one of them took a penny collecting-card, and made all her friends pay toll. But that was not quite approved of at home; so they all laid their heads together to see if something better could not be done. The eldest of the three, who went to school, proposed that they should get up a little bazaar and exhibition in their own family, and invite their friends round about to give it their patronage. So she interested some of her companions at school in the work, and sent for little books and papers, to distribute amongst them. The result was that some of them set heartily to work, and helped her to make things for the Juvenile Bazaar.

The Christmas holidays came, and our young friend returned home, bringing the contributions of her schoolfellows with her; and then the elder sisters of this family were called on to help, which they most kindly did in many ways. All the morning of the eventful day they were hard at work, decorating their school-room, which was a good-sized room with a large bow window. In this were placed two tables with a space between them, and a cord was stretched across the top of the bow from which drooped two big flags, arranged in a graceful manner, the same cord supporting Chinese lanterns wherever they could be prettily hung. Two other larger flags were similarly festooned on either side of the door, and a number of small ones, interspersed with bunches of holly and laurel over the pictures, and some gay peacocks' feathers—all giving this Resort of Study a very gay and unusual appearance. The piano, covered with a large red cloth, made a capital stand for the display of drawings, terra-cotta paintings, vases and woodwork, for sale; and close beside this was a big bran pie of penny things, the charge of which was given to a little girl who was assisting the others to sell; and very happy she looked with her little bag of pennies on her arm, getting heavier and heavier every moment.

One side of the room was devoted to the exhibition part of the entertainment; and there was a great display of minerals, and fossils, and curiosities of many descriptions—Chinese, Japanese, Peruvian, &c. The young sellers were dressed in pretty muslin aprons, and high mob caps, and a most active business they seemed to be doing at their various tables,—about six altogether. The exhibition part was not much looked at, for the visitors, who came flocking in at the hour appointed, seemed to find it more amusing to purchase from the eager little girls who were carrying on such a brisk sale. The youngest had only penny things at her table, and cleared ten shillings. Another had a stall of sixpenny things, and was equally successful in disposing of them. The more valuable things sold well also; in fact, at the close of the afternoon it was found almost everything was gone, and everybody declared it was a most sucessful little bazaar. So they all adjourned to the drawing-room, young and old, and had tea, and wound up the pleasent afternoon with some music—a pretty trio, and a piece on the harp, &c.

And how much do you think our young friends had made for their Indian sisters? Well, I should have guessed £5. But they had actually made £8 by that afternoon's sale; and afterwards they disposed of a few things that came in too late for their bazaar, and a few more of the Society's little books, and altogether it amounted to £10. Was it not splendid? This they sent to our good Secretary of the Girl's Union for the support of Hester at the Normal School. Hester is is a very nice, superior Indian girl, already a Christian, who has been teaching under our Missionaries at Lucknow. But she requires more training, and they are most anxious to send her to the Calcutta Normal School, that she may learn to be a really valuable teacher to her fellow-countrywomen. And now this £10 gives them enough money for the first year.

Do you not think all this very encouraging? Why should not a great many more families go and do likewise? If some of you would start something of the kind amongst yourselves as these young girls did (16, 12, and 9 were their ages), you would be surprised at your own success: for your older friends would get interested in your eagerness, and you would find that help would flow in. Do just try what you can do to help to make these sad young Indian girls as happy as yourselves; and remember that the Secretary, Mrs. Impey, Bedecote, Horsham, is always ready to correspond with you on these subjects. Her great desire is that her English Girls' Union (English, Scotch and Irish, of course) should be able to provide and support a missionary entirely themselves, to work amongst the Indian girls. But this costs £200 a year! That large sum would soon be provided if you would all work like the young friends I have been telling you about.—Indian Female Evangelist.

A SACRED SONG ASSOCIATION was founded in North-West London for the purpose of making known the Gospel in song, to prepare Christians who have the gift of song and musical ability for the work, and to conduct Gospel services of sacred song in the open air and places of public resort, in common lodging-houses and tramps' kitchens. During the past year much has been done through these varied channels. The Association have secured a commodious hall, which will be opened with prayer and praise on Thursday, April 26, at 3.30, p.m., and will be known as "Bliss Hall," Leighton Crescent (formerly St. John's College), Kentish Town, N.W. Mr. John Farley, City Missionary to public-houses, and occasionally leader of praise at Mildmay Conferences, will conduct Mission Services here. The Committee would welcome any assistance in the work. Communications may be forwarded to Mr. H. A. Farley, Hon. Sec., 48, Paternoster-row, E.C.

THE DOOR OF THE LIPS.

"Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: keep the door of my lips."—Psalm cxli.

SAY not the thing ye mean not. Words are knives
That cut deep gashes in our little lives;
Gashes that reach deep down within the heart,
And all our lives leave some unhea'ed smart.

Say not the thing ye mean not. Words will live
To mock your grief when you perchance would give
Your very life to take away the pain
That you have made; alas, 'twill then be vain.

Ah, many a word that was in passion said
Has left a wound that secretly has bled,
Till love has come to be a trickling stream,
And earthly joy like some past happy dream.

Yea, all that brightens life has fled away,
Leaving but work, the dreary livelong day.
Say not the thing ye mean not. There be few
Whose life within and life without are true.

Yet be ye true, yea, though ye suffer wrong,
If true, then real, and being real, strong;
And being strong some little word ye speak
May be p some struggling brother who is weak.

Say not the thing ye mean not. Sure our life
Is not for meanness, pettishness, or strife;
Souls who have destinies so great and high
Must not defame their immortality.

Say not the thing ye mean not. Every word
That wrought a pang of anguish, or that stir.ed
With secret sorrow any human soul,
Will bound back on thyself, like waves that roll

Themselves upon the shore, then leap again
To the deep bosom of the watery main.
Say not the thing ye mean not. Harsh and chill
Is this cold world; why let thy words work ill?

Rather wipe eyes that weep, cheer those who mourn,
And whisper comfort into hearts forlorn.
Impute not wrong, lest thou should add to strife,
Or mar with bitterness some noble life.

Say not the thing ye mean not. Death is nigh;
Thou knowest not but soon that one may lie
In the cold grave, whose ears so sadly heard
The harsh, unfeeling, bitter, unkind word.

CHURCHES FOR THE PEOPLE.

THE New York City Mission and Tract Society, organised on the basis of Christian union and co-operation, and composed of members of all the leading Protestant and Evangelical denominations, has of late years been engaged chiefly in erecting churchly buildings, and organising independent churches on the Apostles' Creed, as the only symbol of doctrine, with a body of church officers associated with the pastor, who is an ordained clergyman of some Evangelical denomination.

What has been accomplished within a few years has demonstrated that large congregations of working people can be gathered and systematically and carefully trained, so that they can intelligently and effectively carry on the Church and the Sabbath-school, and all the various evangelistic operations in use among Christian people, quite as well as the older churches of the regular denominations.

A few figures will give an idea of the more important results. There have been received into these churches for the people on confession of faith 2076 persons. There are in the Sabbath-schools 2500 children. In one of these churches ten years ago, there was in the Sabbath-school only two out of a hundred that were professing Christians, now there are twenty-seven out of a hundred that are church members. Ten years ago the contributions of the Church and the Sabbath-school together amounted to about £400, now the contributions aggregate £3000.

A particular account of the organisation and conduct of these Churches for the people is given in the annual published by the City Mission, entitled "Christian Work in New York," and furnished freely on application to the Secretary, Mr. Lewis E. Jackson, No. 50, Bible House, New York City, N.Y., U.S.A.

SUNDAY CLOSING FOR ENGLAND.—It is intended by the promoters of this measure to invoke the help of the Government in providing an opportunity for its discussion this Session. Our readers are asked to do all in their power, by prayer and by influencing their representatives in Parliament, for the progress of the Bill.

THE BOSTON MONDAY LECTURES.

MR. JOSEPH COOK closed the course of Boston Monday lectures for 1883 on Monday noon, March 26. A large audience crowded Tremont Temple, and at the close of the services many ministers and other persons, who have been constant attendants, shook hands with Mr. Cook, congratulated him upon the success of the course, and wished him success in his future work. At a meeting at the close of the lecture the recommendations of the committee were adopted, the old officers of the association were re-elected, and it was voted to invite Mr. Cook to give another course of lectures next winter, beginning in January.

Mr. Cook's "Prelude" at this lecture was on INTERNATIONAL DUTIES OF CHRISTENDOM.

Not reformation only, but regeneration is the demand of Christianity, of every individual, every people, and the whole unified family of the world's nations. As with the poet or the orator, it is not the inspired word that gives the inspired mood, but the inspired mood which gives the inspired word; so it is regeneration of the world that is to bring about its reformation, and not its reformation its regeneration. It is religion that is to be the basis of all really hopeful and permanent secular reform, and not secular reform that is to bring in by and by a perfect religion. My conviction is profound that the preaching of the Gospel must go before any pervasive self-supporting success of great philanthropies, even in Pagan nations, and that we must look for the world's regeneration in a large part before we can expect its reformation throughout any very wide and untroubled portion of its now vexed, fickle, and degraded populations. The perfection of civilisation will not be reached until the world, as a whole, learns the strange new wisdom which is not the cause, but the result of total and affectionate self-surrender to God.

1. The growth of Christianity is already so great that it is responsible for the maintenance not only of national, but also of international morality.

2. But international morality cannot be maintained without leading to the reformation of international law.

3. The united Christian sentiment of the globe has power to seize by the throat and break the neck of any unjust international movement.

4. As the slave-trade, piracy, and other international evils have been wholly or nearly abolished, so all the abuses that remain in the conduct of nations towards each other must be reformed.

5. It must be proclaimed unflinchingly that even commerce is not to stand in the way of righteous judgment in the affairs of nations.

6. It is chiefly, to-day, the inertness, the greed, and, occasionally, the moral unscrupulousness of nominal Christians, under temptation of gain, which maintain the worst international abuses of the world.

7. Commerce itself, in spite of its selfishness, and even on account of it, may become a chief support of international reform.

8. Communication between nations is becoming so swift and pervasive that it must lead to contact among nations, and contact to conference, and conference to concert, and concert to co-operation, and co-operation to virtual moral confederation.

9. What is wanted is not a union of Christian or even of Protestant or English-speaking nations; but an alliance consistent at once with self-government with the different nations, and with a cosmopolitan and Christian internationalism in their concerted action.

Not proposing the formal political confederation of Christendom; but its close moral alliance part with part, throughout the whole earth, I defend a number of definite measures that would secure, if carried, what scholars have been asking for these fifty years—universal peace, justice in the relations of strong nations with weak, and a general advance of Christian principle through all the departments of international law. Let me name twelve measures required by international morality:—

1. Arbitration in place of war in every case to which it can be applied; treaties including agreements to use arbitration before resorting to war.

2. The complete abolition of the slave trade on the sea.

3. The wider protection of the rights of neutrals in all wars.

4. Common laws as to copyrights and patents.

5. Postal union facilities of all kinds.

6. International bills of exchange.

7. The extension of international law to the Orient, Africa, and all the weakest nations.

8. Mixed courts, made up in part of judges from one nation and in part of judges from another, for the trial of international offences by individuals.

9. An international police.

10. A scholarly codification of international law as far as it now exists in a positive form, and the adoption of a brief summary code by the advanced nations.

11. A high court of arbitration in case of disputes between two nations.

12. An annual conference of nations with a view to facilitate intercourse, prevent abuses, and secure international peace.

When the suspension bridge was built at Niagara, the first thing done was to send a boy's kite over the chasm. It carried a silken cord across the roaring abysses beneath it, and that cord drew after it wires, and the wires cables, and the cables a bridge which now bears the thunder of traffic between two empires. Just so, this thought of a league of advanced populations; this idea that it is the duty of Christendom to maintain international morality, and thus to lay the basis for reform of positive international law; this scheme of an Anglo-American alliance; this theory that it is possible and desirable to bring all enlightened nations together in a cosmopolitan moral confederation, may be a kite flown in the winds of discussion; but, if you fly it often enough and long enough on both sides the Atlantic and Pacific, and in the northern and the southern hemisphers, it may ultimately carry over the roaring abysses of international prejudice a silken cord of Christian amity, and that cord may draw after it wires and cables, and by and by a bridge, which shall bear the weight of the heaviest international reforms, and uphold, at last, the feet of the white Christ, as he walks into the dawn of the millenial day.

THE THIRTY-EIGHTH RESCUED BAND.

WE had a lovely day to escort our forty fatherless and twenty-one motherless boys on board the Sarmatian, whilst she still lay in the Liverpool dock. Witnessing their delight in making themselves at home with their hammocks and new surroundings, took off the edge of their sorrow at parting. We hope to sail by the Sardinian on May 31, with another hundred.

Before returning we had the great privilege of joining in several of Mr. Moody's large meetings. Not for twenty years have we witnessed such a scene of soul-burdened men, as in the well fitted-up stalls of Hengler's Circus. After the application of the Ten Commandments to the consciences of 5000 men, one could only exclaim, "God was in that place." The abominable pride and fear of man seemed gone, difficulties were at once told out and met by the Word, and a "Thus saith the Lord." The workers and ministers seem most united; much anxiety for souls rests upon every face.

The beloved evangelists are more and more in dead earnest, and marvellously upheld in soul and body. Such scenes from day to day call upon every Christian in the land to adoring praise; for these indeed are the "greater things." It would be well for the lukewarm to go to Liverpool for a few days, and receive some of the blessed influences now pervading the work of the Lord there. A. McPherson.

ENGLISHMEN IN INDIA.

THE "May Meetings" proper may be said to have begun at Exeter Hall on Wednesday last week, with the anniversary of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society. The beginning was a most inauspicious one in the matter of attendance. There were just eleven persons present, exclusive of speakers and reporters. Either the meeting was very insufficiently made known, or the spiritual condition of our countrymen in India is not a subject in which the Christian public of London is greatly interested. The general opinion expressed by the speakers on the occasion was that English Christians need much education on this point.

The Secretary, Rev. P. Bannatyne, said the society had sustained heavy losses during the year by the deaths of one of its agents, Rev. Alexander Thomson, and of one of its best friends, Mr. Lockhart Gordon. It has now ten agents at work in different parts of India; by visiting tea-plantations, and other places where young Britons are employed, by personal conversation with them, and by such public services as can be held, these servants of Christ seek to carry the Gospel to our countrymen resident in the outlying and isolated parts of the Empire. These labours are by no means in vain. Mr. Bannatyne related two cases of unmistakable conversion, as illustrating the work of the Society.

Mr. Samuel Morley (Chairman) said the religious destitution to be found among our countrymen engaged in various business pursuits throughout India was a loud call to action on the part of the Churches at home. Referring to the Ragged-school Conference just held in another part of the building, he said the Churches would have to show much more activity and liberality both at home and abroad, if they would come up to the measure of their responsibility. The great want of the day was personal service more than money; this Society stood in need of both.

The Hon. A. F. Kinnaird said few Christians at home have any real conception of the religious, or rather irreligious, surroundings of these young Englishmen at work on tea plantations. Without the restraints of religious associations and privileges, with the lax observance or the utter neglect of the Sabbath, and encircled by all the degrading influences of heathenism, the results were too often of the saddest kind. In such circumstances the visits of these men of God, though too few and far between, were an unspeakable blessing. Many English families, having relatives in these distant lands, are, or ought to be, deeply interested in this work. The Christian conscience of the country generally needs to be awakened about it.

Some words of warm advocacy followed from Rev. H. W. Webb Peploe, who said that a similar effort was about to be inaugurated in connection with the Established Church. Sir William Muir, speaking from the experience of residence in India, said that if such agencies were multiplied a thousand fold, the needs of the country would not be met. The number of Europeans engaged in connection with business enterprises in the Indian Empire is rapidly increasing; and, considering their surroundings, it was little to be wondered at that many of them lapsed into practical heathenism.

An eloquent speech on behalf of the Society's operations, from Professor Graham, deserved, as indeed all the speeches deserved, a much larger audience. We trust when another anniversary comes round it will be seen that the interest shown in this important undertaking by the Christians at home is more in accordance with the merits of the case.

SEVENOAKS CONFERENCE.—This quarterly conference for pastors, teachers, and evangelists was held on the 6th inst. The morning was devoted to prayer, praise, exhortation, and reading of John xiii.—xvi. In the afternoon brief expositions were given on the above chapters by Mr. W. Lane, Mr. G. Hucklesby, Mr. Chas. Cook, and Mr. Geo. Brealey. After tea, reports of work were given by Messrs. Brealey, Cook, Brown, Chorley, Shrubsall, Maxted, and others.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

THE MOVEMENT IN LIVERPOOL.

[BY A CORRESPONDENT.]

ONE feature of the work during the past week so far surpasses all others in novelty and interest that, instead of sketching for the thousandth time the details of the many meetings, I shall refer to this with some little fulness.

There being no doubt now that an important work is being done, the attention of the workers has been directed to the best method of conserving the results. As in other places, the name, address, and Church connection of each inquirer is inscribed upon a card by the worker who deals with the case. These cards are dropped into a box constructed for the purpose, which hangs at the door of the inquiry-room, and which is cleared every morning, the details of the cases being entered in a book. At this point, in other towns, the immediate connection with the inquirer generally ceases. The name is allowed to sleep in the pages of the ledger until the heat of the movement is over, and then the inquirer is visited in his own home by some discreet worker.

That is a great advance upon former methods; but the Liverpool committee has improved even upon it. As soon as two or three hundred names were received at the office the following circular was sent by post to each:—

Hengler's Circus, April 11, 1883.

As Mr. Moody wishes a book to be given to each one who has received blessing during the past few days, he will be glad if you will call at the ticket office at the Circus, any time this week between 12 and 8. The most convenient hours will be from 2 to 5.

The project was then confided to three or four workers of exceptional ability and mature experience, who were asked to be in attendance at the Circus at the hours named. They were supplied with various books, such as Dr. Mackay's "Grace and Truth," Dr. Reid's "Blood of Jesus," and others, which they were to give at discretion to the different applicants. The response to these circulars has been so overwhelming that the ticket office has been literally besieged by professed converts. As a main object of the scheme was to bring the inquirer once more into contact with a worker, to deepen former impressions, to correct errors, to remove later difficulties, and generally to diagnose the case afresh for the inquirer's benefit and the worker's satisfaction, each interview became a private experience-meeting of the most searching and practical kind. The few workers who have been privileged to take part in this most sacred and delicate task declare themselves, beyond all expression, satisfied with the result. The new-lit joy, gratitude, tenderness, and enthusiasm in the young converts, make their work so enviable that in a few days, when the matter becomes whispered about—for at present it is almost a secret—the volunteers for this extra service will be far beyond the requirements. Meantime the workers engaged in it unanimously agree that it is the most joyful Christian service of their lives, and that these hours spent in the ticket office will abide among their most holy and gracious memories.

The secrets of these interviews are much too sacred to find their way into print. But to the student of human nature, as well as to the apologist for Christianity, the facts elicited have certainly been of commanding interest. Not all the divinity of the modern schools could so convince the rationalist of the existence of a Holy Spirit, of the love of God in Christ, and of the facts of Regeneration, as an hour spent behind the scenes at these informal confirmation meetings. The only further facts I feel at liberty to add are, that the professing converts belong to every class, and that up to the present time by far the larger proportion of those who have come to the circus for the books have been men.

The work last week seems only to have been limited by the size of buildings; apparently there is nothing to prevent a general awakening throughout the city, and, indeed, throughout the country, except a sufficient number of competent men, preaching Christ in suitable places and at suitable hours. Wherever there have been meetings, and there have four or five each day in addition to the central gatherings in the Circus, there have been results. Nevertheless, it cannot be affirmed that, however deep the work may be locally, it amounts to a general revival. And this for the reason named—the human agencies for a large and widespread movement are not in operation. It might be well if the attention of Evangelistic committees were directed to this point. By making a larger provision they would, at least, be in a position to secure a larger harvest.

But, as far as it goes, the work is of the most satisfactory kind. All the various meetings—for men, for women, for young men and for young women—are still in progress. The chief worker at all these services is Mr. Sankey. He is omnipresent. After singing twice, and possibly speaking and praying in addition, in the Circus, he goes the round of all the other meetings, and takes a greater or less share in the service at each. The other workers also have their hands very full. The inquiry-room is filled at the close of every service, and on every side one hears of the extension and deepening of the work. A prayer-meeting at five o'clock in the morning has been started at Byrom Hall.

SUNDAY'S MEETINGS.

Shortly after seven the Circus was packed with workers. The demand for tickets for this service was enormous, and the great building could have been filled, probably, three times over, as the addresses to workers are known to be as popular and useful as any of Mr. Moody's efforts. His subject was, "Be ye doers of the Word, and not hearers only." The tender and stimulating words of the Evangelist will be long remembered. The meeting for non-church goers at eleven was most fruitful, and the women's service at three was not less so. Mr. Moody spoke on "What must I do to be saved?" and, among other things, Mr. Sankey, assisted by two ladies and a male voice, sung what is to our mind the most exquisite and simple of sacred songs, "My Jesus, I love Thee." The later meetings presented no special features, but the men's meeting was a season of great blessing.

THE FAREWELL CONVENTION.

It has now been definitely arranged to close the present campaign with a great All-day Convention to be held in the Circus, on Thursday, the 26th inst. The telegraph is being actively employed to secure speakers from different parts of the country; and although the list is not yet complete, we need not assure our readers that Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey will provide the best possible fare for such an occasion. The following is the draft programme—subject, however, to alteration:—

10 to 11.—Temperance.
11 to 12.—Home Religion.
12 to 1.—Question Drawer.
3 to 4.—How to help Young Converts.
4 to 5.—Holy Living.
7.30.—Evangelistic Meeting.

LEEDS.

The past week has been one of much blessing. Many have found their way after each meeting into the inquiry-room, and it is hoped and believed that cases of true conversion are numerous. The Evangelist has been effectively aided by Mr. Vance, a young man from Belfast, of earnest piety, gifted with a fine voice, and the skill to use it in song. His solos produced a marked effect on the audience. The Mission will close to-morrow, and upon local Christians, ministers, and others will devolve the great responsibility of following up the work, and doing their best for the feeding and shepherding of the young converts. T. H.

Leeds, April 14.

THE NEXT LONDON CAMPAIGN.

It is now decided that the coming evangelistic campaign in London by Messrs. Moody and Sankey will commence, God willing, at the beginning of November next. We quote as follows from a circular just issued by the London Committee:—

With the view of carrying out the arrangements, the following gentlemen belonging to the Central Committee have undertaken to form Local Committees in the several districts.

Northern District.
Mr. W. T. Paton, 36, Milner-square, N.
Mr. A. O. Charles, 19, Alwyne-square, N.

North-Eastern District.
Mr. J. E. Mathieson, Conference Hall, Mildmay-park, N.

Eastern District.
Mr. Burnett Tabrum, 40, High-street, Borough, S.E.
Mr. J. T. P. Pechey, 59, Mark-lane, E.C.

Western District.
Mr. J. T. Campbell, Wood House, Shepherd's-bush, S.W.
Mr. J. H. Lydall, 65, Ladbroke-grove, W.

South-Eastern District.
Mr. Chas. B. Ker, 12, Eastcombe-villas, Blackheath, S.E.

Southern District.
Mr. M. H. Hodder, 27, Paternoster-row, E.C.
Mr. John Taylor, 5, Tokenhouse-yard, E.C.

Any information regarding available sites or halls, or any suggestions that will be helpful, will be thankfully received by any one of these gentlemen.

The Committee have been greatly cheered, and their expectations of blessing quickened, by the reports which have been received of the marvellous work wrought by God in the provincial towns in which the brethren have held meetings, the blessing received being much in excess of what was experienced during the previous visit in 1874-5. Not only have Churches been largely increased and strengthened, but Clergy, Ministers, and Christians of all denominations have been drawn more closely together and greatly stimulated to more determined efforts in the Master's service.

RICHARD WEAVER IN EDINBURGH.

MR. WEAVER gave a most appreciative address on Saturday week in Brighton-street Church, to an audience of some 1300, entitled "From the Coal-pit to the Platform." On Sabbath forenoon he spoke in the Drill Hall, and in the evening the building was packed by thousands of people, anxious to hear his farewell address. Basing his remarks on the words, "Go, and the Lord be with you," he spoke of the Goliath of drunkenness, of infidelity and scepticism. He pleaded with thrilling earnestness that everyone should turn to Christ, and do all in their power to pull down the strongholds of sin, and to walk as becometh the children of God. At the after-meeting many souls were blessed, and the inquiry-room was again filled with the anxious.

On Monday a farewell soiree was held, when Brighton-street Church was filled to overflowing, some 1500 being present. A letter was received from the Rev. J. Macintosh, who was unable to be present, who spoke of the vast amount of good done during Mr. Weaver's visit, and wishing him continued blessing. Mr. D. Napier occupied the chair, and said that the number of souls won to Christ had been greater than was even expected. After Mr. Adams, missionary, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Maxton, and Mr. Veitch had addressed the meeting, Mr. Cuthbertson said that, from personal observation, there had been no less than 200 professed conversions during Mr. Weaver's visit. He then presented a purse of sovereigns to the evangelist for his family at home, collected by the ladies of the choir, as a slight token of the high esteem in which his work is held.

Mr. Weaver, in reply, pressed on all the necessity of following Christ with all their heart. Many hundreds shook hands with Mr. Weaver, while on leaving for Manchester next morning there was quite a crowd to see him depart, passengers and porters standing listening as Mr. Weaver sang "Come to the Cross and be saved." Mr. Weaver intends to visit Edinburgh again. He leaves behind him on every occasion many souls brought to the Lord. D. C.

Notes and Comments.

In our next issue we shall give a supplementary list of "May Meetings." Any notices that have not been sent to us should be forwarded at once. Copies of The Christian for April 5, containing the first list, can still be had.

As will be seen by our evangelistic announcements, a Gospel Temperance Mission is arranged to be held in Exeter Hall from May 27 to June 3; it will be conducted by Messrs. Francis and T. E. Murphy. We hope the friends of Temperance in London will rally round the workers on this occasion, so as to ensure a widespread blessing. Those who can help in the service of song should communicate with Mr. Orchard, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

We trust as many of our provincial readers as can do so will attend the Farewell Convention to be conducted by Messrs. Moody and Sankey at Liverpool, on Thursday next. Bishop Ryle, Canon Wilberforce, Rev. Evan Hopkins, and other well-known friends have promised to take part. Such practical subjects as Temperance, Holiness, How to reach non Church-goers, Rescue Work, &c., will be dealt with; and there will be Mr. Moody's "Question Drawer." Ministers can obtain reserved seat tickets on application to Mr. Thomas Leigh, Hackins Hey, Liverpool.

A correspondent calls our attention to the importance of action in securing the non-delivery of parcels on the Sunday, in connection with the proposed "Parcels Post." This is of great importance; certainly the postmen all over the country should be spared any additional labour on the Lord's Day. Indeed, the time has come when the whole question of Sunday postal delivery should be reviewed, and agitated with determination and force. If London can do without it, surely the provinces may be expected to do so, especially if by an extra delivery on Saturday night, or some such arrangement, pressure were removed, and the inconvenience reduced to a minimum.

The spirit of unrest in the matter of religious beliefs, and of chafing at tests and formal creeds of any type, which is the prevailing feature of the Church life of to-day, seems to have entered into the Presbyterian camp, and asserted its claim to be heard. At the meeting of the London Presbytery on Tuesday last, the adjourned debate on the relation of office-bearers to the Confession of Faith was resumed. A resolution to the following effect was moved by Dr. Donald Fraser, and carried after much discussion by a majority of twenty-two:—

Whereas the Westminster Confession of Faith, while held in high and deserved honour in this Church, as setting forth that system of doctrine which this Church with unabated firmness teaches and maintains, is found to be no longer so well suited in form and expression as it was in former times to the actual condition and wants of the Church; it is overtured by the Presbytery to the Synod to take the relation of the Church to this subordinate standard into careful consideration, with a view to such prudent and timely action as to its wisdom may seem meet.

This overture took the place of one which had been moved by the Rev. W. Dale, and seconded by Dr. Edmond, to the effect "that the Confession failed by excess, and still more by defect," to be an accurate statement of the doctrines of Scripture.

Our attention has been called to the influence of the Volunteer movement over the minds and habits of young men connected with pious families, and in many cases with Christian work. Parents and ministers do well to point out to such the danger which there is arising from evil associations, and also the want of harmony which exists between the warlike spirit infused by such a movement and the principles inculcated by the gospel of peace. Young men engaged in the work of the Sunday-school, and other Christian institutions, can scarcely fail to meet with much in such pursuits calculated to hinder them in their cultivation of the high moral and spiritual tone requisite to success in the service of Christ. Caution and consideration are certainly called for on the subject.

We would call early and special attention to the annual public meeting of the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, which will be held (D.V.) in Exeter Hall, on the evening of May 2. The venerable Earl of Shaftesbury is to preside. The subject is of an urgent nature, and painfully involves the honour of our country in the eyes of the world. Of more importance still is our solemn responsibility as a nation in the sight of God, and every effort should be used to make this year's meeting eminently successful. The goodly array of speakers engaged to take part ensures a powerful protest against the accursed traffic; this it may be hoped will go far to stimulate increasingly vigorous action in support of the Society's operations.

The question of Emigration as a solution of the problem what to do with pauper children, continues to occupy a large share of public attention. The President of the Local Government Board, Sir Charles Dilke, received a large and influential deputation the other day on the matter, urging that the Department should renew its sanction to the Guardians paying the cost of sending friendless children to Canada. It was stated, in reply, that the Board was quite disposed, under proper restrictions, to look favourably on the application. Stress was properly laid on the necessity for using every precaution to ensure suitable homes for the children on arriving there.

There can be no doubt that Canada affords wide scope and ample resources for meeting the difficulty of our over-crowded population. The following extract from a letter written by Lord Archibald Campbell, brother of the Marquis of Lorne, is interesting on this point:—

Lord Lorne, the present Governor-General of Canada, may surely by this time be allowed to be a judge of the capabilities of Canada, and most decidedly would not so enthusiastically love the land and its people, or long for the continual inroad of his fellow-countrymen, did he not really and truly believe that by so doing they would lay the corner-stone of their future success.

Before many years have flown, the Government of this country will have to purchase probably whole regions as a refuge for the destitute of this country—England, Scotland, and Ireland—in order to prevent actual starvation, and give thousands the chance of blessing those so sending them, and providing them, at all events, with some means of gaining a livelihood in "Greater Britain." Vast tracts of rich soil do not exist for nothing, and those who have seen these lands of the Far West and do not advocate emigration, must be worse than fools. "All day long, often," my brother told me when journeying toward the "Rockies," he wondered "why no inhabitants were there," so rich and lovely was many a land they passed through. I refer to the Governor-General of Canada's journey of last year.

The following telegram sent to the High Commissioner for Canada from the Minister of Agriculture of the Canadian Government shows also the wide field there is for occupation in the country to which his lordship alludes:—

Farm and general labourers, mechanics, and domestic servants, urgently wanted in old provinces of Canada, as well as Manitoba and British Columbia.

Mr. A. H. Baynes, Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society, has written in reply to a statement made by Lord E. Fitzmaurice in the House of Commons the other night, to the effect that the missionaries on the Congo River were said to be only traders under another name. Mr. Baynes is anxious that it should be widely known that it is one most stringent rule of the Society that "under no conditions are our missionaries upon the Congo allowed to engage in trade or commerce." This fact is of the more importance to be distinctly understood as the agents of this society are the only missionaries settled at Stanley Pool.

The Annual Report of "The Bombay Y.M.C.A." has just reached us. It is gratifying to find that in that far distant capital so valuable a work is being carried on with vigour and success. The number of members and associates upon the register is 375. A good work is done by members of the institution in connection with the harbour and Prince's Dock services, which are held on Sundays, and on Thursday evenings, on board one or other of the ships, as announced from time to time. The programme for the past year commenced with an address by Mr. Joseph Cook, of Boston, on "Prayer," and seems to have been well sustained throughout.

The petition presented to the House of Commons the other night by Sir William M'Arthur and Mr. W. S. Allen, from Wesleyans, on behalf of the Sunday Closing Bill, contained 590,332 signatures, upon one continuous roll of paper, 4832 yards, or 2¾ miles, in length. The roll weighed 3 cwt. 50 lbs., and was 12 feet in circumference. The names were attached in double columns, and though allowing for gaps here and there, the list of names, if single, would extend a distance of five miles. This gigantic petition taxed the energies of five men to carry it into the lobby of the House.

The activity shown in regard to this matter of Sunday closing among all the religious bodies, and by multitudes outside of them, augurs well for the attainment of the object in view. The passing of such a prohibitory measure is in the highest degree desirable from every point of view. It would be a boon to publicans themselves, as well as to the working classes and to the public generally. It is a cause for deepest thankfulness that so much interest has been awakened in the question, and sympathy so widely gained in its favour. Not only the friends of Temperance, but all who are interested in the moral and social well-being of our country, do well to use their influence on the side of this movement. Anything which tends to uphold the sanctity of the Lord's Day, and to check the growing spirit of disregard to its Divine appointment as a day of rest, is worthy of earnest and vigorous support from all who desire the nation's weal.

It is proposed to organise a Monster Demonstration on Whit-Monday in Hyde-park, in support of the Bill for closing public-houses on the Lord's Day. The object of this proposal is to furnish evidence of the feeling of London inhabitants, that the Metropolis should on no account be excluded from the beneficent operation of the measure. It would, indeed, be a mistake were it to be so; nowhere are its provisions more needful or desirable than in the vast area of the Metropolis itself. The demonstration to be effective, should be supported by all sympathisers with its object, and should command their heartiest co-operation. Multitudes can be brought together for demonstrations of other and far less worthy kinds; it will do good to show that they can also be commanded in the interest of pure and righteous aims.

The duty of English Christians in reference to the state of Egypt was a subject for consideration at the meetings of the Upper House of Convocation last week. The Bishop of Winchester stated that—

Notwithstanding the late war in Egypt, the English were looked up to with great respect in that country, and he thought that British Christians should now seek to extend the national influence by the more stable arts of peace.

The Bishop of London moved, "That this House, recognising the responsibility which the late events in Egypt have laid upon the people and the Church of England, of endeavouring to further the cause of Christianity in that country, views with sympathy every well-considered effort towards promoting the better education and the deeper spiritual character of the Coptic Church."

At the suggestion of the Bishop of Exeter, words were added to the effect that the House earnestly prayed for the Divine blessing to rest upon the work which the Committee had undertaken in relation to the matter.

The condition of Egypt demands the consideration of men who have influence in political and other public circles where such subjects are either little understood, or regarded with indifference. The following statement relative to the Soudan is from the pen of M. Vassion, the French Vice-Consul at Khartoum:—

Since the departure of Sir Samuel Baker and Colonel Gordon, and the death of Gessi, all the good which these great men did has disappeared. Slavery flourishes more than ever in the valley of the Upper Nile, to furnish eunuchs, servants, and concubines for Stamboul and the other Turkish cities. This situation calls loudly for the attention of Europe. Civilisation must not be treated as a vain word; it is a duty to free these disinherited members of the great human family from their miserable state. All possible means must be adopted.

BRITISH WOMEN'S TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION.—The presentation of the Sunday Closing Petition, announced for April 11, is deferred to the end of May. Filled sheets may be sent in up to May 21. Instructions and sheets may still be obtained by application to Mrs. Bradley, Memorial Hall, Farringdon-street, E.C.

INDIA.—Principal Hastie speaks as follows, in a singularly powerful paper, in the Church of Scotland Record: "The visible disintegration of Hindu society, the contemptuous disregard of caste, the open contumely poured everywhere upon the old gods, may have but too evidently confirmed the low sad moan of the Brahmin Gurus that the Kali Yug, the 'black iron age' of universal degeneracy, indeed had come. No student of history can fail to be struck with the extraordinary resemblance between the period of the decline and fall of Paganism in the Roman Empire and what has been going on during the past century in India, and is in most vigorous movement to-day. 'History does, indeed, repeat itself,' according to the law of similar causes being invariably followed by similar effects; and in the record of the first four Christian centuries in the ancient world of the West, we have given the outline of the future fate of India."

BIBLICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

OUR blessed Lord, in Matt. xii. 40 (R. V.) declares that "as Jonah was three days and three nights in the sea-monster, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Now, if he were crucified on a Friday p.m., and rose again on our Lord's Day before it was light, it is quite clear that the literal fulfilment must have fallen short, which could not be. The anachronism, so to speak, must have been some error of man's. Will you kindly explain the apparent discrepancy? C. L. E.

The difficulty is met by remembering that our Lord spoke according to the Jewish mode of reckoning time, which differed, in common with the custom among other ancient nations, from our own. Any part of a day with them was counted for a whole day, that is, as a day and a night, twenty-four hours; and as their day commenced at six p.m., our Lord's death having occurred at three p.m. of Friday, the remaining three hours would be counted, according to the regular custom of the Jews, as one day; Friday to Saturday, six p.m., the second day, or, with them, two days; Saturday, six p.m., to Sunday morning, when He rose, would, therefore, make three days and three nights. This is a simple matter of fact, and not a mere hypothesis, or human device for explaining our Lord's words, as abundant illustrations of the same ancient mode of computing time will show.

Will you kindly explain the difference between reckoning yourselves dead with Christ, and being dead with Christ? M. G. S.

Shanklin, March 14.

Our correspondent will perceive that there is a great difference between a fact realised or apprehended and appropriated, and one not so laid hold of and applied. Every true believer in Christ died with Him, as asserted by the Apostle in Romans vi. 2, 8. As a matter of fact, therefore, representatively, Christ's death to sin was ours, we died in Him; see also Ephesians ii. 5, 6. But some fail to see this so clearly as the Word of God puts it. Faith stops short in them of bringing this great truth to bear upon daily life; we are to reckon this glorious fact as being really so, and to count it for its true value in relation to Christian experience, and conflict with evil. It is indeed a vantage ground for the child of God to occupy, and a position he cannot afford to lose through lack of spiritual perception, or through unbelief.

"G. W. B." calls attention to the paper on "Unanswered Prayer," which appeared in our issue for March 29. Referring to the writer's remarks on selfish prayers and the instances of them quoted by her, he says: "The first of these I cannot find—'Send the multitude away.' I doubt whether there is such a passage in the Bible." If, however, our correspondent refers to Matt. xiv. 15, he will find the reference intended. It is an interesting suggestion he makes as to the second case—"Send her away," that these words are too harsh a rendering of the Greek, which is the same as that used by Pilate when he wishes to release Jesus, so that "Let her go," or "Set her at liberty," would be a better translation. The sense is, according to this rendering, "Grant her petition, and so let her be free to go."

Another correspondent, referring to the same article, notices "M. L. D.'s" reference to the request of the disciples in Acts i. 6, as "one of the captious and curious questions our Lord would not answer," characterising it as an "unlawful desire." He sends us the following extract from a lecture delivered the other day on this passage by Dr. A. A. Bonar, which presents it in an altogether different light: "I do not think the question was prompted by an idle or vain curiosity, nor that it sprang from carnal ideas of the coming kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. They knew well what the prophets had spoken about that kingdom, e.g., 'It shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains,' &c. &c. &c. (quoting also other parallel passages). And now that Christ's sufferings were past, and there was no cloud of coming trouble to dim the brightness of his sky, their intercourse with Him was of such a delightful kind, their joy so full to overflowing, that they quite naturally began to think, 'Is this the beginning of the kingdom? Can this be the dawn of that glorious day predicted by the prophets of old, and which is surely to come to pass?' It was a most natural question, and their disappointment may be imagined when our Lord gently but firmly tells them, 'That is in the hands of the Father, and there is a work for you to do for Me on the earth in the meantime,' &c."

A VOICE FROM THE PRISON CELL.

THE following letter has been received by the Rev. J. G. Bass, Chaplain King's County Penitentiary, Brooklyn, U.S.:—

"Dear Sir,—Please read this at your leisure. I am a young man twenty-five years old, born in this city, where I have since made my name notorious. I received an early Christian education, and when a boy was placed in a Christian family, where I had all the advantages of a good home and kind friends. While still a boy I was exhorted to give my heart to God, and the necessity of taking such a step while young was pointed out to me. But I, taking up with other considerations and bad companions, said to myself, 'Not now; when I am twenty-one then I will be a Christian.' I little dreamt, in my boyish ignorance, that each succeeding year would place me farther and farther from God, and that the "twenty-one" I so anxiously looked forward to would peep through a grated window and see me seated in a prison cell, clothed in a convict's garb, crushed in heart and hope.

"Oh, what a world of shame and anguish I would have saved myself and friends had I but heyed the voice of reason, and accepted Christ as my guide through life! Ever since the time when as a boy, I said to myself, 'Not now, another time,' the devil has been steadily weaving about me a network of sin, which at last has bound me so strongly and securely that nothing in heaven or earth, save the omnipotent hand of God, can draw me out of it. All my life I have been putting off this important work, and the result is, I have wasted and abused all the resources God gave me for better purposes. I have spent my life in sin and have made myself an outcast from society, and have laid up against me a long account to answer for in the end.

"I have led a life of crime extending over a period of ten years. I have tasted of crime to the fullest extent, and have reaped what a life of sin can give; and after long and painful experience I have come to the conclusion that there is no peace or happiness in such a life, nor any hope for the future except through God. I am tired of struggling to live without God and religion, and relying on my own strength of will to resist temptation. I fear to leave this prison and go out in the world without God. I have, I trust, taken the first step on the home journey. I have come to God in prayer and faith. I am trusting in Him. I ask your prayers and wish you to request the prayers of Christian congregations for a poor, weak, sin-sick convict.—Sincerely yours. "C."

"P.S.—I thank you for your sermon three Sundays ago (Job xxxiii. 27, 28). Thank God for the promise, 'He will deliver.'"—New York Witness.

MRS. AMANDA SMITH.—We learn from the first number of a "Monthly Paper," issued by Miss Mason, of the Kilburn House of Rest, that Mrs. Smith, writing from Bassa, Liberia, West Africa, says she rarely now has an attack of fever. She arrived in Bassa in time for the Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and speaks of much manifested blessing from the Lord during the session. She adds that what is wanted is a mighty baptism of the Holy Spirit upon all the Churches, and asks for the earnest prayers of the Lord's people.

RAGGED SCHOOLS AND THEIR WORK.

AN important Conference on this subject was held in Exeter Hall on Wednesday last week; it was largely and influentially attended. Rev. Dr. D. McEwan having asked the Divine blessing on the proceedings of the day,

Lord Shaftesbury, as Chairman, briefly introduced the subject. He claimed for the Ragged School Union that it had taken off the London streets, and placed in the way of earning an honest livelihood in this country and the colonies, no less than 300,000 children. That, moreover, only represented a fraction of what the Union had done for the destitute children of the Metropolis. It is now beyond dispute that the School Board, with all its advantages, cannot deal effectually with this peculiar class; the ragged-school can alone meet the necessities of the case. We want not only to maintain but to extend its operation to every part of our great city. After forty years' experience, said his lordship, I am more than ever convinced that, under the blessing of God, we have chosen the only path that will lead to the great results we desire to see.

A paper was then read by Mr. H. R. Williams, on the general subject of

RAGGED SCHOOLS—PAST AND PRESENT.

We have in type some of the more salient portions of his admirable and comprehensive review; pressure on our space, however, compels us to hold it over for the present.

The first resolution, moved by the Duke of Westminster, was as follows:—

That while recognising with gratitude the great extension of elementary education throughout the country, this Conference expresses its earnest conviction of the need of maintaining and extending the Ragged Schools and their affiliated Missions, as centres of Christian benevolence and important factors in the prevention of crime, and heartily commends the efforts of the Ragged School Union in that behalf to the support of the community.

In supporting it, his lordship said the great results achieved in the past were ample justification of the movement. Other ameliorating agencies had now come into play, such as the Elementary Education Act, the Blue Ribbon crusade, &c. But these did not cover all the ground. Speaking of educational work in Chester, with which he had been specially connected, he said the proportion of children passing through their hands who turned out well was most encouraging. An excellent work was done by a training ship stationed at the Menai Straits, on which they were able to receive boys from Manchester, Leeds, and other large towns in the kingdom. His lordship quoted official statistics to show that a marked diminution of juvenile crime had resulted from the work of the Ragged School Union and cognate agencies such as industrial schools. But after all that had been accomplished much remained to be done, and the present was no time to stay the hand from this noble work.

The Earl of Aberdeen alluded to the importance of the work in the Sunday-schools. It is to this agency more than anything else that we must look for an extension of practical godliness among the masses of the people. It is a work of the highest importance, and ought to be conducted by the most capable and earnest teachers that can be secured. The resolution was briefly supported by Mr. John Macgregor.

As a representative of the Ragged School Union of Liverpool, Mr. McDiarmid described the unenviable condition of that city with respect to death, intemperance, and crime. At present they had in operation seventy-nine day, Sunday, and evening schools, with an average attendance of 10,000 children. He regretted that there was now a decline in the enthusiasm that had produced so many voluntary teachers in the past. He referred with approval to a recent effort made by Mr. S. Smith, M.P. for the city of Liverpool, through which some 850 children are fed and taught every Sunday.

Mr. Menzies (of Stephen the Yeoman Ragged School) asserted from experience that the raw material to work upon was as plentiful as ever. He strongly urged those engaged in the work to stick to their buildings; they would find plenty to do. If needful the Ragged School Union would help them.

A short, but able and eloquent paper, was next read by Canon Fleming on RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

After a touching account of the condition of the neglected children in the early days of the movement, the Canon proceeded:—

"The founders of ragged-schools believed that religion is essential to all reformation, and that there can be no true or complete education without religion. We are here to-day to affirm this same conviction without abating 'one jot or tittle.' We believe that our best hopes for the nation rest upon a sound religious education for the people, an education which shall be mainly directed to teaching the child, first of all, that he is God's child, then, that he is ours.

"Let it be understood that we never put forward Sunday-schools as if they could either clash with or supersede the day-school, where regular education can alone be given throughout the week, but to supplement them.

"When all the day-schools of this country shall be absorbed by the "Board," ragged-schools and ragged-school teachers will still be needed. The prevailing tendency of the hour is to separate the sacred from the secular; while knowledge and information increase, we see the result of this unhappy divorce in less reverence for parents, the passion for low theatres, the utter disregard of the Sabbath, and the thirst and zest for pernicious literature. Unless the Church is up and doing, it is easy to predict what the future will be.

"Christianity is not merely a theory, but a power—a working-power. As we look upon the mass of social evil and moral leprosy festering in the heart of society, undermining the Throne, the Churches, Law, Government, Property, and Life itself, we are well-nigh paralysed; and we stand and ask—What is to stem all this? what can meet it? what can stop it? The answer is—Only the Spirit of Christ, sweeping all impediments from our selfish hearts, and animating us to effort. With Christ the work can certainly be done. In his Divine grace put forth upon the heart of man or child, there is an illimitable power, before whose inspiration no evil thing can stand. This is the outcome of all that is preached; and they who practise it in the lowest, darkest places of the world, are the true saints of God, and the true friends of man."

Mr. Samuel Morley moved a resolution calling for the extension of Sunday-school work and other religious agencies among the poor and destitute. While heartily upholding the great educational work of the School Board, he felt the overwhelming need of Sunday-schools to supplement it with those influences that lead up to the enjoyment of a higher and holier life. At the same time the work of the Ragged School Union should stimulate to more personal and private effort. Looking at the ascertained statistics of church accommodation and church attendance, he urged the opening of a large number of Mission-rooms and other places where the spiritual life of the ragged children can be fostered.

The resolution was seconded by Rev. C. H. Kelly. Alluding to a remark of a previous speaker, he said that there might be an apparent decrease of crime among juveniles, and an increased practice of many forms of vice. There was no work more needed or blessed than that now under consideration, and it had the warmest sympathy of all other Sunday-school organisations intended for children of a higher social rank. The resolution was also supported by Mr. Richard Johnson, of Manchester, who said that the School Board system would not gather the children to school on the Lord's Day; it could not clothe the naked or feed the hungry; it could not give any adequate Christian instruction; it could not visit them in sickness or minister consolation to the sick and dying. All these things can be done and only done by loving, sympathetic Christian men and women. Only those who have given their life to such deeds of kindness and mercy will reap the reward.

A hearty speech in favour of ragged-school work followed from Mr. B. Clarke, of the Sunday-school Union. He drew attention to the special need of looking after the young girls of the poorer classes, and appealed for more teachers, from among the higher ranks, for the ragged-schools throughout London and all our large cities. He hoped the work would take a fresh start from the present gathering.

Miss Hastings, of the Whitecross-street Mission and member of the London School Board, said that institution, however good its work in one department, could never take the place of the ragged and Sunday-schools.

No man in London or anywhere else is better fitted to deal with this subject than the next speaker, Mr. George Holland, of George-yard. He said he would have ragged-schools increased on the right hand and on the left. Many of these destitute children in the metropolis are compelled to be very migratory in their habits; what was to become of them if the ragged-school work ceased? A gentleman in the meeting interjected the remark, "Make their fathers work." Mr. Holland pertinently replied that many of the waifs did not know who or where their fathers were. The social and moral condition of many of the poorer parts of London was simply awful. Besides that, there was often no work to be had. There were many poor women who toiled from one week's end to the other, not excluding Sunday, for the miserable sum of five shillings!

An elaborate and well-reasoned paper was read by Professor Leone Levi, LL.D., on CHARITY AND THRIFT.

"The primary object of ragged-schools, said the Professor, is doubtless religious and educational, but it is impossible for those who are brought into contact with many of the most degraded and destitute, and who see their sufferings and privation, to be altogether indifferent to the calls of charity. And so the friends of ragged-schools are often charged with being too lavish or indiscriminate in giving. But the charge is unjust, first, because they have not too much to give, and second, because they can be trusted to do it wisely. Is it wrong to administer relief in cases of real want? Certainly not. At the same time it cannot be too firmly asserted that the object of ragged-schools is not to pauperise, but to lift up—not to foster a dependent spirit, but to inspire self-reliance. Whatever may be said as regards giving direct relief, there can be no doubt about the use of every means to promote thrift, and I am sure I am expressing the opinion of all friends of ragged-schools when I say that the first and most important benefit we can confer on the poor is to help them to obtain good and convenient places of living. A small crowded lodging means immense personal discomfort, the frequent resort to public-houses, the loss of all delicacy and habits of propriety.

"It is clearly within the functions of the Ragged School Union to urge the most beneficial, as well as the most economic, method for extending house accommodation for the poor. There is an immense waste going on in the household expenditure of the poor from an excessive use of articles good in themselves, the frequent use of articles which impart no strength to body or muscle, the purchase of the necessaries of life by small quantities at higher prices, and the practice also of purchasing on credit. A greater diffusion of knowledge of the chemistry of food and cookery would go far to economise the scanty resources of the poor. The ragged-schools offer special facilities, too, for promoting Temperance, and the workers are most earnest in the advocacy of the same. Nothing can replace the action of the ragged-school workers in encouraging children to learn, early in life, the duty of sacrificing present enjoyments with a view to future benefit. Long before the modern penny banks were named, or the Post-office savings banks organised, many ragged-schools had their little savings banks, and many a penny has thus been saved to meet real wants. Savings banks are real benefactions to the poor, and they should be fostered in connection with every ragged-school.

"As centres of instruction and benevolence it is fit that their action should be extended to grown-up lads and girls in daily employment, and that the schools for children should evolve into Youths' Institutes; and what a blessing if the thousands who pass through our Sunday and ragged-schools were, by their means, retained within the pale of salutary influence after they have entered into adolescence."

In moving a resolution on the lines of Professor Levi's paper,

Earl Cairns said that the state of the dwellings of the poor in London and other populous towns was a question lying at the root of the evils that afflict society. It was deplorable to contemplate the conditions under which many poor families lived; the practice of morality under such circumstances was almost a miracle. There was little hope for an improved state of things until some radical change was wrought in this respect. The noble Earl also highly commended the virtues of temperance and thrift, and urged that emigration would better be carried out privately than by the Government. Short addresses were given in succession by Mr. Badcock, Rev. Paxton Hood, Mr. J. Edmunds, Mr. R. Lemaire, and Mr. Gent. The interesting proceedings closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the noble Chairman, who, in response, urged the friends of ragged-schools to more strenuous efforts than ever in the prosecution of their beneficent mission.

AMERICAN NOTES.

THE reports of revivals in our exchanges have been so numerous that it is impossible, within the space at our command, to make even a concise summary. An abstract of the reports of the churches which have received recently over twenty souls on confession would fill this page, and probably a larger space —Christian Intelligencer.

In reference to numerous revivals which have taken place in America since the beginning of 1883, the New York Observer says: "Some of these revivals have been in progress for several months past, but most of them have followed the Week of Prayer. The fact ought to be a stimulus and encouragement. If any people have fallen into a habit of thinking that the day for revivals has passed, and that we are not to expect the Church to be advanced by their agency, let them remember that they must be revived, if they are now cold and lifeless."

An extensive revival prevails at Middleboro', where special union meetings have been held under the direction of Mr. S. M. Sayford, State Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. The Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon and Mr. Russell Sturgis were present, and so great was the interest shown that no church edifice was large enough to hold the crowds that attended. Meetings have been held at noon in the straw shops, where a number of conversions have taken place. One Sabbath class of twelve young ladies have all decided to become Christians.

The Christian Union says that "the report of the Police Matron at Brooklyn, New York, shows the wisdom of having a matron in the police department. 160 women and young girls have been committed to her charge during the past month. The matron visits the families of women in prison, supplies food and clothing to the needy, finds homes for those who would have to return to the streets, gives advice and encouragement, and makes the unfortunate committed to her care understand that they are not beyond the pale of human sympathy. The police justices approve of the work."

The American correspondent of a Berlin paper, Evangelisch-Kirchlicher Anzeiger, mentions a good work among Chinese labourers in some parts of the United States. At Boston the Chinese Sunday-school established by Miss H. Carter is attended by upwards of 100, chiefly washermen. So great is their appreciation of the benefits of the Gospel that they have subscribed 114 dollars (£22 16s.) recently in aid of a scheme for evangelising the Chinese in Hong Kong who are in the habit of travelling to and from America. This subscription has been forwarded to the American Board of Missions, who originated the scheme. At St. Louis, the members of the Y.M.C.A. carry on a similar work with much blessing among the Chinamen of that city.

The Baptists are erecting a church in Salt Lake City, almost under the shadow of the great Mormon Temple.

Delaware, Ohio, has been visited with a very gracious revival of religion. Within a few weeks, some 460 have professed conversion, more than 200 of whom are students of the Ohio Wesleyan University.

A revival of religion is in progress at New Colfax, Washington territory. It began during the Week of Prayer, and has continued to the present time. The weather has been very severe, and the travelling difficult, but each meeting has been more than well attended, and the interest intense.

Much interest is felt in Washington in the McAll Mission in Paris. A large meeting was held recently in the Congregational Church to further the objects of the cause. The friends of the Mission propose to give it a more systematic character, and for this purpose favour a national organisation which shall have the work in charge. One scheme proposed is to have a president and an executive committee of twelve, of whom eight shall be residents of Philadelphia and the others representatives of Washington, Brooklyn, Syracuse, and other cities which take especial interest in the work.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

A remarkable awakening has taken place at various missionary stations along the Moskito Coast. Natives have poured in to seek comfort and advice for their anxious souls. More than four hundred have joined the Moravian Church, and the brethren feel convinced of their sincerity.

At Karata, 211 persons have applied for instruction previous to baptism, and so many came to hear the Word of Life that a large tent had to be erected outside the church to protect the overflowing auditory from the sun.

MAJOR COLE IN NEW ORLEANS.

Since the first week in January we have been favoured with the presence and labours of Major J. H. Cole. He began work in the First Baptist Church. Notwithstanding rain almost daily for six weeks, the meetings were well attended by Christians seeking a closer walk with God. The Major seemed led of the Spirit to labour with this class, rather than the unconverted, and most blessed has been the result of so doing to the members of the Church.

During the meetings confessions were often heard, followed with deep breathings of soul after God. Denials of self found expression in the abandonment of the use of tobacco, taking up of neglected duties, seeking reconciliation, and the turning of sinners from sin to righteousness.

During his stay here Major Cole held meetings in the Central Congregational Church, Wesley Chapel, Austerlitz-street, Baptist Church, Leland University, Straight University, New Orleans University, St. Ann's Asylum, Poydras Asylum, St. Charles-avenue M.E. Church, South, American M.E. Church, besides addressing large meetings under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The Major spoke often three and four times a day. All who were intimate with him in labour were impressed with the deep, abiding, fragrant spiritual life he lives. That his life may be spared many years for labour is our earnest prayer.—Fraternally yours, M. C.

EVANGELISATION OF THE MASSES.—Sir,—The London Diocesan Conference at its late sitting appointed a Committee to consider and report on the above subject. I shall be thankful to receive from the secretaries of any societies engaged in this work the following particulars: (a) Name of Society or Association, with number of members, and special object it has in view. (b) Mode of operation, whether by open-air preaching, Mission services, or civilising agencies. (c) Copy of last report (if any). (d) Hindrances found, by experience, to evangelistic work. It is proposed, when this information is collected, to invite representatives of some of the societies to meet the committee for conference on this all-important subject.

THE FRENCH OUVRIERS.

VARIOUS meetings in different parts of the metropolis have been addressed by the Rev. R. W. McAll, and his coadjutor, Mr. Newell, on the work among the working men of France. In the course of his address at the Central Noon Prayer-meeting, Mr. McAll read the following letter received from his agent in Lyons: "There is a workman who has been a constant attendant upon the meetings at one of our stations in Lyons. He always took his place immediately in front of me, and fixed his eye upon the speaker with a wonderful intensity. Two or three weeks ago he came up to me at the close of the meeting, and said, 'I have come to say adieu.'

"'Oh, you are leaving the neighbourhood?' 'No, sir, but you see me for the last time.'

"'On what account?' 'I came here to get good, and I get only misery.'

"'Misery, but how?' 'Yes, it is so. Before I began to attend I was calm. But what I hear troubles me. I see my sin, which becomes black, black, which mounts, mounts, and chokes me.'

"These were his very words. They took me by surprise. I was moved; and in my emotion I threw my arms around him. 'Oh, my friend!' I cried, 'return. Do you not perceive that it is God who is speaking to you? Listen to Him, instead of withstanding and hardening yourself. Do you not know that Jesus Christ is come to heal those who feel themselves sick, to save those who feel themselves lost? Soon you will know Him better, and He will give to you his peace. Promise me to return.' He promised. I would not then press him further. The true sense of sin is so rare in our poor country that it is necessary to guard against any adverse breath that might quench the spark. The Holy Spirit was working in his soul, and I felt that I must, for the time, leave it with Him, persuaded that He would open the man's eyes to the divine infinite mercy. Meanwhile, I bore him on my heart in prayer.

"Last week I again visited that station, and this man, faithful to his promise, sat before me, his eyes fixed on me like a gimlet ready to run me through. I spoke of the first and second Adam, of the position of each hearer through the first Adam, as in a state of suffering, wretchedness, and sin, and of the heritage of a new humanity in the second Adam, through the Holy Ghost—reconciled, received in grace, a new heart prepared by Him for new obedience, believing, hoping, living, finding even in suffering the token of fatherly love. I closed with the line of a hymn—

'The tempest itself will guide us into port.'

I was greatly moved, and so was the whole assembly. I felt that what I was saying for one of my hearers went home to, and impressed them all.

"The instant the meeting was over, the man came to me, took both my hands [very expressive in France: often done by a new convert when first he has found Christ], and said, 'I have understood to-night what I never understood before, namely, that Jesus Christ is a Saviour. Heretofore, that was for me only a word, a mode of speech, now I see Him as such.'

"I said, 'You need yet one step further. Do you understand that he is your Saviour?' He reflected a moment, and then said, 'Not yet.'

"'Then ask of Him to make you understand that also.'"

Here, said Mr. McAll, our good missionary had to leave him for the time. We await, prayerfully, further tidings.

FUNCHAL, MADEIRA.—Dear Sir,—We had a good time with the Channel Fleet. There were three teas at the Sailors' Rest, one for the temperance men of H.M.S. Sultan, in connection with Miss Weston's Royal Naval Temperance Society, and the other two for any men who wished to come in. The Admiral in command kindly let the men know that there was a "Rest" on shore to which they could go. The squadron may visit us again on its return from St. Vincent, Cape de Verde. William George Smart.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

BRISTOL.

THE pastor of the City-road Baptist Chapel (Rev. W. J. Mayers), assisted by Rev. A. Bird, of Sandown, Isle of Wight, has had a week of continuous Gospel services. The friends are now rejoicing over not a few who have turned to the Lord.

MR. THOMAS HOUSTON IN CLONMEL.

Mr. Thomas Houston, the blind Evangelist, revisited Clonmel, Tipperary, last month, and held a series of Gospel meetings, which were greatly blessed to many in the town. At the close of the Mission there was a praise-meeting, where very encouraging testimony was given.

SHEFFIELD.

Mrs. Joshua Kaye has conducted special evangelistic meetings in Sheffield. Much blessing has been given to the Word. Stout-hearted men and women have been melted under her Gospel addresses. The good work is still going on, although Mrs. Kaye has left us for a season.

J. K.

NETHERTON.

Rev. Silas Henn lately held a series of services at the Messiah Baptist Chapel, Cinder Bank, Netherton. The attendance has been good, the interest deep both among believers and unsaved. The former have received a special quickening, and a number of the latter have professed to receive the forgiveness of sins.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.

A five days' Children's Mission was held last week at Kingston-on-Thames, by Mr. E. T. M. Dennes, of the Children's Special Service Mission. Many children were spoken to individually in the after-meetings, and we believe that young hearts have been given to the Saviour. A praise-meeting was held on Wednesday last, when Mr. E. Salisbury addressed the young Christians.

W. H. Sessions.

KINGSTON, ONTARIO.

The Salvation Army is working with great success in Kingston, Ontario. The assistant minister of the St. George's Cathedral has thrown himself into the work, having himself received much spiritual good. He is preaching the Gospel to his people with great earnestness. The work of the Army is affecting the liquor selling business. F. E. Grafton.

Montreal.

CORSICA.

Colportage work is being carried on in Corsica under the direction of M. Ruben Sailleus. On an average 250 Bibles are sold per month. The colporteur meets many persons living in mountain villages, who have obtained their Bible or Gospel at one of the International Exhibitions, and are endeavouring to frame their lives accordingly. Many Corsicans are dissatisfied with the "religion of the priests," and thus a door is opened for introducing the true Gospel.

ALLOA, N.B.

Times of refreshing have lately been experienced in Alloa. In February Mr. John Mitchell held a series of meetings for children in Park-lane Chapel, which were very much blessed to the young people. These were followed by services in King-street Hall, conducted by Mr. D. M. Pittendrigh. After five weeks' continuous work the results lead to the conclusion that such success has not for a long time past been experienced in Alloa. At the closing meeting of the series held in Greenside Mission Chapel, the testimony to the good which had been done was most remarkable. Men and women of all ages as well as young lads stood up and told what God had done for their souls during the past month or two.

Mr. Pittendrigh began another series of services in connection with Park-lane Mission, on Sunday, the 8th inst., and there are already tokens of blessing.

GREENWICH.

Rev. Walter and Mrs. Bradbury and Miss Haire have begun a two months' Mission in the densely-populated parish of St. Peter's, Greenwich, at the request of the Vicar, Rev. Storer Clarke. It is a unique district; not a single house keeps a servant, except publicans, and there is no other place of worship within its bounds.

Y.M.C.A., WEST BRANCH.

A very successful effort has been made at Burlington Hall, in the West District, to bring young men under the power of the Gospel. Just at this time the large business houses with which this Branch is surrounded are full of young men, who have recently come from all parts of the kingdom. A Mission was arranged for, to be conducted by Mr. E. J. Kennedy and Mr. Stanley Smith. God gave his servants manifest power in the addresses which they delivered to the large and interesting audiences; every night through the week at the after-meetings many gave evidence of having found the Saviour. Some of the cases were of a most interesting character.

VALE OF LEVEN, DUMBARTONSHIRE.

Mr. Marsh, of the London Evangelisation Society, has been labouring in this locality for the last three weeks. At the close of each meeting all the workers were occupied, frequently till a late hour, dealing with the anxious. As the result, we have already the names of several hundreds who profess to have got blessing.

A remarkable feature of the work is the large number of young men who have been brought to Christ, and the earnestness with which they have entered into the work. Also the number of households that have got blessing. We know of several where the husband and wife and grown-up family have been converted.

Free Manse, Bonhill, N.B. T. Collins.

THE MOUNTAIN EVANGELIST.

Mr. G. O. Barnes, who has been working as an Evangelist in Kentucky for the last few years, commenced work in this country by delivering a Gospel address at Hoxton Hall on Sunday week. At the invitation of Mr. Noble, he made a warm and earnest appeal to the unconverted, founded on the gracious invitation, "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Mr. Barnes' daughter sang for him with considerable skill and acceptance. Between twenty and thirty grown-up persons—and over forty, including children—arose, one after another, to declare that from that hour they would accept the yoke of Christ, that they then and there lay down at his feet their heavy burden, and received in exchange the easy yoke of the Lord Jesus.

HELENSBURGH.

Sir,— We lately had a series of four meetings for boys and girls in the United Presbyterian Church here. Mr. Mackeith, Mr. Steel, and Mr. Pratt, from Glasgow, have given most interesting addresses, accompanied by lime-light views, illustrating the "Pilgrim's Progress. About a thousand young people have been present each night, and no one accustomed to work among them could fail to be impressed with the quiet and attention which Mr. Mackeith succeeded in securing.

At the close of the last meeting an invitation was given to all those who believed they had really received the Lord Jesus as their Saviour to adjourn to the lecture-hall of the Church. A large number responded, varying in age from ten to about sixteen years. While they were being shortly addressed by Mr. John Colville, of Cambeltown, it was evident from their faces that the great majority were most deeply in earnest. Those working amongst the young have been greatly cheered and encouraged, and we believe that so far as they are concerned greater definiteness of aim will characterise their work in the future.

It is interesting to note that this week concluded a whole year during which these devoted servants of the Master have been carrying on such meetings in different places, week after week without interruption.

William Sloan.

NED WRIGHT AT NOTTING-HILL.

This evangelist has held a week's meetings in the Congregational Church, Lancaster-road, Notting-hill. Each night the numbers increased, and on Friday, at the concluding service, the place was crowded with an audience composed chiefly of the working-classes, for whom the addresses of the speaker were more especially adapted.

Gifted, as he undoubtedly is, with powers of speech and persuasion, Mr. Wright riveted the attention and interest of his audience, as he told out the message of the Gospel in simple and earnest language. But the most impressive parts in his addresses were always those of an autobiographical character.

It is, of course, impossible to speak much of results, but the spirit of earnestness and inquiry which pervaded the assemblies, could not fail to be observed. After-meetings were held at the close of every service except the first, and a large company remained behind to pray. Several professed to have found peace and joy in Christ during the meetings; while believers were stirred up to more energy and devotion.

NEWPORT, MON.

About nine years ago Mr. Opie Rodway preached at Raglan, on "How long halt ye between two opinions?" and a young son of a publican at once decided to serve the Lord. He soon began to preach in the streets and elsewhere, and God blessed his work. He had little education, but he went to preach at a Baptist chapel at Maindee, near Newport, Mon., to a congregation who met in a hired room. They asked him to become their pastor. He smiled at the idea, saying he had not been to college yet, and was not qualified for such a position. However, he visited them again and again, and they said he would do very well for them, and begged him to settle among them. He consented, and the Lord gave his blessing, so that every week souls were saved. Being asked how it was, in spite of his disadvantages, that his labours were so fruitful, he said: "It is very simple. I and my people believe in prayer, and every Sunday we meet before each service, and early in the morning and at the close at night; we have five prayer-meetings in the day, and God hears and answers." This Church and its pastor are still being used in winning souls.

ABERDEENSHIRE.

During the past nine weeks, Messrs. Anderson and Malcolm, Evangelists, Aberdeen, have conducted services in the villages of Mintlaw, Old Deer, Stuartfield, and Fetterangus. Much religious interest has been awakened, and has not only been sustained for more than two months, but has continued to increase. Large audiences have attended the meetings night after night and week after week, suffering scarcely any diminution on the most inclement evenings, and have listened with fixed attention to addresses which for accuracy and pointedness of Gospel truth and spiritual unction in delivery, were of a very high order. An important part of the services were the after-meetings, to which all were invited to remain for praise and prayer and personal conversation. Considerable numbers embraced this opportunity and many found peace and joy in believing. Others with erroneous or confused views regarding conversion, the new birth and justification, have been brought into clearer light and fuller Christian liberty.

As a result of the services at Mintlaw, a women's meeting for prayer and Bible reading, conducted by themselves, has been begun, and also similar meetings for young people under the direction of an elder of the Free Church. In Fetterangus and Stuartfield the regular Church agencies have been very much stimulated.

Mr. Henry Thorne, April 21 to 30, Macclesfield.
Mr. T. E. Murphy, May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.
Mr. Francis Murphy, May 27 to June 3, Exeter Hall, London.
Rev. W. H. Aitken, April 22 to May 6, St. Matthew's, Bayswater; May 26 to July 2, South London.
Major and Mrs. Evered Poolen Mission in the Drill Hall, Kingston-on-Thames, from April 13, for seventeen days; Frome, May 1.
Children's Special Service Mission.—Mr. Banaster at Southsea, from April 17; Mr. E. Arrowsmith at St. Matthew's Schools, Church-road, Brixton, April 16 to 20 at 7 p.m.; Mr. Lidstone at Highbury-hill, Chapel School-room, Highbury, April 16 to 20 at 7.30 p.m.; Mr. Spiers now at Brixham, South Devon.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY IN MANCHESTER.

(By a Correspondent.)

THE results of a fortnight's Gospel Temperance Mission, conducted in Cook's Circus, Manchester, by Mr. Francis Murphy, assisted (during the first week) by his son, have been such as to fill the hearts of all friends of practical religion with deep gratification and thankfulness to God. Audiences of from 2,000 to over 3,000 have nightly assembled to listen to the glad tidings of Christ's deliverance from the drink curse, and a rich harvest of new pledges has been obtained.

The workers have been drawn mainly from the élite of the Manchester Temperance bodies. Mr. T. E. Hallsworth, one of the hon. secs., has been indefatigable in enlisting recruits from the Band of Hope Union; three hundred of them immediately responded to his call. Many prayers have been offered up to God for a blessing on the work, and the greatest harmony has throughout prevailed. The most effective service has been rendered by the Manchester Sacred Song Association.

The Mission itself is due to the initiative of Mr. Peter Spence, J.P., our nearly octogenarian temperance pioneer, whose faith in Mr. Murphy's power for good and his ability to draw the masses induced him to offer to take the whole financial risk. The American Consul, the Hon. Colonel Shaw, presided at the first gathering, and following him a succession of distinguished chairmen were delighted to honour Mr. Murphy by taking the chair at his meetings. Amongst these were Mr. J. Barlow, J.P., ex-Mayor of Bolton; Mr. Alexander McDougall, jun., one of the hon. secs. of Mr. Moody's Committee; Alderman White, of Macclesfield; Mr. Alexander Forrest; Mr. R. B. Brierley; Dr. Rayner; Mr. J. C. Needham, treasurer of the Boys' Refuge, &c. Mr. McDougall's address was remarkable for its earnest appeal to blue ribbon workers to stand loyally by Jesus, the Captain of their movement, and the only Saviour of the lost.

During the course of the Mission Mr. Murphy has addressed a large number of outside meetings: the gatherings of employés of engineering, railway, and other works during the dinner hour having been specially interesting and valuable in results. The remark of the Manchester Guardian, when referring to the Circus addresses, that "it would be difficult to mention any other public assembly where speaker and audience are bound by a closer tie," is, if possible, still more applicable to these workmen's mid-day assemblies. Mr. Murphy's genial and exuberant bon hommie, his frequent personal but absolutely stingless remarks, his constant humorous sallies, which, so far from destroying the serious impressions of his hearers, scarcely give them time to thank God that they have another side to their nature, before he has touched the highest cords of their being by some heart-melting incident; and last, not least, his manifest yearning desire to bless and ennoble every poor desolate soul about him;—all these influences, brought to bear upon an audience of working men, fascinates them in a very remarkable way.

At the Manchester Alum Works, where the address was given in the open, there were, in addition to the workmen, a large group of women and a smaller one of children. In the most natural but touching way Mr. Murphy was drawn to the latter, and, placing his hands on their heads, spoke of them in words that immediately won not them only but all hearts in the assembly. The appeal from them was irresistible, the result of course being a large number of temperance pledges.

Altogether, Mr. Murphy is a most refreshing example of the rich variety of God's works in nature and providence, and if it were only for one incidental result of his work, the softening of the somewhat hard feelings towards Irishmen, which his addresses have produced in many English hearts, it is to be hoped he may be spared among us for many long years to come.

It will not surprise the readers of THE CHRISTIAN to learn that when the chairman of the Manchester Committee proposed to Mr. Murphy the use of an optional "thorough-going" ribbon (the ordinary blue ribbon with a thread of white silk running through its centre) discountenancing the use of tobacco and other narcotics as well as alcohol, he at once, in the most unprejudiced spirit, accepted the porposal. His sagacity has been confirmed by the fact that up to Friday evening last, the 13th inst., 4977 of these "thorough-going" ribbons had been asked for at the Manchester Mission, and so many requisitions for them have been received from distant parts of the country that the committee have been glad to accept the offer of the Anti-Narcotic League, Peter-street, Manchester, to supply them to all applicants (at cost price). In the face of the statistical investigation amongst the Lincolnshire Good Templars, which demonstrated the fact that the smokers are, on the average, over five times more liable to break their pledges than the non-smokers, it is impossible to condemn the new protest against this fruitful cause of intemperance. In view also of the sadly benumbing influence of this narcotic upon the conscience, it becomes a serious question whether the policy of some well-meaning Christian men in providing smoking rooms at working-men's clubs as a counter-attraction to the "drink," is not really ministering to the prince of this world rather than to Him who came to seek and to save that which was lost. If even strong-minded men like Carlyle, with his terrible animus against evils and abuses, felt the lethal influences of tobacco, who can doubt the injury which the ordinary rank and file among us are likely to receive from it?

The number of pledges and ribbons taken at the Manchester Mission up to Friday evening last, the 13th inst., are as follows: Pledges, 5691; blue ribbons, 7675; "thorough-going," 4977.

MR. T. E. MURPHY IN BELFAST.

During the last week this young Evangelist has been conducting Gospel Temperance meetings in Belfast with much success. The Irish Christian Advocate of Friday gives a lengthy and admirable report. The first meeting on the afternoon of Sunday week was specially intended for those in the humbler walks of life. With respect to this meeting the reporter says:—"At the close of his address Mr. Murphy appealed to all present to come forward and sign the pledge. About as remarkable a sight as it has ever been our lot to witness in a Temperance meeting was the result of his invitation. Hundreds came forward to the table and signed. The majority were men; but there was also a large proportion of women who took the pledge, and it would need a harder heart than we possess not to be affected by the tears of gratitude which poured down many a wife's face as she saw her husband pledge himself to do better in the future. When we considered that the pledges there taken meant more happiness, comfort, and peace to the mothers and little ones of many a home, we could not but thank God for a movement which accomplished such things. The Bible-women and missionaries, who had worked for months to bring that meeting together, cannot but look back upon their labours with satisfaction when they know that 539 persons there resolved to put the curse of drink from their homes.

"The total number of those who took the pledge during the first four days was 6687. There have been no such meetings for spirit, size, enthusiasm, and present results for the promotion of Temperance held in this country since the days of Father Matthew as those which have been held this week in Belfast, under the auspices of the Irish Temperance League. The committee and officers of the League have been indefatigable in their endeavours to make them a success; it must be a gratification to them that so many persons are signing the pledge."

Mr. W. Forbes has been conducting a series of meetings at Taunton; there have been large audiences, and a number of pledges have been taken.

A correspondent calls attention to a paragraph emanating from The Hampshire Independent, reflecting on the inconsistency of Major Evered Poole, as a Blue-ribboner, in voting for a publican at the recent election of guardians in Southampton. The Major candidly replies that he deserves the reproof, but explains that he carelessly signed the paper without first acquainting himself with all the names, or he would not have voted as he did.

THE WEE FOLKS AT THE CRECHE.

THE following extracts of a letter we have just received from our good friend Mrs. Hilton, of Langveld House, Burdett-road, E., and the Stepney Crèche, will, we trust, evoke much practical sympathy from our readers. Only those who are engaged in such work know the anxieties it entails; when to these are added difficulties of a monetary kind, the burden is one that other Christians, with fewer responsibilities, may well count it a privilege to bear:—

"You will regret to hear that we have had a time of sorrow and distress in connection with our dear children. At the beginning of last month we lost our dear little Dollie, the doorstep baby: she died of congestion of the lungs, after a few days' illness. In the following week eleven fell ill with a bad type of measles; of these we lost three. I can scarcely tell you what a time of suffering it was for all. When the worst was over we had to consider the question of expense, and found that it was a ruinous item added to our other liabilities. Funds have been very scarce for the last three months, so that our need at the present is greater than at any former period. We should lose hope utterly did we not call to mind the loving kindness of the Lord in times past.

"Yet we are not without some brightness. Our country house at Feltham is as an oasis to us, especially at this time; we are going to send our little invalids there when the weather is a little milder. Our eight elder girls are improving in every way, and thoroughly enjoy their country life. We can take sixteen at the country branch, and thirty-five or forty in the Home at Stepney Causeway, besides the large daily attendance of 80 to 100 in the Crèche. These are but a very small proportion of those who need shelter and care, and to whom we have constantly to refuse admission.

"The time for holding our bazaar (May 21-23) is approaching; at present we have not received many contributions. Lady Brassey has kindly promised to open it."

PRAYER FOR OUR LORD'S APPEARING.—DEAR SIR,—I have had several communications on this matter, and have come to the determination of starting the Union for Prayer for the United Kingdom, on the same principle as Mr. Richardson's Bible and Prayer Union. I am now prepared to supply copies of the Melbourne Invitation at 4s. per 100; a suitable hymn sent out with it at 2s. per 100, if wished for; members' cards at 1d. each. I am obliged to make these charges to cover expenses of printing, postage, stationery, &c.—Yours in the blessed hope, C. MELVILLE PYM.

A MEDICAL MISSION IN FLORENCE.—I have lately visited the most interesting but little known Medical Mission carried on in this city by Miss Robarts, assisted by several English ladies and by an Italian doctor. On the Piazza Cavour in sunny and cheerful rooms I found the day's work about to commence; nearly 100 persons gathered to attend the preliminary services, and thereafter be prescribed for. The address of the young Italian was listened to with apparently deep attention, and the work seemed one thoroughly to commend itself as worthy of support. Miss Robarts has hitherto carried it on very much at her own expense, but, growing in her hands, she now feels constrained to accept the offerings of friends, and should any of your readers feel disposed to help on this good work in Florence, their gifts for the purpose will be cordially received.—Yours truly,

JOHN P. GOLDSTREAM.

IRISH FISHERMEN.

A FRIEND who sent a parcel of Christian literature to Mr. Quigley, of Dingle, Kerry, Ireland, in response to his appeal for the Irish fishermen, has received a letter from Mr. Quigley, of which we extract some portions:—

"They are a fine set of fellows, and as Popery reigns supreme here, I thought it advisable to start some effort for them. Previously there was nothing but the publichouse for them. The rector and other friends are now with me in working for them. We have the use of the Protestant school-room for the evenings when they are not at sea. On Sunday afternoons we have Bible-classes in the same place, and a large number attend the church. It is really cheering in this wild, out-of-the-way place, to hear them sing. We mainly use 'Sacred Songs and Solos,' because they like and can join in them so well.

"Language cannot describe this unhappy country, caused mainly by Popery and whiskey, with their retinue—filth, rags, and ignorance. It is more than one dare do to give a tract in the streets. I beg an interest in your prayers for our little cause."

FIVE MONTHS IN BERLIN.

HERR VON SCHLUEMBACH'S FAREWELL.

THIS good brother left us to-day. He will be greatly missed by those whom he has been the means of bringing to Christ. Between three and four hundred letters testify to the remarkable influence he has gained in his comparatively short stay of five months in Berlin. He has made a good many friends also amongst the believers, most of whom kept aloof at first, for fear of unwished-for innovations.

The poor were the first to open their hearts, and understand the Gospel message he had for them. A poor woman came to a lady, saying: "Madam, you gave me a Bible some years ago; it was very kind of you, but it remained a sealed book to me until Herr Von Schluembach came and taught us how to use our Bibles." Thieves have confessed their sin, and returned the money stolen. Drunkards have broken with their bad habits and companions. Sins of adultery and perjury were confessed privately to one who had not been ashamed to confess openly from what an abyss of sin the Lord had rescued him, thus encouraging the most hopeless and forlorn to seek advice and accept the Saviour's call of mercy.

No wonder that the parting of these new-gained souls in the north of Berlin should have been particularly affecting. It reminded one of Paul on his way to Jerusalem taking leave of the disciples who were so unwilling to let him go (Acts xx. 32—38). There was much weeping, but there were also words of power and life to give courage and consolation to fight the Lord's battle; there was even a smile of amusement when he said, in his quaint way: "It is time I should go, lest the work might begin to taste of Schluembach; that would do it no good, for the Lord's work must be kept clear of all human predominance." Promises were exchanged of continued intercessory prayer, and a German pastor from East Prussia, who heard Schluembach for the first and, to his great regret, probably the last time, called upon the audience to kneel down and commend to the keeping of God his faithful servant, who had been so greatly blessed in his work for Berlin.

A theatre, holding from 1500 to 1800 persons, was filled to its remotest corner next day in another part of Berlin, and there it was suggested by Herr von Schluembach, in a very delicate way, that no thanks were due to him; next to God, the English and American friends must not be forgotten who sent him out and supported him faithfully with their prayers and their worldly goods.

Very different in its audience, but not less profitable we trust, were a few meetings, previous to those just mentioned, for Bible study, at Count Bernstorff's house and my own. Drawing-room meetings of that kind were not known in Berlin before, but they were well attended—the higher circles thus becoming acquainted with the Evangelist's work.

The last evening of all was of great and, I am sure, lasting importance for Berlin. A Young Men's Christian Association, with Baron Rothkirch as president, was on that occasion introduced to the religious world of Berlin, which had been full of misgivings concerning this last and novel undertaking of the daring American, but was now evidently surprised to find a beautifully organised institution sprung up as it were over night. A meeting place for young men of every condition in life is appropriately furnished, and a secretary found in a young German merchant, who spent some years in England, and is a decided Christian. Laymen of the best society are ready to give their help in the work, as far as time permits.

A ladies' committee is formed to give its moral support to the institution, to make it known at home and abroad, and to help in forming a useful library, after having seen to the furnishing of various rooms. Last night the ladies' committee, or rather its head, the Countess of Waldersee, provided refreshments for 250 invited guests. By giving her name, her far-reaching influence, and her prayerful interest, she has rendered the work an incalculable service. While encouraging the timid by her coming forth, she is likely to check many unfavourable remarks, as will also her husband's support; his Excellency has allowed himself to be inscribed as the first honorary member of the new institution.

I will not enlarge on Herr Von Schluembach's eloquent address at this last successful meeting; it gave an important finishing touch to his five months' stay amongst us; it made many hearts join in the wish and hope of seeing him return before long.

Berlin, April 5.

CORRECTION.—In the short paper, in our last issue, on the work of the Crystal Palace Bible stand, it was stated that "Six pounds would post 1000 Gospels, either to Ireland, Vienna, or Spain." The correct estimate of this cost is five guineas.

THE LAFORCE ASYLUMS.—A friend writes: The succcessor of the late Mr. John Bost, of Laforce, France, Pasteur Rayroux, is coming to England this month to give an account of his work. He is to hold a drawing-room and other meetings. When in France last summer, in company with two friends, we visited the Asylums at Laforce, and can testify that it is a deeply interesting work. All letters to Pasteur Rayroux should be addressed, care of James Nisbet and Co., Berners-street, W.

STATE REGULATION OF VICE.—A prayer-meeting (for women only) is to be held at five o'clock on Friday, April 20, in the Westminster Friends' Meeting House, St. Martin's-lane, W.C., whilst the Right Hon. James Stansfeld is urging in the House of Commons a resolution against State protection of an exceptional nature being accorded to vicious men. There will be gatherings for prayer the same day at Buckingham-gate, Mildmay-park, Spitalfields, and Hornsey.

SCANDINAVIAN TEMPERANCE HOME.—In sending to us a copy of the last balance-sheet of this Home, 89, Leman-street, Whitechapel, Miss Hedenstrom says: "I am sure that if our friends knew the need for such a place, and the great blessing the Home has proved to hundreds, they would thank Him for his goodness in inclining their hearts to come forward and help. We are now out of debt. Praise the Lord! We ask our dear friends who have shown such kindness to poor seamen, to continue to pray for them, and to remember God's work here."

HOME FOR DESTITUTE LITTLE GIRLS, EASTBOURNE.—Dear Friends,—I am rejoiced to say that the removal of our Home for Destitute Girls from Plaistow last September to Eastbourne has proved a great success. The health of the children is excellent, and those around us are beginning to take an interest in the work. Altogether, I am greatly encouraged; but I still need the sympathy and help of my old friends, especially now that expenses are heavy. I have four empty beds, which I should be glad to fill if funds would permit. I look to Him who knows our need to send us a supply through his stewards.—Yours most truly, J. S. Lee.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

PORTUGAL.

A PROTESTANT corporal in the Portuguese Army, named Manuel Joachim, having refused to go to confession when ordered to do so by his military superior, has recently been condemned at Oporto to 18 months' imprisonment on the complaint of the Catholic chaplain.

SPAIN.

The Swiss Pastor, Segundo Fabio, says his newly-founded church of La Salvacion Gratuita, in Saragossa, Spain, already numbers fifty members, and new hearers are present at nearly every service. Although very poor, they contributed in 1882 £16 4s. 3d. A school of forty-five children is taught by the pastor and his wife, no funds being available for the salary of a teacher. One of the scholars is employed every Saturday in leading blind beggars about the town, thus earning the school-money for himself and younger brother, two francs monthly. The gratuitous services of a Christian lady would be gladly welcomed by these zealous workers.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.

Invited by seventy-one heads of families in the country of C——, Signor Angelini of Bassignana, preached Christ for an hour and a half in a Roman Catholic Church the other day, to about 1500 people. He would have remained there some days had not the Syndic closed the church, though everything proceeded in the greatest order, save that now and again there was an exclamation, "Viva the Gospel," "Down with the impostors," "We desire the evangelical parson." The day after the people resolved to open the church by force, but they were restrained from their purpose by being told that they must provide otherwise, and that Signor Angelini or his colleague would return. The hope is expressed that the wishes of 2000 people will be respected, and that neither priest nor Syndic will impose themselves on people who desireto be emancipated from error.

CANNES, ROME, AND POMPEII.

Having sojourned at Cannes for some weeks during the present winter, it may be helpful to Christian travellers generally to state that the English residents in this part of the "Sunny South" bring their Christianity with them; while seeking health of body efforts are made to carry on and revive the work of God among every class. There is a united weekly prayer-meeting held at the German church, which is well attended. A well-known Gospel tract writer holds a weekly Bible-reading, which has proved a great blessing to many. There are three other Bible-meetings each week for ladies, and female servants; and besides these an English lady exhibits a magic lantern displaying Scripture scenes to large Italian and French audiences, who are most attentive as the subjects referring to the Word of God are being explained. There is also a good work going on at Nice, and other places along the Riviera, which are all growing year by year to meet the increasing demands of invalids.

Rome is not forgotten by our gracious God, for in this stronghold of Satan's power a few faithful men and women are plowing up the fallow ground and sowing the incorruptible seed of the Kingdom amid all that is false and dark. I do not care to mention names, but from personal observation I feel constrained to notice the splendid work which dear Mr. and Mrs. Wall are doing among the sick, the poor, and the most degraded, who are greatly neglected in the so-called "Eternal City."

Signor Capellini is doing a noble work among the Italian soldiers, and others also (Mr. Pigott, Signor Rosetti, &c.) are likewise proclaiming God's salvation far and near to the Italian people.

I have just been to Pompeii. Painful it was to see there human bodies unearthed after a period of over 1800 years, when the once famous city was buried beneath the debris of the eruption of Vesuvius (A.D. 79). The position and expression of each, except one, betrayed the death-agony; one face seemed so placid as if "asleep in Jesus." All, however, await the resurrection day! Geo. Saunders.

Letters to the Editor.

CLEANSING BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

Sir,—In his letter on Mr. Hopkins's article, Mr. Brooke appealed to "all who are interested in this inquiry to rise above the very unsatisfactory teaching of commentaries as to this point." Would that your correspondent, Mr. Sturdy, had taken the exhortation to heart! The doctrine of the blood is to be explained by the types; and as soon as that is recognised it may be generally assumed that the German commentators—supremely ignorant of the types—are unsafe guides on such a theme. Dean Alford, so far beyond them in many respects, has, as Mr. Sturdy notices, been misled by them here, and his note on 1 John i. 7 is one of the blots upon his most valuable commentary.

Mr. Sturdy states the question thus: "Has the blood of Christ power to sanctify our hearts, when applied by the Holy Ghost through faith?" I venture to take exception to this statement. Sanctification by blood is almost a lost truth in the Church of God, and none who have learned it from God have failed to find in it a new motive to a life of godliness. But this sanctification is not partial. It was to sanctify his people, and not their hearts only, with his blood, that "Jesus suffered without the gate." The Christian is not a sinner who has a holy heart, but one who is himself holy. A saint is God's favourite name for the believer, and saint means simply holy; there is but one word in the Greek. Sanctification by blood was no mere fiction or dogma with the Israelite. Upon it depended his right to approach a holy God, or even to dwell in the camp illumined by his presence. And if this truth were generally apprehended by his people now, it would produce a new revival in the Church of God.

But I crave attention to the fact that this is not the truth of 1 John i. 7. Cleansing is not sanctification. These writers always confound them. Scripture never does. It is only the saint—the believer who has been sanctified by the blood, and who is as holy as the blood can make him—who can possibly walk in the light of God. But because of what he is, and where he is, as a sinner in a world of sin, he needs the cleansing of the blood. The Israelite was sanctified by the blood of the covenant; but yet he needed the blood of the sin-offering to cleanse him. The blood of the burnt-offering, sprinkled upon the people, was for sanctification (Exod. xxiv. Comp. Heb. ix. 19, x. 29); the blood of the sin-offering, sprinkled on the mercy-seat, was for cleansing (Lev. xvi. 30; 1 John i. 7).

Mr. Sturdy argues that because cleansing is mentioned in relation to a deep disease like leprosy, it must have the meaning Mr. Hopkins has assigned to it. But this is to confound the cleansing of leprosy with its cure. He does not imagine, surely, that the sprinkling of a few drops of a sparrow's blood cured the leper! But it availed to cleanse him.

I venture to restate the question thus: It is not whether the believer is perfectly sanctified by the blood, for that is certain; but whether they who are thus sanctified, need none the less this cleansing; whether the saintliest of saints be not ever dependent on the continual efficacy of the blood to cleanse. It is not a question of words, but of deep and solemn truth. It is a question as to the heinousness of sin, and the holiness of God.

The Author of "The Gospel and its Ministry."

Dear Sir,—It is difficult to argue against a proposition which is not clearly defined; and one may observe, both in Mr. Sturdy's doctrine of sanctification by Christ's blood, and in the passage which he quotes from Miss Havergal, the same indistinctness which was noticeable in Mr. Hopkins's statement.

Mr. Sturdy says: "Has the blood of Christ power to sanctify our hearts, when applied by the Holy Ghost through faith? I believe it has." These words are certainly capable of a meaning in which all true Christians will agree. The Holy Spirit enables the children of God to believe that they were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, not only from the curse of the law, but also from the dominion of sin and of Satan, and this belief has a purifying influence on their hearts. Numbers of passages of Scripture may be quoted in harmony with this doctrine; as, for example, our Lord's own prayer, "Sanctify them by thy truth; thy word is truth." The sanctifying power is the power of the Holy Ghost, but the truth is the instrument by which He chiefly works upon the hearts of believers. And among the truths by which He works, the truth of redemption by Christ's blood holds a pre-eminent place.

If this is all that Mr. Sturdy means in the sentence above quoted, it is much to be desired that he, and those who think with him, should say so distinctly, that we may not be fighting in the dark when we are in reality agreed. But if not, it is equally to be desired that they would tell us distinctly and unmistakably in what way not apprehended by Christians generally they consider the blood of Christ to be connected with the purification of the hearts of believers; and in what way, different from that which all allow, the Holy Spirit applies the blood of Christ (as Mr. Sturdy says) to this purpose.

No one would think of denying that the word καθαρίζω, and its cognates, are sometimes used in the New Testament in the sense of sanctification; but that this was not the meaning of cleansing by blood in the types of the law is evident from Heb. ix. 22: "Almost all things are by the law purged with blood, and without shedding of blood there is no remission." And in order fully to appreciate these words, the whole passage to which they belong (Heb. ix. 1. x. 22) should be studied.

Mr. Sturdy refers to the cleansing of the leper, But it is to be observed that in Lev. xiv. the leper is first cleansed with blood, and then anointed with oil; signifying that those who have been cleansed from guilt by the atoning blood of Christ receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, by whom they are sanctified (see Acts. ii. 38; Rom. viii. 1-14; Gal. iv. 16-23).

The only reason, so far as I am aware, that has been alleged for interpreting the word "cleanseth" in 1 John i. 7 in the sense of sanctification, is that of Alford, who says that the word must bear in this verse the same meaning as in verse 9, and that in the latter verse it is plainly distinguished from the forgiveness of sins. But this is a very feeble argument, for—as I noticed formerly—one of the commonest characteristics of the Hebrew style is what is known as parallelism; and in parallelism we find often the same idea repeated in other words. This very sentence contains in its first clause an example of it—"We deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." So also in the same epistle, chap. i. 5, ii. 8, 27, 28, iii. 22. A reason such as the above is a very poor one for setting aside a clear, obvious, and forcible meaning of a passage, to make way for an obscure and mystical sense.

I would not for a moment question the reality of Mr. Sturdy's or Miss Havergal's experience; but a sick man may have received great benefit under a physician's treatment and yet may fail to give a clear and accurate account of it.

Truly yours,
Woking Station, Surrey. H. Noel.

Notices of Books, &c.

An Exposition and a Sermon by Rev. Dr. McAuslane, of the Victoria Park Tabernacle, London, are published monthly by Mr. W. Penny, 1, Ivy-lane, E.C., and Messrs. G. Gallie & Son, 99, Buchanan-street, Glasgow. Price 1d. Dr. McAuslane, is well known in the metropolis as an able and impressive preacher. Many will be glad to possess themselves of these instructive expositions and discourses.

The Marriage Ring. By William Landels, D.D. Cassell, Petter, Galpin & Co. This is intended to be a "gift-book for the newly-married and for those contemplating marriage," but we wish that those chapters on the "Pre-requisites of Marriage" could be placed in the hands of every young girl as she leaves the school-room, and every young man who begins to earn money. Were marriages formed on the principles set forth in these chapters there would be less need and yet all the more willingness to receive the "Suggestions for the Married Pair." Of the "Divine Institution of Marriage" Dr. Landels treats reverentially and skilfully, as might be expected from him, and under these three divisions we have a book of rare excellence. Delicate handling of a difficult subject, strong practical wisdom, and ripe experience combine to make this book one of the best of its kind. Its garb has been also well chosen by the publishers, and may win an entrance for it amongst bridal gifts where a more sombre covering would be out of keeping with such an occasion.

Terrible Sufferings at Sea. By J. T. Chapman. 2d. British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Gravesend. A narration of facts relative to shipwrecks, that might well stir the feelings of the most callous. An earnest appeal for practical help toward the support of the society is made in the closing pages.

From Darkness to Light, a Narrative of the Early Life and Conversion of an Israelite, is a little work published at the Hebrew Christian Home of Industry, Hackney-road, E. It will prove of interest to the friends of Jewish Missions, and helpful to the cause they advocate. It is an autobiography, and written in very readable and pleasant style, and cannot fail to attract the mind and heart of the reader. It should be circulated freely by those who desire to secure for the Jew wider sympathy and concern.

My Ramble through Bible Lands. By Wm. J. Ridges. Sunday School Union. The author manages to put not a little freshness into an old theme, and gives the reader a clear and concise description of the many sacredly classic scenes through which he passed. His eye was open, all along the route, to trace the footsteps of the Saviour of men, and to behold whatever was most calculated to throw light upon Scripture truth, so that Sunday-school teachers and others will find much that is helpful to them in illustrating Bible themes. The book derives additional value from the author's pre-millennial views leading him to regard the land he visited from future as well as past points of interest.

La Vie et L'Enseignement de Notre Seigneur Jesus Christ. Dr. and Mrs. Grimké, whose names are well known to our readers, have prepared in the French language a little summary of the New Testament under the above title. It is attractive in appearance, and would probably be accepted and perused by many French-speaking people who would not take or read a complete copy of the New Testament. It is almost a pity that the plan adopted in the English authorised version of putting the supplied words in italic type has been followed in this little book. It often suggests emphasis, where emphasis is out of place. The omission of a publisher's name is rather an oversight, for how are people in general to know where to procure the little work? No doubt it is to be obtained direct from Dr. Grimké, Prestwich, Manchester.

The City of God. A Series of Discussions in Religion. By A. M. Fairbairn, D.D., Principal of Airedale College, Bradford. Hodder & Stoughton. A series of able and eloquent essays on such subjects as "Faith and Modern Thought," "Theism and Science," "Man and Religion," "God and Israel," "The Jesus of History and the Christ of Faith," "Christ in History," and ending with that which gives its name to the whole, "The City of God." They are full of thought and insight of no ordinary kind into the subjects treated of, and show the results of extensive reading. Nevertheless, the view presented of Christianity is mundane rather than heavenly. The object of Christ's mission is set forth rather as the founding of a new society to regenerate humanity than to call a people from earth to heaven. The salvation of souls, it is true, is recognised, but, as the writer says, "Yet the salvation of the individual is only a means to the great social and collective end. Christ came to create a society, to found a state, to make and rule the kingdom of God on earth." We much doubt if such a description of the aim of Christ in founding the Church would have satisfied the Apostle Paul. There is a want of due recognition of the "heavenly calling," "the citizenship which is in heaven," and, as might be expected, a total absence of the "looking for the Saviour from heaven." A kingdom of God realised upon earth in the present dispensation seems to be all that the able writer of these essays contemplates as the design of Christianity.

There is also a sad lack of discrimination between the Church and the world—between those who are Christ's and those who are not. Humanity is exalted to a position of importance that Scripture knows nothing of. The solemn background which the Scriptures paint of Satanic agency and Satanic power is studiously ignored, indeed, in one passage it is only mentioned to be almost denied, for what can we make of such a sentence as this: "In every actual devil there is a possible god. Christ made us to see the possible god in the actual devil, made us so to see it that we might love this divine image, though lost yet latent in the very worst, and labour that it might be restored." To say the least, this is very careless language, and very unlike what we find in Scripture. The whole book, interesting as it is, savours more of "modern thought" than of the Word of God.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For a marvellous escape from burning.——For the recovery of a dear relative.——For much blessing on a Mission by F. E. Marsh, at Renton and Alexandria, N.B.

PRAYER.—The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison, of the Ikwezi Lamaci Mission, South Africa, will hear with much regret that their eldest little boy, William Stewart Halliwell, aged nearly four years, died on the 26th of February, after about ten days' illness. In their isolated position the blow is very heavily felt. They ask for the prayers of their friends at home, that they may continue to realise the presence and help of the great Comforter.——For one passing through trials.——For a young man desiring to go out as a missionary, if the Lord will, that the way may be made very plain, hindrances removed, and guidance given as to China or elsewhere.——That a sorrowing mother, who has lost her eldest child by death, may experience all needed consolation, and may have grace to acquiesce in the Divine will.

PLACES.—For blessing on services in Birmingham, conducted by Mr. G. Hefford.——For a blessing to rest upon a Mission at Bexley-heath.——For blessing on services by Miss Ruth Brryman at Shepherd's-bush and at Hammersmith.——For proposed Evangelistic services at Aberfeldy, N.B., during May.——For blessing on a Mission to be held by F. E. Marsh at Partick, N.B.——For blessing on an eight-days' Mission in Exeter, to be conducted by J. A. Vicary, from April 22 to 29.——For much blessing on a Mission conducted by Wm. Day at Brixton-hill.

CONVERSIONS.—For an only son just returning to school.——For two young men just going to college.

Mission and other Appeals.

A Convalescent Home for the poor and helpless classes was opened two years ago in Sussex, and has been greatly prized. Hitherto it has been self-supporting, but circumstances have recently arisen, chiefly in connection with a change of location, that urgently call for help to the extent of £50, in order that the institution may be kept going. Miss Chapman, The Grange, Chiddingly, Hawkhurst, Sussex, will gladly receive help.

Aged Christian Blind Women. — The committee of this excellent institution now at 90, Junction-road, Holloway, have in view to purchase a building which will permit of an extension of the work. They have the offer of a suitable freehold house, "The Mansion House," Hanley-road, Hornsey Rise, N., for £1250; a third of this sum must be raised by Sept. 29th next in order to effect the purchase. Friends of the work are invited to contribute; help will be received by Mr. and Mrs. Bright at the Home, or by Rev. J. R. Wood, 56, St. John's Park, Upper Holloway, N.

Home for Gentlewomen of Limited Means (19, Sutherland-gardens, Harrow-road, W.)—May I appeal to the readers of The Christian for help? The Christmas rent still unpaid weighs heavily on my mind, and there are other debts, our subscriptions having always been considerably less than our very moderate current expenditure. Many ladies in necessitous circumstances, through long waiting for employment, have had a free residence, and others in time of sickness have been carefully tended. If the benevolent and Christian friends would kindly help forward this work, its benefits might be greatly extended to a struggling and very deserving class, whose necessities seldom reach the public ear.—Sophia Strongi'th'arm.

A Nursery in Bristol.—Dear Sir,—I am anxious to bring this institution under the notice of your readers, in the earnest hope that God may raise up friends to save it from being closed. The Nursery is for the illegitimate children of young women who have been previously respectable, and who are now doing well in service. The need of a shelter for these innocent little ones is acknowledged by workers among the fallen, who have hailed the opening of the Bristol Nursery, but are unable to maintain it. It must be closed for want of funds, unless at least £100 be sent at once to the treasurer. I am sure there are Christian people who would help to save these little ones if we only knew where to look for them, and I have thought that an appeal in your paper might be the means of finding them out.—Yours faithfully, Louisa Marriott, Oldburg House, St. Michael's Hill, Bristol.

Evangelistic Mission—Mrs. M. (Ryde), per C. R. H., 1s.

THE LAPSED MASSES IN EDINBURGH. — A meeting of Christian workers belonging to various sections of the Church was held in Edinburgh last week to discuss what further steps could be taken for evangelising the "lapsed masses" of the city. One speaker stated that there were 50,000 persons in Edinburgh outside the pale of any Church. After consideration a committee was appointed "to consider the possibility of combining existing agencies or making a new effort," the result to be reported to a future meeting.

900 MOTHERS OF ENGLAND

Are wanted to contribute ONE POUND each for the erection of "THE MOTHERS' HOUSE," for Orphan Boys, at Swanley. The House will be ready for the Orphans this summer. Will each mother who reads The Christian pray for these fatherless boys, and try and help them?

Gifts will be most thankfully received by Mrs. A. O. Charles, 19, Alwyne-square, Canonbury; by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, at the Office of The Christian; or by the Secretary, at the Homes for Little Boys' Offices, Ludgate-circus.

TRAINING INSTITUTION OF THE ANCHORAGE MISSION

(Of Hope & Help).

For the reception of the more respectable class of young women in trouble.

Conversion of heart, according to the simple Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, is the one thing prayerfully and faithfully sought.

The young women are fitted for resuming their position in life, by thorough instruction in household duties, cookery, dressmaking, fine laundry work, &c. &c.

A full description of the work of the Mission, with regulations for admission to the "Anchorage House," will be sent on application by letter to Mrs. H. Stuart-Wortley, Rosslyn House, Grove End Road, N.W. (President of the Ladies' Committee), to whom, or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, subscriptions may be sent.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A NOBLE WOMAN.

BY

FIDELIA FISKE.

"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon; and, after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."—Sunday School Teacher.

POWER FROM ON HIGH; or, The Secret of Success in Christian Life and Christian Work. By D. L. MOODY. 17th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.: Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"This series of earnest and solemn Addresses bear throughout that stamp of honest, eager earnestness, which is so striking a characteristic of the writer's labours as a preacher."—Clerical World.

"Every page is full of stimulating thought for Christian Workers."
Commonwealth.

ADDRESSES by D. L. MOODY. Revised. 104th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted, and now that they are written they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made. The book is clearly printed, on good paper, is handy in form, and is sure of a wide circulation."—Primitive Methodist.

"The volume will be found of great use to Christian workers, for reading, and for distribution among the 'ignorant and them that are out of the way.'"—Methodist.

THE FAITHFUL SAYING. A Series of Addresses. By D. L. MOODY. 10th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Full of the Gospel, well illustrated, thoroughly alive."—Sword and Trowel.

"Practical, full of anecdotes and point."—Friend.

"It will be sufficient to say that the book contains Mr. Moody's vividness of expression, illustrative anecdotes, fulness of faith and hope in undiminished measure."—Edinburgh Daily Review.

"Simple, direct, anecdotal, and earnest."—Freeman.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS NOT SINLESS PERFECTION.

By CHARLES GRAHAM,

Minister of Avenue-road Church, Shepherd's Bush; Author of "The Highway of Holiness," "The Coming Great Revival," "Memoir of Rev. John Graham," &c., &c.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is a l that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

London: Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster-buildings; And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

BIBLE READINGS,

By HENRY MOORHOUSE.

Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.

"We do not wonder that those who heard Moorhouse's Bible Readings found them full of power and suggestion. To him the Word of God was a sword—the only one worth using in spiritual warfare."—Liverpool Courier.

The Life of GEORGE WHITEFIELD.
By J. R. ANDREWS,
Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Shortly after returning to town he decided on the bold step of preaching at Moorfields during the great annual holiday of Witsuntide ('the season of all others,' he says, 'when, if ever, Satan's children keep up their rendezvous.') . . . . . He gives us the following account of his proceedings: 'I mounted my field pulpit, glad to find that I had for once, as it were, got the start of the devil. The people immediately flocked round me, and I addressed them from the words, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." All was hushed and solemn; they gazed, they listened, they wept.' He gave notice that he would preach again from the same place at six o'clock in the evening."—Extract.

Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. Second Edition.
SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES
In order to abiding Communion with God.
Also Suggestions for Bible Reading and Study, and a Plan for Consecutive Daily Reading.
By Dr. ANDERSON.

"Whether viewed as an analysis of the whole Bible, or as a plan for its daily perusal, or as a directory to the spirit and intention with which it should be studied, it is equally judicious and complete. The one design of the whole Scriptures is kept in view throughout."—Sword and Trowel.

"Dr. Anderson's counsels and suggestions are most valuable; and the design of his work is one which will meet with ready acceptance from those who have learned that God's Word is a lamp to their feet and a light to their path."—Christian Week.

THE CONVERSION OF CHILDREN.
By Rev. EDWARD PAYSON HAMMOND, M.A.
Author of "Familiar Talks with the Children," "The Better Life," "Tracts for the Children," &c., &c.

"We devoutly wish that by some means or other a copy could be placed in the hands of every Sunday-school superintendent and every pastor of a Church."
Penuel.

"A careful perusal of the testimony here given must convince every unprejudiced mind that in our days, as in the days of old, God perfects praise out of the mouths of babes and sucklings."—Woman's Work.

"We commend the book very heartily to the prayerful attention of all parents and teachers."—Freeman.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.
CALLS TO CHRIST.
A Series of Addresses by Rev. R. W. NICOLL, M.A.

"It is admirably fitted as a gift-book to older scholars; but to Sabbath-school teachers also we would heartily recommend it."—Children's Record.

"Force and freshness are eminently the characteristics of these 'Calls to Christ'; they are also brief to a proverb, and hence they may be of great service to an earnest evangelist who knows how to use another man's thoughts."
Kel Courier.

"A choice book. Sweet-scented throughout with the name of Christ, it sets forth the 'old, old story' in eleven simple but explicit lines of Gospel teaching. Though on a familiar theme, it has an unobtrusive originality, and many touches of beautiful thought, which remove it far from commonplace."

The Things that God Uses.

AN ADDRESS TO CHRISTIANS.

By D. L. MOODY.

"I verily believe we are not going to see a great work of revival in this land until the Church of God wakes up, and each individual member of it improves the talent God has given him. Moses was nothing; Joshua or Gideon were nothing. God did the work; they were but the instruments. People say they have no strength; but the trouble is that they have too much. It is when we become as nothing, and are emptied of our own strength, that God can take us up and make use of us. He will do the work, and He shall have the glory."—Extract.

Choice Sayings.

Being Notes of Expositions

OF THE SCRIPTURES.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

EXTRACTS FROM "CHOICE SAYINGS."

The New Creature.

AS a vessel takes its shape from the mould, so should our will be formed in the mould of the will of God: then shall we have everything our own way.

Pleasing the Lord.

A CHILD of God ought to be ever committing himself into God's hand, that God may direct his way for him. The natural man deviseth his own way; but God would have His children hang upon Him for counsel and guidance in everything.

The Christian's Walk.

TO be a true witness for Jesus, I must be much in his company, hear his voice, and observe his ways. How can we know the character of one with whom we have but little intercourse?

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS, E.C.—At the last Quarterly Committee Meeting it was proposed by Rev. Dr. Edmond, Chairman of Committee, and agreed to nem. con.: "That in view of the rapid growth of the Mission, embracing weekly Addresses at Albion Hall, London Wall; instruction in Night School, Harvey-street, Hoxton; Bible Readings at Barbican House, House to House Visitation, Scripture and Tract distribution, &c. (with occasional help to distressed believing and inquiring Jews from among the Refugees), besides the Bristol Branch, during the summer, conducted by Mr. Warschawski and his assistants, the claims of this work as an instrumentality much blessed in its manifold operations should be brought under the notice of the friends of Jewish Missions for their prayerful consideration and sympathy." The last Annual Report is replete with interesting information, and will be forwarded to any address. Free-will offerings towards the maintenance of the work will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Rev. Dr. EDMOND, 97, Highbury-hill, N.; Colonel BROCKMAN, 19, Addison-gardens, Kensington; EDWARD JARVIS, Esq., Treasurer, 10, Kingsland-green, N.; or by the Head Missionary and Superintendent, PAUL WARSCHAWSKI, Barbican House, 6, Farleigh-road, Stoke Newington, N.

HENRY & ANN BRIGHT, Hon. Superintendents.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of THE CHRISTIAN; or to the Secretary, JAMES ATKINSON, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N.

MRS. WILKES proposes to be at home every Wednesday from Two till Five o'clock, for the purpose of seeing friends of Rescue Work. Trains from liverpool-street to St. James-street Station, Walthamstow, every half-hour. "The Elms" is within five minutes' walk of the station. The Elms, Coppermill-lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

GREAT COLEMAN'S, near Ongar, is now opened by Dr. and Mrs. S. C. GRIFFITH to give change of air and rest to educated people of limited means.—For particulars, apply to 45, Finsbury-square, E.C.

KONIGSHEIM, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—A temporary residence for Lady Christian workers, or those engaged in tuition, who wish to make a short stay in a quiet Christian home, at a pleasant watering-place.—Further particulars to be obtained from the LADY SUPERINTENDENT.

Educational.

THE WOODLANDS, Hitchin, Herts.—Select Boarding School for Boys. For prospectus apply to the Principal, ISAAC SHARP, B.A., a member of the Society of Friends. Careful personal training. Efficient staff of masters. excellent recreation grounds.

CHIGNAL, near Chelmsford.—A Preparatory School in the country, for boys and girls (boarders only) conducted by Miss Barker, with an efficient governess. Pupils thoroughly grounded in English, French, music, and drawing. A kind home, under the immediate supervision of the Principal. Terms from 20 guineas per annum. References to parents and clergy.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

MONKTON COMBE SCHOOL, near Bath.—Pupils prepared chiefly for Oxford and Cambridge. Reference to Lord Radstock, and many other parents and guardians whose sons are at the School.

For Delicate or Backward Youths

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

DECISION OF CHARACTER

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL,
WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal—Dr. CRANAGE, M.A., Author of "Mental Education," "Three Lectures on the Tabernacle in the Wilderness," "The Mark of the Beast," &c., &c.

Vice-Principal—Robert Weston, Esq., T.C.D.

Head Master—Mathematics: T. Woodcock, Esq., B.A., Wrangler, and late Scholar and Exhibitioner, Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Master—Classics: H. May, Esq., B.A., late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford; with other Masters.

Dr. CRANAGE'S undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington, Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. Exhibitions, dependent on entrance examinations, are offered each April, July, and December; two of the value of Ten Guineas per annum, for seven years for boys under ten years of age; two of the value of Twenty Guineas per annum for five years, for boys under fifteen; and one of the value of Fifty Guineas per annum for boys under sixteen, for three years. The next Term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, May 3rd.

HEALING
BY THE PRAYER OF FAITH; OR BY FAITH AND WORKS?

The injunctions of Holy Writ, and their continuous enforcement by precept and practice, teach us that the gift of healing is an embodiment of Christian work to be embraced and practised, if our efforts for good are to be commensurate in their results with those which characterised the labours of the Apostles.

The work of healing is evidently indicated by the reference to oil in the oft-quoted text, James v. 14 and 15. We claim, and we think with some truth, that as oil was then used for sanatory purposes (and why not now?) it is there mentioned as a means as manifestly as the "plaister of figs."

We know it is not Healing by Faith, or Healing by the Prayer of Faith, but by the power of Christ; but all this does not set aside individual action, or the use of means. Elijah is represented as stretching himself over the dead body of the lad, and breathing warmth into it, as well as praying.

A recent number of The Christian has the following passage:—"In the war of Israel with Amalek, Moses, Aaron, and Hur were on the hill praying, Joshua and the chosen men on the plain fighting, and God giving the victory, hearing prayer, and blessing means.

"In the Epistle of James we have prayer and anointing with oil, or prayers and medicine, and God raising up the sick, hearing prayer, and blessing means."

So it has always been in the experience of God's children.

Reports are constantly reaching us of healing by faith on the one hand, and on the other by the successful application of remedies from Nature's own storehouse, remedies in which no man can claim a proprietary right. Light, air, heat, and electricity (or oil, as prescribed in James v. 14) are Nature's own provision, and their curative properties may be developed as the hydropath develops and applies the virtues of water. Magnetism is that form of Electricity which Mr. B. Copson Garratt has applied in a most remarkable manner. The following letter, which we quote for the encouragement of similar sufferers, shows the energising properties of Odo-Magnetic treatment:—

MARTIN CHEEK, Esq., Hylton Lodge, Willesden-green.

"I have received the enclosed from Mr. Steer. I am pleased that I was led to wear your improved appliances from his recommendation. Having known him many years I have great pleasure in forwarding you this letter, for the truth of which I can vouch, and which he has no objection to see published. I trust that your appliances may be the means of caring many of that nervous depression from which I suffered, but from which I am now quite free."

(Enclosure.)

"The effect of Mr. Garratt's Magnetic Appliances was very rapid and very remarkable. You may remember that I suffered exceedingly from General Debility and a marked tendency to Rheumatism. The former was so depressing in its effects that I felt quite worn out—an old man at the age of fifty—so much so that I was unable to put on my coat without assistance. Everything was a trouble to me. I rose in the morning more fit to stay in bed; I hardly knew how to walk, and ten minutes' walking would exhaust me. In addition, I had a very distressing bilious headache, which troubled me every two or three days. I was, in short, totally unfit in mind and body for the duties of life. This state of things came on gradually, from overwork and exposure to inclement weather and night air. The influence of the Appliances was most magical. A few hours after wearing them I felt better than I had done for months. Then I went for a walk, which extended itself to a ramble of considerable distance, as I felt so well, and I have constantly progressed from then till now. Sleep, which was often a stranger, is now natural and easy. I am cheerful where I was despondent, and I cannot say how thankful I am for the great benefit I have received."

Gratuitous information and copies of his essays may be obtained at Mr. B. Copson Garratt's Consulting-rooms, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

THE TRIUMPH OF SOCIAL PURITY.

SATURDAY, April 21—for it was 1 a.m. of that day ere the division was taken in the House of Commons—will be ever memorable in the annals of the struggle for Social Purity all the world over. The Right Hon. James Stansfeld had obtained a place for his motion on Friday afternoon, and the day had arrived when the long-wished-for issue was to be joined which should determine whether England should go forward or recede in the matter of social morality. No less than five meetings for prayer were being held in different parts of London, as Mr. Stansfeld rose in the House to speak; doubtless thousands throughout the British Islands were bearing on their hearts the cause which he advocated on that momentous occasion.

The debate—most unfairly reported, or suppressed, in the London daily papers—resulted in the decisive majority of 72 against the compulsory examination of women under the laws hypocritically termed "Contagious Diseases Acts." It is hardly needful for us to say that this examination is the essential element of the abominable system of State-regulated prostitution.

The Times says:—"This decision may be considered as the death-blow of the Acts. Although influences still strong will possibly prevent their exclusion from the statute-book, the expression of the opinion of the House of Commons against the compulsory examination of women—a necessary ingredient of the administration of the Acts—is sufficient to make them henceforth a dead letter." This division is indeed the death stroke, but it is not as yet the death of the system; it is scotched, but not slain; it will drag on an existence more or less prolonged, more or less enfeebled, until it expires, like negro-slavery, on British soil and in the British colonies to which it has been introduced. After this decided vote of the representative assembly, we hope Lord Derby will see his way to the suppression of the system in Hong Kong, in accordance with the prayer of the deputation that recently waited on his lordship as Secretary for the Colonies.

Saturday's victory is one for which it becomes us to be thankful. Success has thus far crowned the efforts of a noble band of men and women, headed by Mr. Stansfeld and Mrs. Josephine Butler, because they have laboured and trusted, and committed the issue to the Most High. Before noon on Saturday the news had been flashed to the cities of Europe, where thousands watch the example of England; expressions of joy and of gratitude were flashed back again, which found echoes far and near in the British Islands.

Thanksgiving was offered in many churches on Sunday. A notice was circulated as widely as the shortness of the interval permitted, announcing a meeting "for united and hearty thanksgiving, and also to ask for God's continued help that the final victory be won." This meeting will be held at the Friends' Meeting-house, in St. Martin's-lane, Westminster (behind the National Gallery, on Thursday, the 26th, at 4 p.m. Praise well becomes those who prayed, and gratitude will be the first emotion of the well-regulated heart. The second will be a desire and determination to improve the advantage gained, not by giving heed to delusive compromises, founded on false or unholy principles, but rather by standing firmly on the old and righteous law, both of God and of Old England, that vice is sin—a thing to be suppressed, not a thing to be sanctioned, regulated, and guaranteed by the powers of the State.

THE MAY MEETINGS AND THE CHURCHES.

MAY it not be expected, and should not all of us fervently pray, that the numerous gatherings of the Lord's people during this and the next few weeks, will conduce to raise the tone of spiritual life in the various sections of the Church? Many appeals will be addressed to the heart and conscience; stirring facts and incidents of what the Lord is doing in the earth will be recorded; hundreds of special prayers, mingled with thanksgiving, will be presented by representative assemblies convened from all parts; the work of God at home and abroad will be reviewed; and startling revelations of the need for further zeal and liberality on the part of all Christians will be made. Let all who join in these annual gatherings do so in the spirit of waiting upon God, and the result will be seen in quickened life and power.

And this is the great purpose in such anniversaries being held. They are useless if regarded as merely formal and customary. They are, if viewed from the right standpoint, of solemn importance, and may be turned to great practical account. Never was the need of Divine quickening greater than at present. Amid much that is gratifying and cheering in connection with the religious aspects of our times, there is much to humble and lay us low before God. Many professors of godliness walk as "enemies of the cross of Christ," numbers who bear his name do nothing to uphold his cause, and not a few of those who should be as lights shining amid the darkness, walk in darkness themselves. "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," is a feature of "the perilous times" the Apostle warns us to expect "in the last days."

There is reason to think that already profession without practice is a marked trait of our own times. Fashionable religion is not godliness, nor does it tend to produce it. Meanwhile the powers of darkness concentrate their forces, and gather fresh courage and determination in their resistance of the truth. The great adversary knows how to turn to his own advantage the failures and mistakes of the Church of Christ. As of old, so is it still, "The serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field." One of the many practical and suggestive sentences uttered by Mr. Moody in his addresses, the statement that he does not fear infidelity half so much as he fears the cold formalism which is creeping over Christianity, calls for solemn consideration. As he justly says, "The want of heart, interest, fire, and enthusiasm, is the great danger of our times." The truth of this is painfully evident from the difficulty Church leaders find in every section of the Church, in arousing general activity on the part of members and communicants. The Laodicean condition of things, "neither cold nor hot," is the prevailing state of numerous Christian communities in relation both to matters of faith and practice. To this may be attributed much of the boldness and confidence with which the enemies of Christianity assert their doctrines, and labour to spread them on every hand. Oh for another Pentecost, a fresh baptism of power from on high!

The following extract, from an address lately delivered before the Connecticut Methodist Convention, points a moral for all the Churches. It refers to one of the dangers the speaker regarded as threatening spiritual efficiency. He puts it: "Methodists are nothing except they are spiritual." The word "Christians" may be substituted for Methodists with equal truth. The lesson applies all round:—

> At the start, in her assets Methodism had little else but spirituality. Her preachers did not know Latin, though they did know men, and understood how to lead them to Jesus. She had no Parsonage on the Avenue to offer, no prominent banker or prosperous director for recording steward. She did not go to church in sealskin and praise the Lord with 5000 dollar organs. She did not call her preachers to marble pulpits. She made the best of roadsides and barns. But one thing she assuredly did have—that "lost art" (as a prominent divine in another denomination has lately called it), the art of winning souls.

Lack of spirituality inevitably leads to worldliness of spirit and aim, and to this may be traced much of the failure of the Church in so-called Christian lands, to affect as it should the outlying masses of the population. Hence also the insufficiency of men and means for carrying on the work in heathen climes to anything like the extent the circumstances demand. Worldliness leads to selfishness, and selfishness to indifference as to the claims and necessities of others. "Ye are the salt of the earth," our Lord said to his disciples. "But if the salt have lost its savour wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and trodden under foot of men." God grant that a springtide of unwonted, unprecedented, spiritual blessing may come to all the Churches this year in connection with their conferences and deliberations upon the work entrusted to their hands. The Intercessor cries, "Awake, O north wind; and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out." In the spirit of ardent desire, let the Church respond, "Let my Beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits." Then shall God's presence fill the Church with renewed power for service, and with fresh manifestations of spiritual blessing.

YOUNG MEN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The urgent needs of the heathen have induced the members of the Aldersgate-street Y.M.C.A. to initiate a Young Men's Foreign Missionary Society; its objects are to cultivate a missionary spirit in the hearts of young men, and to assist in training and sending them forth to foreign fields. Already three of the members are in training for the work; the applications of three more are at present under consideration. In addition, the committee have the names of nine others, well fitted in their opinion for the work, who are waiting the indication of God's will as to their training and going forth. The Committee are also desirous of organising deputations to visit other associations with a view of deepening the interest in this subject.

OPEN-AIR MISSION.—Permit me to appeal to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN for free grants of tracts, or the means to purchase them. Each year the operations of the Mission cover a wider area, though for the last three years the income has been stationary. Last year our members worked in 459 towns and villages, visiting 271 races, fairs, and other special gatherings, and distributed 1,034,000 tracts and other publications. The Mission has now more than 700 members, and is anxious, as far as possible, to supply them with tracts. I may mention that Mrs. Grimké's text-cards are as acceptable a present as anyone can send us. Now, with the open-air preaching season fairly upon us, we are anxious to meet the large demands made upon us for tracts. Books for the Preachers' Library will also be very acceptable.—Yours faithfully, GAWIN KIRKHAM, Sec.

FAITH'S EFFECTS, GODWARD AND MANWARD.

"HAVE faith in God." With these words Jesus commanded and encouraged his disciples. With what sweetness and force they come from his lips. Who else could so appropriately instruct concerning faith? The speaker of these words was that wondrous One who, "being found in fashion as a man," felt, in common with us, the pressure of weakness and need, and who Himself walked the pathway of faith. And yet He was also the Promiser; the mighty Utterer of the promises which faith pleads; the Answerer of prayer.

This word from our Lord's lips is singularly seasonable now. Embryonic believers abound. There are about us many babes in Christ, those in the first bright flush of faith's glad dawn. There are also, alas! many dwarfs as well—not babes, for it is long since they were born again (if born again at all), but spiritual dwarfs, stunted and puny. And this because not instructed in "the whole counsel of God"; not led to hold salvation and "the things that accompany salvation" in proper relation to each other; believing rather the half gospel of faith than the full gospel of faith and faith's fruitage. One who has but believed in Christ as his Saviour from perdition has not believed enough about Christ. He has gazed through faith's telescope at but one of the myriads of stars of promise; has but taken the first course at salvation's banquet. He needs to go on believing. He must learn that faith is not merely an act, nor even in a series of acts, but is a daily, hourly, living. It is not a door to be entered, but a highway to be patiently traversed.

Faith in its full sense is a stupendous thing. Well may we marvel at what it has wrought. But we need to fix our regard not only on its effects Godward, but manward as well. If it works mightily upon God, it works mightily also on the believing one. And there is a beautiful correspondence between the effect wrought on God and on the believer. We may with reverence say that faith, by his own appointment, controls God. It is the only thing which can so move Him. It does three things. It fixes his attention, it stirs his affections, it awakens his activities. But in like manner it controls the believing one. It rivets his attention, stirs his love, and rouses his activities. And it moves God just in proportion as it thus moves the believing soul. The balloon lifts not only the car it carries, but itself as well, to the altitude where it reposes majestically in mid-air. So the faith we exercise in God works in us that which exactly corresponds to the effect God is pleased to permit it to work in Him. "It is a moral power which penetrates and subdues the entire man."

Faith is an ACT OF TRUST. In trusting, the mind is fixed and engaged. It weighs the evidence, and concludes it is sufficient, and there rests. As one would inspect a cheque, informing himself of the bank and the drawer, so the believer weighs the promise of God. But this serves as but a partial illustration. It is not only trust, but an act of trust. It includes committal of oneself to a course of action appropriate to the thing believed. The faith of many stops right here. It is mere dogma-holding. It is but devil-faith. True faith not only inspects the cheque, but proceeds to the bank and draws the amount. It is like the elephant who tests the bridge and then trusts his weight to it. "Faith without works is dead." The effect of half-truths is most pernicious.

As this Spirit-wrought faith that proceeds from the believer thus fixes his attention upon what God has spoken, and leads him to cordially embrace it, and trust himself to it, so likewise the same faith, touching God, fixes his attention on the same promise, and leads Him to trust the believer with the answer to his faith. The believer's act of trust in prayer issues in God's act of trust in the answer. Abraham believed God, whereupon God entrusted blessing to Abraham. Abraham counted God righteous by believing his word, and God then counted Abraham righteous. It is only to such as are dominated by an unceasing faith, acted out in life, that God can entrust great spiritual blessing.

Again, faith is an act of trust IN A PERSON. Here we take a step deeper into its nature. Accepting and drawing a cheque, or testing and crossing a bridge, requires thought and action, but touches not the affections. Where a person is trusted the heart is moved upon. Think, beloved of God, who our Promiser is. It is One who wears our nature; One of unutterable moral beauty; One who "having loved his own who were in the world, loved them unto the end;" loved them through a life of unparalleled suffering, through Gethsemane's darkness, through the ribaldry and rejection of Pilate's hall, through the anguish of the Cross, exquisitely felt by a nature unblunted by sin; One who now lives for us, who comes for us, in whom our every hope for time and eternity is centred; One who has yielded to us his heart, and his life because his heart. Thus the faith that lays hold upon God, and stirs his love to the believer, works in the believer an overmastering love for the God whose promise he pleads.

Again: faith is an act of trust in a DIVINE PERSON. "Have faith in God." This is faith's inner heart and pulsating life. Being in God is what gives it its character of commanding importance. Being in the Supreme One it necessarily bows our wills to his. It says, "What wilt thou have me to do?" It studies to ascertain God's will and then does it—promptly, honestly, happily, resolutely, continuously. Faith, if real, then issues in obedience. Otherwise, it is vain and void. As our beloved brother Monod said some years since in London, "It is with his entire being man believes God. It is an act in which the whole soul of a man, the whole will of a man, the whole purpose and life of a man, are engaged."* And here we face the prime cause of deficient faith. This heavenly plant cannot thrive except on the very verge of the light we have. Sin, any sin, all sin, all failure to obey the Word professedly believed, is a moral impediment to faith. "How can ye believe who receive honour one from another?" said Jesus. How can ye believe who indulge any sin? Ye cannot. Faith flickers and expires.

And here we trace the parallel in this last particular between God and the believer. Faith calls forth action on the part of God. It leads Him to do the things pleaded for. But it none the less certainly produces action in the believer. It moves God to act in harmony with his Word; and as surely moves the believer to act in harmony with the same Word. "Lord, increase our faith."

THE EVILS OF GAMBLING.

SINCE writing some Notes with reference to the increasing prevalence of the evil habit of betting, we have seen in a contemporary an article on the same subject deploring the fact. We cull from it the following statements made by the chaplain of the Pentonville prison in his report issued for last year. He says:—

Prisoners of superior education are, I am afraid, an increasing element of our convict population. Cases of embezzlement and other sorts of dishonesty by persons holding situations of trust, seem to come before us more frequently than they used, but, whether this be really so or not, they are sufficiently numerous to attract notice, and to invite attention from those who may be in a position to throw some light upon their causes.

From such an authority any statement of opinion on the causes to which this sad fact may be traced must have weight. And this is his deliberate conviction on the matter:—

As for my own opinion, they may, for the most part, be accounted for the one cause of betting alone. This is an evil which, it is to be feared, prevails to a very great extent amongst all classes, and is much to be deplored, bringing, as it does, ruin both temporal and spiritual to thousands. The most frequent examples of such ruin coming before us in the prison are furnished by young men in offices and places of business. If those who are being led into this most ruinous and demoralising habit could only visit the unhappy occupants of many of our cells and hear their cry of mental distress, and read the letters from mothers and sisters, and young wives, telling of broken hearts and blasted prospects, and homes that are homes no longer, they would surely pause and consider the terrible risk they were incurring.

Principals, and heads of departments in our City houses of business, have no little responsibility resting upon them in relation to the young men under their direction. By a course of firm and kindly supervision over what goes on in business hours, much may be done to create a healthy moral tone, and to put a ban upon practices of evil character and tendency. Rules forbidding raffling and all kinds of gambling in their establishments on the part of their employés, would go far to influence many young minds, and to preserve them from contamination, such as we know them to be often exposed to in houses where no such oversight is exercised.

POLICEMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

AN Association for Christian Policemen has lately grown out of the Bible-classes and meetings for members of the Force held in various parts of the Metropolis. In this Association, which is managed by Christian workers in the Force, and has received the approval of the authorities, it is desired to unite together for prayer and Christian sympathy all those policemen who, believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, are willing to confess Him, and determined by his grace to follow Him. Although yet in its infancy, it has been already started in the East, West, and North of London; we hope soon to see branches formed in the South and in the City, and in course of time to see the work extended to the Provinces also.

Any of your readers who may be carrying on Christian work among the police, or may know of Bible-classes, &c., established among them, would greatly assist us by kindly sending the particulars of such classes to the address given below.—Yours truly, CATHERINE GURNEY.

NORTH AMERICA.—A man of the tribe of the Chicktaw Indians has made an offer to the American Bible Society to provide half the cost of presenting a copy of the New Testament to every child in his tribe. The Society at once accepted the offer, and have responded to the good man's wish by sending him a case of over 500 Testaments.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—5.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THE NEXT GREAT STEP IN HOLINESS.

ON our part it is the great step. He who takes this will at once find himself on the high level. Read carefully the thirteenth and fourteenth verses of this fifth chapter of Matthew's Gospel.

Ye are the salt of the earth. . . . Ye are the light of the world. Of these words it is most true that we can hear them aright only when we are at his feet. Not only to feel their force must we come unto Him, but thus only can we get in at their meaning at all.

So let us come to Jesus—on the mountain slope, under the clear sky in which perhaps the rosy hues of the sunrise yet linger, for it would seem probable that it was in the early hours of the day that Jesus had gone up from the multitudes and gathered his disciples about Him. Let us venture to join them in that sweet and hallowed communion, for we, too, have learned to love and trust Him as our Lord and Master.

Jesus looks upon the little company of his disciples, and his heart goes out toward them. Away from the turmoil of the crowd and the pressure of the people, He sits and rests in their midst. In them He finds a trust that refreshes Him. They bring Him a confident love that soothes and gladdens Him. They are beginning to understand something of the purpose of his coming; faintly, perhaps, but still discerning the spiritual and eternal, where others only saw the coarse outside.

But all this—the rest, and refreshment, and gladness—is quickly overborne by another thought, another feeling in the heart of the Great Redeemer. There was one mighty feeling and thought which drew all into itself, as the rivers are lost in the sea. And these words are opened to us only when we can enter into that great feeling with a sympathy close and tender and clear-seeing; for love is the gift of insight.

Here, at his feet, think with adoring reverence who He is, and whence He comes—the glorious Son of God, from the eternal throne. Think of the purpose which brings Him here, and how that all the consciousness of Christ is wrapped about this purpose—The glory of his Father in the salvation of the world. For this He in whom all fulness dwells has emptied Himself. For this the King of Glory has taken upon Him the form of a servant. For this the Lord and Giver of Life is on his way to death, even the death of the cross. And now, as all within Him throbs and glows with the intensity of this purpose, He looks again upon his disciples. In them He has a new power to glorify his Father and to bless the world. Ye are the salt of the earth; ye are the light of the world. Ye are my disciples, receiving my spirit, that I through you may check corruption, and bring sweetness and purity. I have kindled you that you may be consumed in lighting and blessing others.

Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. Holiness is in likeness to God. Let us try to enter into the meaning of those words—almost more wonderful than any that earth has ever heard—GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD THAT HE GAVE HIS ONLY BEGOTTEN SON, THAT WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH IN HIM SHOULD NOT PERISH BUT HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE.

Sit again at the feet of the glorious King of Heaven, and hear Him declare: THE SON OF GOD CAME NOT TO BE MINISTERED UNTO, BUT TO MINISTER AND TO GIVE HIS LIFE A RANSOM FOR MANY.

We are to surrender ourselves to Christ that this great purpose of his coming shall claim and possess the whole life. We are to live like God, to bless others. "Ye are my disciples," saith the Master—but not for your own sakes, not that you may be safe and comfortable, but that I, through you, may glorify the Father in blessing and saving others.

We need to stay awhile and let this go sinking down into the soul, filling it—musing until the fire is kindled.

It is perhaps a hard saying. It condemns us, in our easy-going forgetfulness of others, and well it may. To think of fruit like this proves the sickly plant of our piety! We turn from this high demand to find only failure everywhere: a life that begins and ends with self and never ventures far enough to lose sight of it.

But come again to the only resting-place. Tarry at his feet, and hear the words from his gracious lips: "Ye are the salt of the earth. . . . . Ye are the light of the world." This is his will, his purpose concerning us. This is what his power waits to do for us. And this, too, is the claim of his great love upon us. Do not sigh a poor assent to the truth of it, and then pass by neglectfully on the other side. Do not think about it and pray about it, without even a passing hope that the prayer will be answered. Do not gather yourself up in great resolutions to be good and useful. Kneel in sight of the Crucified. In the cross of Christ spell out his great purpose and yearning love to men. Let the heart feel all the might of the appeal that comes to us from those torn hands and feet and bleeding brow, from all the dreadful shame and agony of our dear Lord. And bought and bound by all this, surrender yourself to Him for his great purpose. Take Him as your strength for this life-work—to be the salt of the earth; the light of the world.

The first great step in holiness is the Lord himself coming down to our low level—Blessed are the poor in spirit. And this is the second step, Christ lifting us up to his high level—Ye are the salt of the earth; ye are the light of the world.

For Christ's sake and in Christ's strength, this, then, is our life work.

Salt of the earth. It is the noiseless power of a good life, making all about us pure and blessed, not by great fuss and ado, not even by preaching, still less by scolding, but just by being Christ-like. Yet by no means a weak amiability that is scarcely felt: salt—a very quick and sharp unpleasantness to those whose moral life is chapped and cracked, dreadfully in the way of those who want to be wrong.

Salt of the earth. He who thinks that religion has nothing to do with politics, with business, with pleasure, is ignorant of the whole meaning of religion. It is a power right in the midst of all these, sweetening and purifying them all. Think of this as holiness—not rapture, not glowing and glorious experiences; but in Christ's strength and for Christ's sake, setting ourselves to sweeten and purify the life about us.

In the story of old, when the water was bitter and the land was barren, the prophet took a cruse of salt and cast it into the spring. At once the fountain was healed, and the land became fruitful. Christ's true disciple is just such a cruse of salt in the Master's hand, one whose presence has power to heal life's bitterness, making the water of life sweet for those about us, and planting the waste and desolate places of life with a beauty like the garden of the Lord. Surely heaven itself could have no fairer sight for our blessed Master than such a disciple here in the midst of our bury life, one whose noiseless influence is like a breath of heaven, bringing wholesomeness, sweetness, and strength. To come into contact with such an one is to find a healing virtue.

Think, then, how Christ is saddened and what a sense of failure hurts Him when any stands forth as his disciple, and yet brings no blessing, never healing the springs of bitterness nor turning the barren places into beauty. The salt that is without savour is no salt at all, fling it away; white it may be, and in the most orthodox of salt-cellar, but if it is not sweetening the life about you, fling it away and cry to God for some better.

But what of the Master's grief when he who is called by his name is himself a source of bitterness and blasting. A Christian—and yet blighting and withering like an east wind! Called by Christ's holy name, yet always grumbling, jealous, envious, muttering ill-will. A minister, indeed, but of what? Not of grace; not of brotherly kindness; not of wholesome truth, but ministering only to the burden of the world's unkindness and misery! Let not such a one think within himself that he shall in anywise be reckoned as the salt of the earth. Salt that hath lost its savour is good for nothing; but even bad salt never becomes a source of corruption.

RED HERRINGS.

THERE is one class in connection with our fishing industry that specially calls for the sympathy and care of Christian friends, namely, the women engaged in the smoking and kippering of herrings. This is a large and increasing industry. The nature of the work itself, the late and often irregular hours, and many other things in connection with the work, make it a peculiarly perilous one to the moral and spiritual tone and habits of young women. The work is carried on in localities far removed from their homes, and as many of them are hardly ever at home from one year's end to the other, this in itself proves injurious, by breaking in upon those home ties and feelings that are so healthful and restraining.

In the small far-away town of Stornoway, there has grown up of late years an ever-extending trade in this direction. There are now thirteen separate smoking-houses, employing between them about two or three hundred women. These latter are mostly gathered from towns on the east coast of Scotland and England, such as Aberdeen, Dunbar, Eyemouth, Newcastle, and Lowestoft. The Home Mission Committee of the Free Church of Scotland have arranged to send a lady missionary to labour among them. A local committee of workers will co-operate.

Monday evening is their holiday time, but it is also their pay-night, when they are sadly tempted to spend their hard-won earnings in the public-house. The workers are devising some means of gathering them together, and, if possible, of saving them from this snare. For Sabbath evening services and week evening entertainment and Gospel work, a small wooden shed is being erected close to the smoking-houses; it is intended to fit this up as a Mission-room and coffee-stall. This will entail considerable outlay. Christian friends, when eating their red or kippered herrings, should remember the poor toil-worn, hard-working women engaged in the curing of them. Monetary help or tracts will be thankfully received by Rev. D. J. Martin or Mrs. D. Smith, Stornoway, N.B.

CHRIST CHURCH (CLEVEDON) CONVALESCENT HOME.—The Rev. C. Houghton, enclosing a third subscription from the Long Ashton Charity Trustees towards the above institution, writes: "Those whom I have hitherto sent to the Home speak most gratefully of the kindness they have received. I am very glad I am able to make use of it for my people, feeling sure that the whole influence is for their real good." For terms, &c., address, Rev. E. Forbes, Christ Church, Clevedon

For the Young.

"AN HUNGERED."

COLD the morning was and dark,
Dawn was breaking down the river;
As we crossed the Carlisle Bridge
Came a blast that made us shiver.
Few foot passengers were out—
Emblem that the day was Sunday,
And the busy Sackville-street
Solitary seemed for one day.

Just before us on the path
Went a limping little figure,
One boot on, and one boot off,
Four foot six he was, or bigger.
Hair was sticking out of hat,
Knees were sticking out of breeches,
Anything but waterproof
Was that coat so wanting stitches.

Long, oh long, his face appeared
Stranger to the use of water;
Where the struggle was for food
Cleansing seemed an idle matter.
Week-days maybe saw him cry
"Telegraph, the last edition!"
But this morning he was bent
Clearly on a different mission.

Suddenly he met a boy,
Style and stamp his very brother;
Quick his chum he recognised,
Thus they each accosted other:—
"Mornin', Mick! you're soon about,
What a hurry you appear in!
Does your mother know you're out?
Somethin's up with you, I'm fearin'."

"Silence, Barney, nothin's up,
On a Sunday stop your chaffin',
Off I am to get my tay,
Come and have some, don't be laughin'."
"Coorse I'll go; where is the place?
Tay I would be afther drinkin',
Good while since I had a cup,
I've an appetite I'm thinkin'."

Into Lower Abbey-street,
Here the conversation dropped them:
Nearing now the farther end,
Lo! the Union Buildings stopped them.
Crowding round the open door,
Waiting through the wind and weather,
Stood a mass of rags and bones,
Such as seldom comes together.

Hungry hollow eyes were here,
Cheeks all sunk, and forms all squalid,
Every type of wretchedness—
Poor and needy, pinched and pallid:
Mothers, with their little mites
Crying for the food untasted,
Boys grown old in ways of sin,
Men with features wan and wasted.

Soon within the welcome door
Found they all the space to enter;
Kindly ushers gained their guests
Seats in gallery or centre.
Hymn was sung, and grace was said;
Then, no longer hesitating,
Fell to all these hungry ones
With a zest that beats narrating.

Thirty minutes by the clock
Did the cups and saucers rattle,
Thirty minutes did each man
With the famine fiend do battle.
Followed silence, and a friend,
From an open Bible reading,
Told of One, though poor Himself,
Once five thousand poor ones feeding.

One, of heaven and earth the King,
Who dispensed with all his glory,
Moved amid the sinful sort,
Lived their friend and learned their story.
Lone ones in his presence found
Gladness great for all their grieving,
None who ever came in need
Went away without receiving.

Life of sorrow, life of care,
Lived He for the sake of others;
And that suffering life He gave
To redeem his fallen brothers—
Would the Father now receive
Those who pardon sought by Jesus?
Yes—his dying paid the debt,
Yes—his condemnation frees us.

Ah! but might a sad one come
Reft of every good endeavour?
Yes—such weak and wandering ones
Was He sure to welcome ever.
All might come that very morn,
Why, O why, should one keep staying,
When the Saviour bade them come?
There was danger in delaying.

Thus the speaker—and his words
In a silence solemn ended:
And the people went their way
When the final prayer ascended.
Homeward through the streets we turned,
As the Sunday bells were pealing—
For the things we saw and heard
Gratitude and gladness feeling.

A MEDICAL MISSION AT SMYRNA.

WRITING lately to a friend in Edinburgh, Mr. J. M. Eppstein, Medical Missionary in Smyrna, says:—

"I have had many proofs of the usefulness and blessing of my dispensary work, and on missionary journeys it is invaluable. Many of the patients come purposely early, not to lose the opportunity of being prayed with. In one place in the country they always instal me in the synagogue with my medicine-chest, and I sometimes spend the whole day seeing the sick, giving them medicines, speaking to and arguing with some of them when time permits. Thus, with the medicine-chest on the one side, Bibles and tracts on the other, the missionary is allowed to preach Christ, and to attract them by Christian love, and point them to the 'Lamb of God.'

"At the Wanderers' Home for Proselytes and Inquirers many of the poor are lodged and cared for until they can find work, and are all the while instructed in the truths of Christianity. I also conduct night-schools for young men. On Saturdays I have a Spanish service in the afternoon. The Saturday mornings are generally devoted to visits in the Jewish quarter. Last year a good deal of my time was taken up with Russian, Roumanian, and Egyptian refugees, to provide for some, to give medical and other relief for others, and visit them from time to time, or receive calls from them."

Any friends who feel led to help this good brother in his interesting work, may communicate with Major Napier Smith, 17, Buckingham-terrace, Edinburgh.

QUARRYMEN AT BATH.—Miss Skinner, of Bath, sends us an account of a visit she lately paid to the large stone quarries in the neighbourhood of that city. "The men," she says, "seemed cheerful and contented, and glad to have a word of sympathy and encouragement. We visited some of their wives on our return. They are far from the Church, and seldom get a visit from any Christian friend; but there is a Baptist Chapel close by, and I was told that they had little meetings for prayer sometimes among themselves. Yet I think from such expressions as these that I heard, "We have not had any one to speak to us for a long time," "No one ever comes to see us here," that some Christian brother who could speak or sing the Gospel might do worse with his time than sometimes go and spend a day in the quarries."

THE STRATFORD "CHRISTIAN BAND."

A COMPANY of young believers in connection with the congregation in Stratford, of which Mr. Knaggs is pastor, have banded themselves together for purposes of mutual edification and combined Christian work. At a recent meeting of the band, papers were read by some of the members on The Best Means of Influencing those who are "Almost Christians." We extract the following portions of an excellent and suggestive paper by Mr. M. S. Lindsley, which has been placed at our disposal:—

"The method of adapting our influence to the case of those with whom we have to deal, demands our best attention. It should ever be done in a meek but earnest and prayerful spirit. Is it not a fact that the most of our failures to impress others are traceable to deficiencies in ourselves? The tenor of our conversation is not after the style of the Master; the words as they fall from the lips instead of being fired by the love of Christ, too often seem as icicles to the souls of those addressed.

"Perhaps we have omitted to supplicate our Father's blessing and the Holy Spirit's guidance before attempting our mission; or we have not prayerfully sought out the passages of Gospel truth most suited to the case, and have had recourse to ideas of our own. Need we be surprised if, as the result, our appeals have been fruitless?

"Again, it is not uncommon for Christian professors to recount the fierce judgments of the Almighty against the wicked, thinking, as it were, to drive the sinner to Christ for salvation. This, I contend, finds no analogy in the teaching of the Lord Himself. Has He not said, 'If I be lifted up from the earth, I will draw all men unto Me'? Better far for us that we should strive to bring to bear upon the unsaved the truth of a full and free Salvation, offered by a merciful and gracious Father, 'who desireth not that any should perish, but that all should come unto Him and be saved.'

"Further, let us never be impetuous in forcing the claims of God upon the sinner, or hastily judge his imperfections. Who amongst us is perfect? Better would it be for us ofttimes to turn the eye upon self, and seek to discern our own faults, than to criticise and expostulate upon the failings of others.

"Patience and perseverance in trying to lead the sinner to the Saviour are two of the most essential points in our work. We are apt to flag in this matter, as one rebuff after another meets us, and our labour seems to be lost upon the hardness of the natures of men. We forget that the work is not man's but God's, or we do not thoroughly realise the blessed promise that 'his word shall not return unto Him void.'

"It is also well that we should fit our sympathies with the peculiar circumstances that beset the path of the guilty one. Is it the depth of sin to which he has sunk that prevents him believing that this salvation is for him? Let us lovingly lead to the Fountain open for sin and uncleanness, which washes white as snow, and to the blessed words of our Heavenly Father, that to those who confess their sins He is able and willing to forgive them their sins, and to cleanse from all unrighteousness. Is it the dark misgivings of doubt or superstition, that hang as a thick cloud over the soul? Let us pray that Christ, as 'the Light of the World,' may chase away all darkness, and that the soul may be irradiated with his light. Is it that he has become so entangled by the alluring pleasures of the world, the flesh, and the devil, so that he is as a ship in a tempest, tossed about hither and thither at its will? Let us lead him to the Rock, Christ Jesus. Resting there, though storms may rage, and the waves of sin may threaten to overwhelm the soul, yet shall that soul know the enjoyment of 'the peace of God which passeth all understanding.'"

A BAPTIST CHURCH IN NEW YORK counts twelve Chinamen among its members, one of whom is shortly to be sent as a missionary to his countrymen in Canton.

A PRAISING FO'CSLE.

THE Fo'csle at the "Welcome Home" has been called a "praying Fo'csle." A few nights ago it proved to be truly a "praising fo'csle." The meeting was commenced, as usually, by singing. After prayer it was asked, in sailor phraseology, how many then present had "shipped" for the heavenly land? Several held up their hands to signify that the "Strangers' Rest" and the "Welcome Home" had been, as they termed it, the "shipping office" in which they had signed for the glorious Gospel ship, under the Great Captain of their salvation, Christ Jesus.

The first sailor who stood up for testimony, was a Welshman. He said: "I came about three years ago from Dundee. I lost my bag by giving it to a man to carry; as I was drunk, I could not look after it. The man ran away, and I never saw it again. I had £15, which I lost or spent in drink, and then I was so poor I had no place to put my head down. A countryman of mine said, "Come to the 'Strangers' Rest.' There I soon found friends. I came to live at the 'Welcome Home,' and one of the lady friends from the West-End had many conversations with me, which were greatly blessed to my soul. I have been twenty years in the gold-diggings, and have spent a fortune. I am thankful to say, after spending my young days in the service of Satan, Christ has forgiven an old sinner. Young men, give God your hearts!"

After an Irishman, a Scotchman, a Dane, and a Swede had each given brief testimonies, a young Norwegian, who had run away from home, said: "I went away from home. My dear father said to me, I was going to hell. But now I am saved. I am going to write home and gladden my father's heart. A Christian brother at the 'Welcome Home' helped me, and I am happy now."

Another Swede said: "I am glad to say on the 1st of March the Lord saved me. I was on the ground drunk, and was kindly helped by one of the workers at the 'Welcome Home,' who brought me in and spoke to me about Jesus and his love."

Then another Dane: "I heard of this Jesus in the Ratcliff Highway, and after I left here He found me on the high seas. My shipmates did not know what was the matter with me, because I told them that the Lord had saved me 2000 miles away from here. Bless his name!"

His wife, who after her husband's conversion came to see us, wishing to have the same happiness, stood up and said: "I am not a sailor, but I am a sailor's wife, and it was the words of the 23rd Psalm that brought peace to my soul. We are a happy couple. May the Lord keep us both to the end!"

Two more stood up (a Russian Finn and a German), giving praise to God for having been led to Christ at the Ratcliff Highway "Home."

Captain Webber: "I am thankful to God to-night, my brother sailors, to be with you. I shall never forget the night that the Lord delivered me from shipwreck. I had lost my crew, and three Greeks left me in the boat. The boat upset and threw me in the sea. I struggled with the waves, and after a long time was able to reach the boat and turn her, the Lord helping me all the time. I commended myself afresh to God. Presently I saw something in the distance, which I discovered to be a cask of oil, which had been thrown out of the boat. I swam for it, and brought it back with me. I drank some, and found it most valuable, after the quantity of salt water I had swallowed while in the sea. Feeling the good effect of the draught of oil, I thought next I would rub myself with it and pour some on my clothes, which were drenching with sea-water. I found this to be a great comfort to me, especially as the waves were constantly dashing over me. While thanking God for the blessing I had found the oil to be to me, He gave me the thought to pour some of it on the water all around the boat. This I did, and I was immediately in a calm for some time; having more oil still I was able to renew it from time to time, till God in his mercy sent relief through a vessel taking me up.

"During the time the storm was at its height my hat was taken from me. This I felt to be a great loss, as it was valuable to protect my head from the heat of the sun and also as a signal of distress. I caught sight of it in the distance, then prayed earnestly that it might be returned to me. Immediately it seemed to come nearer, and on and on it was brought by the waves till it was thrown by them on to my very breast. During the eighteen hours I was thus alone with God I realised his power and presence more than I have ever felt in my life, and can never cease to thank Him for his wondrous love to me. I am pleased to see so many sailors here to-night. I hope you will all take the Gospel away to foreign parts. I trust none here will go out before they give God their hearts."

TROPHIES OF GRACE IN RANGOON.

THE Rangoon Methodist Episcopal Church has lately enjoyed a precious season of revival interest. Dr. J. Stone, of Calcutta, was with us for nearly a month, during which time morning meetings for prayer and conference and evening evangelistic services were continuously held. A very noticeable and encouraging feature of the meetings was the spirit of prayer and supplication which came upon some of the Lord's people. A number were accustomed to meet at some appointed house at mid-day to wrestle with God for the enduement of power from on high; and, in some cases, blessed prayer-meetings of an impromptu character continued until late at night in believers' houses. Brothers and sisters, mostly of humble station in life, went forth with all boldness to invite friends and neighbours to the services, and, if possible, to have personal religious conversation with them. The results were very satisfactory. During Dr. Stone's stay about sixty persons publicly sought Christ, a goodly number of whom, so far as we can judge, have been truly converted. The writer continued the meetings for a further period of ten days after Dr. Stone had returned to Calcutta. A few were enabled to accept Christ.

Some of the cases were very interesting. A woman who had lived with a European for some twenty years in comfortable circumstances as the mother of his six children, was brought under deep conviction of sin. By the grace of God she was strengthened to "come out and be separate" from her sinful life, absolutely penniless and not knowing what was to become of her. God has given her friends, and she is happy in the assurance of salvation. Two men who had sinfully cohabited with native females for many years have been married to them, and another will be married in a few days. The two former have been very graciously saved; one of the two, a European, seems to be wholly absorbed in praying, reading God's Word, and singing his praises; and promises to be a helpful worker in the vineyard.

Another convert is a man who had sunk almost as low as it is possible for a human being to sink, having had delirium tremens four times within the past year. He now seems to be really sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in his right mind. He bears a humble, self-distrustful, yet confident testimony to the saving power of Christ. Since his conversion he has had his miserable room whitewashed, and takes great delight in pointing to the motto, "God bless our home," which now adorns its wall. At a believers' meeting held last evening about thirty-five were present, the majority being recent converts. Nearly all were able to testify of the grace of God, and many for the first time led in prayer. We are making every meeting a salvation meeting, and God is with us.

SCRIPTURE READERS.—Many will have heard with regret of the death of Mr. J. Roddam Tate, late Lay Secretary of the Church of England Scripture Readers' Association, 56, Haymarket. The loss is a very great one to the Society, especially to the readers, to whom he was a kind friend.

CHRISTIAN COLPORTAGE IN NORTHAMPTON.

TO-DAY, writes a correspondent, I have had a busy and profitable time in company with two colporteurs of the Christian Colportage Association in the market square of Northampton. The market-place is thronged with those who buy and sell; there are butchers' stalls, benches filled with game, fish dealers, rows of fruit vendors, crockeryware dealers, and the thousand and one things that go to make up a market in one of our large provincial towns.

Our Bible and bookstall is well pitched in a prominent position. In the front and on either side are printed in large type the words of John, "God is Love." From time to time we have people coming to the stall to look, to buy a book or a Bible, or to listen to the Gospel. One of the colporteurs attracts people to the stall by playing hymns on a concertina, such as "Beyond the smiling and the weeping," or "Beulah Land," whilst the other does a brisk trade in the penny edition of Songs and Solos. By way of variety, a chapter of the Word is read reverently and calmly; then he effects a sale of a twopenny Testament or a tenpenny or higher priced Bible. Or, perhaps, a chapter is read from "Christie's Old Organ," "Sea Boy's Grave," or some such Gospel story. Several dozens of these pass from our stall into the hands of anxious readers.

We hold conversations on eternal things during the day, and find many opportunities for "telling out among the people, that the Lord is King." Upon our stall lie a hundred large ornamented texts, "The Lord's Prayer," for one penny, "Our Father which art in Heaven," &c. The colporteur's voice sounds clear and firm as the people gather round. "'Our Father,' 'Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God.'" Whilst one is speaking the other is in the crowd sowing precious seed. Everyone of these texts has disappeared; in fact, we find when our day's work is over, about ten p.m., that we have effected upwards of 270 sales, ranging from a penny tract to a half-crown Bible.

Our next-door neighbour is selling "the correct card" for the coming races. The fickle crowd gathers around the racing prophet and we are forsaken. Up gets one of the colporteurs: "Our friend is talking about 'the Straight Tip.' I will talk to you about racing. We are on the winning side. 'Know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one receiveth the prize;' 'a horse is a vain thing for safety, neither shall he deliver any by his great strength;' but 'He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life.' He is delivered from the wrath to come, and is enabled to 'run the race set before him looking unto Jesus.'" Now the numbers at the stall increase again. The blessed Gospel is proclaimed to them, and so passes the day in the Master's service.

Late in the evening a Christian worker in the town came to us and asked, "To whom do you belong? What denomination keeps you at work?" "My dear brother, what clock is that striking ten?" "All Saints'." "Thank you; even so, this work belongs to God and all saints and to you. Will you pray for it?"

[This admirable work in a town which has been so prominently before us during the past two years, was commenced by the Christian Colportage Association, (37, Farringdon-street, E.C.) in order to give testimony to the Son of God from house to house, as well as in the market-place. It has been signally blessed. We understand that funds are now needed to maintain it. All that is necessary will, we hope, be supplied.]

THE BLIND.—The twenty-seventh anniversary of the day of special prayer and thanksgiving on behalf of the Blind, observed by those friends who take an interest in Dr. Moon's system of embossed reading (now in 250 languages), and in the establishing of Home-teaching societies and Free-lending libraries for the Blind at home and abroad, will take place on the first Sunday in May.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY.

THE COMING LONDON CAMPAIGN.

AFTER a busy day in Liverpool last Thursday, Mr. Moody came to London by the night train, and met a large company of Christian workers at Exeter Hall on Friday afternoon. They had been hastily summoned, on short notice; nevertheless, they mustered in strong force, completely filling the area of the Lower Hall. As far as our knowledge extended, the gathering was a remarkably representative one; that fact and the unbroken harmony that marked the proceedings augur well for the success of the Mission that will be carried on in the Metropolis, if the Lord will, next winter and spring.

The main object of Mr. Moody's visit, as appeared from his few opening remarks, was to urge on the London Christians immediate and systematic preparation for the coming campaign. He was most anxious, he said, that the work of the after-meeting, which was at once the most difficult and the most important, should be as thorough as possible. In order to this the selection and the training of competent workers should begin at once. There were many church members who had no settled assurance of their own salvation. These were not fit to deal with the anxious; no man could work for the salvation of another until he knew that he was saved himself. It was necessary that some of the more deeply taught Christians should lead these doubting, half-and-half believers up to a higher plane of spiritual life, where they could be of service to others. When the Mission began he hoped to have Bible lectures for Christians in the afternoons, and he would propose that at the close of these there should be opportunities for friendly conversation with all who had doubts or spiritual difficulties of any kind. The evening meetings, as far as possible, would be for the unsaved.

Then, if they wished to reach the masses outside the churches, in the different districts where the meetings would be held, these people would have to be visited in their homes. Simple advertising would not bring them to the meetings. There must be a systematic canvassing of the various districts, inviting the people individually, and providing them with tickets of admission. All that meant plenty of work, but, unless it was done, they could not hope to achieve great results. Further, steps should be taken to secure a record of those who were conversed with, whether they professed conversion or were only under spiritual concern, so that by immediate visitation the work of the inquiry-room might be followed up. For this purpose a band of visitors would be need d, to go into the homes of the people and fight out the battle there.

At the request of Mr. Moody, a brief account was given by Mr. Campbell White of the visitation work carried on in Glasgow after the recent Gospel Mission in that city. A band of ladies, numbering about twenty, with the aid of a few gentlemen, had charge of the visitation. Each lady had twenty visitors under her, making a total of 400 visitors. Glasgow was mapped out into twenty districts, and the visitation of the professed converts was apportioned to these ladies according to the districts in which the converts resided. Mr. Moody had held services in two towns at some little distance from Glasgow, near Loch Lomond, and he was followed by Mr. Pentecost. In these two towns there were about 800 who professed conversion. A young man who had been very successful in personal dealing followed up all these cases; he has gone twice round the list, and his report was that by far the greater number of them remain steadfast in their profession.

In answer to a question, Mr. H. Matheson, Chairman of the London Committee, said that according to present arrangements the meetings would commence on the 1st of November in Islington. The plan of the campaign was laid down for six months, and it was intended to erect in succession two or more large and moveable buildings in twelve different districts of the metropolis. After a fortnight's meetings in Islington, Messrs. Moody and Sankey would probably strike fresh soil in the south, and afterwards alternate between different points until the whole of London was reached, to some extent at least. Several friends present seemed to fear that the western districts might be overlooked, but Mr. Matheson assured them that this was not so, although he did not know that any such central place as the Haymarket Opera House could be had on this occasion. The meetings, he indicated, would be restricted, as far as practicable, to those living in the particular districts, so as to give all an equal chance.

Various questions were addressed to Mr. Moody as to the conduct of the after-meetings, which, from his extensive experience, he was able satisfactorily to answer. He pointed out that the most effective safeguard against any abuse of the after-meeting by the entry of unworthy persons, was the presence of the local pastors and others who would be acquainted with the workers. Eventually a small "committee of selection" was appointed with a view to the formation of a band of trained workers, who would systematically devote a portion of their time to this important branch of the work.

One friend having asked whether the existing churches and chapels could not be utilised, Mr. Moody said he fully trusted they would be. During the Liverpool meetings the attendance has been so great that in addition to the central services in Hengler's Circus they had filled several Church of England buildings and chapels at the same hour, where the services were conducted by suitable persons, and in all of which, it may be added, Mr. Sankey has sung the Gospel.

Before closing the interesting proceedings with prayer, Mr. Moody said he was very much encouraged by the tone and spirit of the meeting. He felt as if his bones were all on fire, and he was ready for the battle. Mr. Hugh Matheson, in the name of the assembled friends, expressed to Mr. Moody their deep appreciation of the many personal and domestic sacrifices he and his fellow-labourer, Mr. Sankey, were making in connection with this arduous campaign. He offered them the heartiest thanks and loving fellowship of the Christians of London.

THE WORK IN LIVERPOOL.

[BY A CORRESPONDENT.]

A well-known Liverpool detective rose in the Young Men's Meeting one night last week, and begged permission to give his testimony to the lasting effects of the parallel movement eight years ago. He had frequented the meetings at that time, and had since kept his eye upon many who professed conversion. Many of these, he said, had been the worst characters in the city; but he could testify from personal and professional observation that the change was radical and permanent. He imself was a fruit of that movement, and he proffered his testimony to encourage those engaged in a work which, judged by its effects, could be nothing less than supernatural and divine.

Similar testimonies now greet the workers on every hand, and if I were asked what was the most remarkable result of the present movement, next to the large addition to the number of professing converts, I should say the marvellous proofs everywhere afforded as to the solidity and stability of the revival in 1875. I have conversed personally with scores and scores who date their conversion from that time. Many of the converts besides are working as missionaries and ministers in other parts of the country; others have gone abroad, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific have been used of God to win souls for Christ publicly and privately. Of not a few also we have heard that they have "gone home." But in Liverpool alone there is fruit enough for the former movement to refute a thousand times the suspicion that the work's was evanescent. The Free Breakfasts, the Carters' Mission with its two thousand professing converts, the Cocoa Palace Company, with its forty going and paying establishments, all rose out of the '75 Mission. And, according to the testimony of many ministers and superintendents of Christian work, the Evangelistic and other agencies connected with these and with many chapels, churches, and missions, are largely manned by the converts of that year.

With such facts in sight, it is not surprising to find the highest ecclesiastical authority in Liverpool giving the following testimony to the work, and the men who are the instruments in doing it. Bishop Ryle, presiding on Monday week at the annual meeting of the Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, remarked upon the smallness of the attendance, and attributed it to the legitimate attraction to Christian workers of the Circus meetings. He was one of those, proceeded his lordship, who thanked God for Mr. Moody. He thanked God for the testimony Mr. Moody bore to the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ. There was nothing sensational, no beating of drums and blowing of trumpets; he simply told in very simple language the story of the Cross, and brought out the truth of the Word of God, not for any party, not for any sect, not for any particular church, but for the cause of his Lord and Saviour. He thanked God for any man who could get the ear of the people in the way Mr. Moody did. He hoped that they would all get a great deal of good from his visit, and that they would all try more and more to stick to the simplicity of the Gospel of Christ.

Another valuable testimony to the movement came from Rev. Chas. Garrett, who addressed a vast assembly in Hengler's Circus on Saturday week, on the subject of Temperance. He said: "I rejoice exceedingly in the wonderful work which has been accomplished here through the agency of our dear friends; and I think that not only the Church, but the people of this country ought to thank God that Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey ever visited our shores. The amount of good accomplished by their visit can only be known to the mind of the Omniscient One; but it has brought Christian people nearer together; and what a boon that is! and how acceptable to the mind of Him who prayed that we might be one! How many things there are to keep us asunder! and what a wrong impression many good men have of one another! We ought all to be true, earnest friends. They have also shown us the power of the simple Gospel, and the power of Christian song. We have learnt a lesson, in that respect, which will abide with us when our friends have gone away. Another thing which has been brought home to us as, I think, it never was to the whole Church before, is that Christianity is a LIFE, rather than a CREED—that a man's Christianity is not shown so much by his being connected with this or that organisation, or by his pronouncing this or that shibboleth, but by his living as Christ would have him to live, endeavouring to make earth like heaven, and men like God."

As regards the work of the evangelists last week, there is no new thing to chronicle. Mr. Moody has preached with the old power and with the old results; and Mr. Sankey has sung with his customary fervour and impressiveness. All the subsidiary meetings have gone on as before, and every day has witnessed large additions to the list of inquirers.

A local contemporary narrates the following pleasing incident that occurred at one of the afternoon meetings: "The girls of Mount Vernon Reformatory Institution visited 'Henglers,' accompanied by the matron and a few friends. They occupied seats near the platform, and the children sang a number of hymns very sweetly. They were so occupied when Messrs. Moody and Sankey entered the circus. The former gentleman seemed quite struck, and expressed his admiration of the children's singing, saying to Mr. Sankey, 'These children sing better than your choir.' Mr. Moody subsequently selected several suitable hymns for them, and Mr. Sankey improvised a music lesson. Mr. Storey, the efficient choirmaster, also expressed his appreciation, and said he would have been glad had they joined the choir. The happy and natural manner of Mr. Moody in adapting little incidents of this kind is one of the secrets of his success. He appears to be a firm and thorough man of business, but genial and unconstrained in manner. There can be no doubt that with the aid of Mr. Sankey's sweet singing a great and glorious work has been accomplished."

The Protestant Standard is doing a good work in disseminating reports of Mr. Moody's addresses. On Wednesday evening, last week, Mr. Moody preached at the invitation of his brother-evangelist, Mr. W. P. Lockhart, in the latter's Tabernacle at Toxteth Park.

Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey sail on Saturday next in the Alaska direct for New York, whither they will be followed by many prayers. They remain in harness, however, almost to the last hour. On Thursday the farewell Convention will be held in the Circus; and on Friday night will take place the most interesting gathering of the series—a meeting for young converts. Besides the recent converts, those of 1875 are also to be admitted by special ticket, the only others to be present being the inquiry-room workers. This meeting is anticipated with much interest and prayerfulness.

REFORMATORY AND REFUGE UNION.

EXETER HALL was crowded last week upon the occasion of the 26th annual meeting of this Union, established for the benefit of destitute and neglected children, discharged prisoners, and outcast women. The popular feature of the proceedings was the singing of selected pieces by a choir of 650 children from various refuges and homes in London in connection with the Union. From a statement submitted by the secretary (Mr. A. J. S. Maddison), it appeared that 403 children have been dealt with by the Boys' Beadle during the year. Since the foundation of the Union, 3,964 children have been provided for. The Shoeblacks' Beadle has dealt with 369 boys in the past year, and the female missionaries have had charge of 928 new cases, besides aiding 156 cases formerly helped; 260 have been placed in homes, 252 have been provided with situations, 79 restored to friends, 114 sent to hospitals, and 218 temporarily assisted. Such rescue work as has been undertaken was to facilitate the work of 550 affiliated institutions. The educational report of the Government inspector was very encouraging. A good deal has been accomplished by means of circulating good literature, particularly in the interests of discharged prisoners. As illustrating the reformatory school work, it was stated concerning the Castle Howard Institution that over 90 per cent. of the inmates have been found to be earning an honest livelihood for three consecutive years after their discharge.

A short address to the children being given by Mr. E. J. Kennedy, Mr. Arnold Morley, M.P., moved a resolution, "That the work of this Union in assisting and in promoting co-operation amongst preventive and reformatory institutions, and in striving to reclaim the destitute and the outcast, is worthy of hearty support." He spoke of the economy of the Union's operations, and pointed out its advantages as a means of obtaining information, of stimulating effort, and of doing voluntarily work of a kind too frequently left to be undertaken by Parliament. The motion was seconded by the Rev. Churchill Julius, M.A. The Rev. Donald Fraser, D.D., referred to the association not only as a preventive agency but as improving the condition of the lower classes, a work which could never be undertaken by the State. Lord Shaftesbury, Chairman, said he was very much indebted to the Ragged-school children, for he had been pretty nearly clothed by them, having received slippers, socks, vests, and even bed-linen, worked by their little fingers. He hoped that reformatories would be shortly altogether extinguished by the Refuge Union.

YOUNG MENS' CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

THE annual meeting of this institution at Exeter Hall last Thursday evening, was one of the most enthusiastic it has known for many years. Every corner of the spacious room was crowded; how many were excluded for want of space we cannot tell. Lord Shaftesbury presided over the brilliant and crowded assembly. Mr. Hind Smith's report, a mere abstract of the fuller statement that will be duly published, was laden with facts of the most absorbing interest and importance. The mere enumeration of the varied branches of work, and special efforts made during the past year, at Exeter Hall, Aldersgate-street, and Gracechurch-street, would fill more than all the space at our disposal. We can only say, therefore, in a word, that these three branches of the "London Central" Association appear to be sparing no possible exertion for the spiritual, intellectual, and physical advancement of the young men of London. By-the-way, we may remark that we missed the interesting outline of Association work in foreign lands, that used to be a feature of these reports in former years; presumably that department of secretarial duty now devolves on the International Association. It was publicly announced that Mr. Hind Smith had resigned the general secretaryship, in order to give his whole time to the task of extending and consolidating Association work throughout the provinces. His place at Exeter Hall has been taken by Mr. Cameron Churchill, "who," says the report, "is well qualified by training and by active Christian experience, as well as by his position and attainments to superintend the work."

Mr. J. H. Tritton, in presenting the balance-sheet, said the receipts of the past year were about £8000; the expenditure had exceeded the receipts by nearly £2000. This, he went on to say, when added to a mortgage of £11,000, made a total deficit of £13,000; but Mr. Algernon Coote having set to work to raise that amount, there had been obtained in cash and in promises £5515, £1000 being conditional on the balance being made up.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes delivered an address on "Christian Audacity." If he were asked to say what was the great need of the Church he should reply Christian audacity. True Christians were supremely men of action, and men of action in every age who had accomplished their object had done so by means of audacity. Audacity was the great hinge on which the success of revolutions had turned, and his prayer was that the members of that Association might have Christian audacity. Having referred to Luther's conduct in relation to the Diet of Worms as a remarkable example of audacity based on faith in God, and adherence to his Word, the speaker said the recent raising of £10,000 on behalf of the Salvation Army was worthy of imitation in reference to the deficit just mentioned by Mr. Tritton. In concluding, he urged the young men in that Association to exhibit their Christian audacity by never being ashamed of Christ, and openly declaring themselves on his side. He referred to the crusade begun by the Bishop of Durham among the pitmen, and to movements among a number of graduates at Oxford in the cause of social purity, and urged members of Christian Associations to co-operate in all movements of that kind.

Rev. Canon Wilberforce, on rising to speak on "Christian Thoroughness," received a very cordial welcome. At first it seemed doubtful whether he could speak more than a few sentences, owing to his suffering from a severe affection of the throat; but, forgetting his weakness, he spoke for about twenty minutes with his usual vigour. The preceding speaker had told them the truth; there was no Christian audacity, and no Christian thoroughness, beyond the mere empty echo of the word, except they came from the power of the indwelling Christ. People might talk of Christianity, and the battle-field of the world, but if they were proceeding in their own strength, or as members of some Old Adam Improvement Company (Limited), they would fail. When they took upon themselves the name of the Young Men's Christian Association, they claimed a power to work in their hearts that would make them stronger than any foe. There never was a time when Christ and Satan might be said to be more fully face to face than now, and there was only one kind of Christian that had no locus standi in the Church; he was the selfish man who banded himself under the banner, but had no Christian heart. They did not want such men. As Christians, the Lord had called them the salt of the earth, and they should realise what they could be in this great sin-stained London if they were all living to Him. But if the salt had lost its savour, what was its doom? It was not deserving of a judgment from the Father, who would leave it to be spat out of existence by the contempt of man. God forbid that anyone present should be no more than mere savourless salt! They had heard of the power of the blue ribbon, and he would say to any who had not this ribbon that they ought to have it. Not, however, that this was Christianity. When the other side was reached the question would not be, How many teetotallers have you made? but How many souls have you saved? It was the want of courage to witness that was keeping many young men back. A great many were too timid to let their conviction work out; but they should never forget that it must be in them before it could come out. First, they had to let the dear Master come in, and then to let Him come out in their lives. He did not believe in young men who kept their Christianity to themselves. If young men had true hold of the Saviour they would certainly want to make Him known.

The last address was by Rev. Jackson Wray. Although, as he remarked, it was no easy task to hold the audience after the stirring speeches that had gone before, it must be said that he succeeded admirably. With "Christian Pleasures" for a text, he showed in eloquent and picturesque language that the Christian young man can engage in all the legitimate recreations that the world affords, and that come through the avenues of his natural senses. Superadded to these he has the assurance of salvation through Jesus Christ, and a joy that all the so-called pleasures of earth can never give.

The short address of the noble Chairman was, as usual, practical and to the point. He made a pathetic allusion to his advancing age, and to the fact that he could not hope now to preside at many more such meetings. We trust his valuable and useful life will yet be prolonged, that he may stimulate his younger brethren by the power of his high example.

STRANGERS' REST, CONSTANTINOPLE.

WRITING to a friend in London, Miss Maria A. West says: "We have at last succeeded in getting a place in the old city, in the midst of many 'Khans,' where men and lads lodge while away from their homes in the interior. The first Sunday twelve men came, the second nineteen. To-day (March 14) we finished the work of taking a new place at Galata: two good rooms, the best and cheapest that we have yet found, at £70 a year (Turkish). We have only means to rent for the half-year, and trust God will furnish funds to go on. We cannot tell whence our 'daily bread' will come, but we look to our Father for needed supplies."

Miss West's address is, The Rest, Galata, Constantinople.

CABMEN IN NORTH LONDON.—Dear Sir,—May I ask for a little space to plead for the cabmen in North London? While in other parts of the city Cabmen's Shelters are erected and opportunities afforded for reading and refreshment, the men in the northern suburbs seem to be outside the pale of Christian effort. If Shelters cannot be erected, possibly rooms might be hired in the immediate vicinity of the cab-ranks, where Christian workers might offer the men interesting literature of a religious character, and speak a word in season as they had opportunity. W.

Stoke Newington, N.

[We believe the friends at Mildmay carry on a work among cabmen in the neighbourhood, but there is doubtless room for much more.]

Notes and Comments.

AMONG the many tributes from the Queen and other members of the Royal Family laid upon the coffin of the late Hon. Mrs. Stonor, at the funeral ceremony on the 18th inst., was one of a most beautiful and touching character from the Princess of Wales. It was a floral device bearing the following inscription: "For my dearest friend, Mrs. Stonor, from her most devoted and sorrowing Alexandra . . .

Nothing in my hands I bring,
Simply to Thy Cross I cling."

Too much has been made of the Archbishop of Canterbury's reply to the appeal of the clergy to him upon the subject of the Affirmation Bill. The following sentences which he uttered should be considered by those who would fain make the Primate an apologist for the measure. While stating that under certain circumstances the substitution of an affirmation for an oath would not necessarily deprive Parliament of its Christian character, he added: "Nevertheless it does appear to me that this is no abstract substitution of one form of declaration for another, and I shall oppose it." His Grace also said that if the proposal were made "in the serenest times, and on religious grounds," it should be made "with the greatest deliberation."

A long life of usefulness in the cause of Christ has just been brought to a close. The Rev. S. W. Dias, for fifty years Singalese Colonial Chaplain of Colombo, Ceylon, died early in the present month, from paralysis of the brain, induced by excess of work. His great undertaking—the translation of the Bible—to which he had devoted many aborious years, was only completed a week before the attack which has ended in death.

A Bill is about to be introduced to the House of Lords for the better protection of young girls, founded on the Report of the Select Committee of the House of Lords on the subject. A joint committee, representative of a large number of the philanthropic societies in the Metropolis, has been formed to watch over the progress of the measure, and to promote petitions in favour of it. The co-operation of the London clergy and Nonconformist ministers is being solicited, with the sanction of the Primate, the Bishops of London, Rochester, St. Albans, and Bedford, as also of Dr. Allon, Mr. Spurgeon, and other Nonconformist leaders. Several Boards of Guardians have promised support, so that altogether there is reason to believe a satisfactory measure will be secured.

An important letter from Mr. William Tallack, of the Howard Association appeared in Wednesday's Times, on "The Supervision of Emigrated Children." The need of such supervision is very forcibly shown by facts of a very convincing character. Grave moral dangers exist in Western States and cities, as well as at home, and on the European continent. Hence, as Mr. Tallack says, "Poor children sent thither need a most careful selection and supervision in regard to the persons and homes among whom they are to be permanently located from their distant native land." There is clearly an "indispensable necessity" for preliminary training of the children, and for some arrangement for careful inspection of the homes provided for them in the land to which they are sent.

Saddest, probably, among all the secular publications of the season are the three volumes of "Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle" (Longmans, Green & Co.), edited by Mr. J. A. Froude. What a fierce and lurid light do these letters throw upon the "splendid misery" of a wedded life in which unworthy ambitions, or all-absorbing pursuits, check the free play of that mutual consideration and forbearance which are the first pre-requisites of domestic happiness. More loudly still do they proclaim the folly of hoping cheerfully to bear the trials and crosses that dog the earthly footsteps of every son and daughter of Adam, without the sustaining grace of the God of all consolation.

Amid the general gloom that seems to have enshrouded the later years of this highly-gifted wife of a greatly gifted man, the Christian reader sees, with welcome, some stray and struggling beams of light and hope. In one letter written to her husband from Scotland, while on a visit to some maiden aunts, Mrs. Carlyle says, with characteristic plainness of utterance:—

My heart was opened by their kindness to tell them that it was nothing but apprehension of their bothering me about my soul which had estranged me from them so entirely. A——'s reply, given with an arch look and tone, was very nice: "Indeed, Jeannie, you need not have been afraid of our setting ourselves to reform you; it is plain enough that nothing short of God's own grace can do that; but I won't despair that the time may come, though I am not such a fool as to think that I can hasten it."

There is a touch of ultra-Calvinism in this last phrase that mars the beauty of the otherwise "nice" reply. Some years later, Mrs. Carlyle records in her diary, after the usual recital of bodily and mental troubles, these striking experiences of the Psalmist; they show that the memories of early acquaintance with Scripture truth, gained in her Scottish home, had not forsaken her through all her after-life:—

"Have mercy upon me, O Lord; for I am weak: O Lord, heal me; for my bones are vexed. My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O Lord, how long? Return, O Lord, deliver my soul: O save me for thy mercies' sake" (Ps. vi. 2—4).

But, as we have said, the book on the whole is an inexpressibly sad one. The wisdom of the editor, we think, is open to serious question; yet there are many valuable lessons that may be learnt from these brilliant but melancholy pages by the discerning reader.

A correspondent, writing to us on the importance of individual effort for the conversion of others, cites the following instances from personal experience:—

During some special services recently held, I was asked to speak to the seeking ones in the inquiry-room. I found there a fine-looking young woman, who seemed to be deeply in earnest, and longing to find salvation. She told me of some special difficulties and temptations which seemed to be in the way, and said, "I have been attending Mr. So-and-so's Bible-class for some weeks past, hoping that he would speak to me about my soul."

Some few years ago I attended a special service for young people, and those who were anxious about their souls were invited to come forward as inquirers. I saw, sitting in one of the pews, a little girl belonging to my class in the Sabbath-school. I asked her if she would like to go forward as a seeker of salvation? Bursting into tears, she answered, "Yes." She was only waiting for an invitation. That afternoon she found peace; and when I asked her if she had felt her need of a Saviour before, she replied, "Oh, yes, teacher, for a long time." I found that this girl had been sitting in my class week after week, and longing to be a Christian, but timidity prevented her from making her desires known; and I, who ought to have spoken personally to her, had not done so.

A father writes: "It gives me great joy to tell you that both our two dear boys were converted on Sunday week, the one at Worthing and the other at St. Albans. How gracious of our Heavenly Father to save them both in one day, although so far apart from each other. It has filled our hearts with joy and thankfulness to God for so graciously answering our many prayers." Let this encourage other parents to pray on in hope and confidence.

A correspondent in Bristol draws attention to the fact that Christian young men in search of situations are often at a disadvantage, through their conscientious scruples not to accept employment where Christ and his cause are ignored or evil spoken of. He suggests that Christian employers in search of assistants should give more frequent preference to those who are actuated by faith in Christ, and a desire to serve Him in business as well as private life.

There is, however, another side to this question. Other things being equal, the Christian young man is the better servant, and the world knows it; but Christian employers must expect a due proportion of unconverted young men, whose salvation should be earnestly sought. Establishments where this is the case are one of the glories of our country.

It is gratifying to find that the North of England Board of Arbitration, acting for masters and men in the iron trade, have ordered the discontinuance of Sunday fettling up, so that the week's work is reduced to six days, one of fettling-up and five of puddling. Hitherto it has been the custom to put up the machinery on the Lord's Day, so as to secure six days' puddling work. This is a step in the right direction, for which many will be thankful. It is also an example others might follow with advantage. Those who know the iron districts will best appreciate its importance.

It is said that three of Arabi Bey's children aged respectively eight, ten, and twelve years, are in the United Presbyterian Mission School at Cairo. It is an interesting fact that Arabi himself, before leaving Cairo, procured a set of books from the Mission store. His children are faithfully instructed in the Scriptures. It is also said that the asperities of the Moslem population are greatly softening in regard to Mission work, and that Moslem children, in increasing numbers, are resorting to Mission schools.

Among the recent methods of philanthropic action adopted by our American friends, that employed by the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, appears to be very commendable and successful; 180 "Bands of Mercy" have been formed in and out of the State, with a total membership of about 20,000. Each member is required to sign the following:—

PLEDGE.

I will try to be kind to all harmless living creatures, and try to protect them from cruel usage.

These societies are connected with Sunday and day schools of all kinds and denominations, and appear to be increasing rapidly. The monthly number of the society's magazine heads an article on the subject, "Glory to God." It is a cause for thankfulness that such principles should extend their influence.

The "Band of Mercy" owes its conception and origination to the late Mrs. Smithies, the mother of the estimable Editor of The British Workman.

The evil habit of smoking is greatly on the increase among juveniles, and proves a great nuisance in many ways, beside being so injurious physically and morally to those who practice it. Cannot tutors in our day schools and Sunday-school teachers do more to prevent it, by pointing out to the boys of their classes its evil effects, and warning them of it as being a bad habit in every way? The Senate of New Jersey has recently imposed a fine of twenty dollars on any person convicted of selling tobacco to minors; this because of the prevalence of smoking among small boys.

The British Syrian Schools, having their centre at Beyrout, continue to prosper. There are now 33 schools, with 3300 pupils, besides scripture-readers, Bible-women, schools for the blind, and a large training institution for teachers. The following extract from recent intelligence is cheering in its promise of future results:—

Our great hopes are for the Mahomedans, for whom we have special schools and Bible classes, conducted by our Bible-women and Scripture-readers. I myself have a large Bible-class every Sunday for Moslems, Druzes, and Oriental Christians, Nubians and children, numbering about two hundred. The Mahomedans are very friendly with us, and often large parties of ladies come, utter strangers, saying, "We hear you love the Mahomedans." We have free access to the houses of the highest Pashas, where the Bible is eagerly and reverently listened to. At a recent visit to the wife of a Pasha, we found one of our Moslem pupils sitting at her feet and singing in Arabic, "I lay my sins on Jesus," and similar evangelical hymns. Indeed, we find hymns such as this one among the most powerful pleaders for the Mission.

A great and eminently important work is that of Women's Medical Missions. The physical suffering of women in heathen lands is indeed saddening to contemplate, and efforts to meet the case with Christian compassion, and by means of agencies specially adapted to that end, should surely command the sympathy of Christian men and women everywhere. Special and united prayer and thanksgiving are asked on behalf of ladies who are studying to become missionary physicians to the women of India and other lands.

The Irish Evangelist for April says in a leader:—

The world wants women—in some places vastly more than men. It would not be wise, nor would it be polite, to say we have too many of our fair friends in these kingdoms. Women of the right sort are greatly needed everywhere, and even our own land can ill afford to lose them. But such women as "laboured with Paul in the gospel" are specially needed where the gospel preached by Paul is never heard by millions of their sex.

This receives ample confirmation from the proceedings of the annual meeting of the Indian Female Normal School and Instruction Society, at St. George's Hall, noticed elsewhere, as also from many other sources. Lord Shaftesbury's words at the meeting referred to are worthy of every attention:—

The Indian people could not be reached by European agents, and therefore it must be done by native agents, and it was very right that women should be the movers of men in their own country. The influence that the women of India, particularly in South India, had, was far greater than many were aware. Within her own house she was positively absolute, therefore if they wished to win India to Christianity they must begin by making the women Christians. The work that women were doing in England was done more efficiently than the men could do it, and he hoped they would extend their work and visit the courts and alleys and take the roughs by the hand. He believed if they did that the roughs would follow them like spaniels, and therefore he could not see why women should not do a great deal of useful work in India.

The Bishop of Exeter has lately been giving a Visitation charge to the clergy of his diocese. His words concerning the value and importance of quiet, unostentatious work, deserve special notice and consideration. He said:—

If there is to be any good come out of work in church, or work in meetings to arouse, if there is to be any permanent good come out of it, it must be because corresponding to it there is quiet, earnest, determined resolution to follow it by a work that is mostly done from individual to individual, in the house, in the cottage, in the quiet class, in services where, perhaps, there is nothing to draw great crowds, in that activity which does not work in any sense whatever for the present moment, but for eternity; and, therefore, all the more quietly, because it is not the hurried, nor the quick, nor the sudden, nor the startling, that has most surely in it the eternal mark of a Divine work, but that rather which shows but very little, which attracts little attention, but which never rests, never flags, carried on by the conviction of a quiet faith.

His counsel to others whose constitution is in harmony with the more startling and vehement forms of activity, and who are the subjects of strong and restless impulses, is equally worthy of attention:—

To all such it seems to me the only thing to be said is—Beware, above all things, that you lose not your own self-control. Remember that, even if this be a heavenly impulse in your souls, yet "the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." You cannot throw off the responsibility for what you say or for what you do upon the impulse which moves you, nor upon the object which draws you. Your vehemence may be just, but not simply because you are impelled to vehemence. You may be taking part in a bright and excellent work; but it is not only the work that will be tried, but you, and the doing of that work. And if you have swerved from Christian charity or from Christian truth you will not be excused by reason of the excellence of the results, or of the intensity of your own convictions.

It is often said that Jesus on the Cross was forsaken of the Father. But we should do well to adhere to Scripture statement, the accuracy of which is never more manifest than in the names it uses, under different circumstances, of the persons and offices of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. It is not true that the Son was forsaken of the Father when He died upon the Cross. The cry of the Lord Jesus was, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" If we substitute the words "My Father" for "My God," we are conscious of a revulsion of feeling which bears witness to the untruth of the exchange. God, as the Judge of all the earth, forsook the Lamb of God when He was bearing away the sin of the world; but the Father was never nearer to the Son of his love than when He made Him who knew no sin to be sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him. It is well also to remember that when the body of the sin-offering was being consumed with devouring fire, without the camp, the inward parts were going up as a sweet savour to heaven, from the altar of burnt-offering. God so loved the world that Jesus was never a sweeter savour to Him than when He was undergoing the malefactor's punishment due to sin, in order that God might be just, and the Justifier of him who believeth in Jesus.

SEAMEN'S CHRISTIAN FRIEND SOCIETY.—A large and interesting meeting of the friends and workers of this Mission was held on Monday, April 16, at the Seamen's Chapel, London Docks, under the presidency of Colonel Handyside. Cheering accounts of the progress of the work were given by a number of the workers. Mr. William Green (of the Coal Exchange) gave an earnest and practical address.

INDIAN FEMALE NORMAL SCHOOL AND INSTRUCTION SOCIETY.

THE Annual Meeting of this Society was held on Monday week in St. George's Hall, Langham-place, the Earl of Shaftesbury presiding.

The Secretary (Mr. Paton) read an abstract of the Report for the past year, in which the Committee stated that they had been privileged to send out eight missionaries during the year, and there were five ladies now accepted, either under training or waiting to go to India in the autumn, besides others who were offering themselves. As nurses many offered, but they required in them not only the true missionary spirit, but also sufficient education to enable them to profit by the medical training that they must pass through ere they were fit for the work in India. The Committee felt a responsibility laid upon them to raise the income as soon as possible to £20,000. Places yet untouched had sent appeals for lady missionaries, to which till funds increase they could not respond, and from all their chief stations the call was increasing for more workers. It was added that twenty-eight new associations had been formed during the year, raising the total to over 120.

Rev. F. E. Wigram, General Field, Rev. H. Sinclair Paterson, M.D., Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, and the Rev. J. Bennett having given addresses warmly advocating the work of the Society,

Rev. W. Stevenson (missionary of the Free Church of Scotland in South India) said that, having laboured as a missionary in India for several years, he felt nothing was more urgently needed at the present time than the extension of female Christian agency in India. The influence exercised by women in India upon the home and family was even greater than the influence exercised by women in this country. The whole edifice of Hindooism was founded upon the family. The religion was family religion, the customs were family customs, the property was family property; the whole of life in India centred in and was bound up with the family; and hence, if they would undermine Hindooism, and remove the great hindrance to the entrance of Christianity, they must find their way into the citadel—the family—and the keys of that citadel were in the hands of the women of India. The field was opening and widening on every side, but he wished it to be understood that this was a crisis as regarded female education. The young men who had been educated in our schools had begun to feel that it was time for young women to be educated, and men generally did not now regard it as an evil thing that females should be educated.

The Earl of Shaftesbury said:—There can be no finer idea than that of the Christian women of England coming forward to rescue from their degradation the whole mass of the women of India. One thing that is wanted is boldness. I recollect people saying that it would not do to interfere with Suttee, but we did interfere, and it fell. The principles of Christianity are aggressive, and the ladies of England must in this matter imitate the example of the ladies of America in what was called the "whiskey war," one of the most remarkable movements that ever occurred. I will conclude by applying to the Zenana work carried on by women in India some lines which were written by a friend of mine:—

Not faithless she where all around were tried,
Not she with craven lips her Lord denied,
But when all others fled alone was brave,
Last at his cross and earliest at his grave.

DESTITUTE CHILDREN IN LIVERPOOL.—At a meeting called by the Mayor of Liverpool last week, and addressed by Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., it was decided to form a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. At the last meeting of the West Derby Board of Guardians, it was resolved to emigrate to Canada, at the end of May, under the care of Mrs. Birt, of the Byrom-street Home, twenty pauper Protestant children, subject to the consent of the Local Government Board.

BLACKHEATH CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

On Tuesday, April 10, at Crayford Village Hall, Mr. S. A. Blackwood expressed regret that it had been necessary to abandon the Crayford Conference for the present year; its place, however, would be supplied by similar gatherings at Blackheath. These were held on Wednesday and Thursday, last week.

The first public meeting, on Wednesday forenoon, was fairly well attended, and was presided over by Mr. H. F. Bowker; the subject being

THE CHRISTIAN: WHO, AND WHAT IS HE?

Following the sequence indicated by the order on the reference paper, Mr. Bowker remarked that the Christian was first a new creation, standing before the world and the Church, with new objects, new thoughts and new hopes. Then he was "accepted in the Beloved." So close is the union that it renders Christ and the Christian inseparable. The next step is being washed, sanctified, and purified. This is succeeded by the desire to know more of the Master. The craving of every true Christian is to be like Christ. The next thought is: we are complete in Him—filled full of Him. Then the climax is the love of the Christian being made perfect, that he may have boldness in the day of judgment.

Rev. Dr. H. Sinclair Paterson and Lord Radstock delivered addresses, to which allusion was made by the Rev. C. Wilson (Blackheath), who took charge of the afternoon meeting. He said that in these days it is necessary to distinguish between the nominal and the true Christian—the Christianity which is the product of education, and that which results from the Holy Ghost working in the human soul. Dr. Paterson had drawn a clear distinction between the state and the character of the Christian. His state was sure and abiding. There was no need to be regenerated again, because "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit." We are not born full-grown. There is a law of development in the Christian life. We are learning under the teaching of the Holy Spirit, and grow up into the stature of men in Christ Jesus. The one ideal of perfection for the Christian is the character of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lord Radstock, said Mr. Wilson, spoke on the human side, as Dr. Paterson had on the Divine side; he warned us against the pursuit of comfort, and states of feeling, and finding satisfaction in certain emotions which in some hearts are easily excited. Religion is not a matter of emotion, but of life. Be a Christian, and no one will have to ask whether you are one or not. With the high ideal of Christ before us we should get discouraged unless we could fall back upon the truth which was especially the subject of consideration that afternoon:

THE HOLY SPIRIT IN RELATION TO THE CHRISTIAN.

Christian character is not the outgrowth of natural causes, or a development of civilisation; it is the outcome of a divine work wrought in us and perfected by the Spirit of God. He was much afraid that if the question were put in a practical form, many would be ready to say that they knew not there was a Holy Ghost. To many the Holy Spirit was little more than a name or an influence.

Mr. G. C. Needham delivered a forcible address on the personal character of the Holy Spirit, and his co-equality with the Father and the Son. The Holy Spirit sustained certain relations to the Lord Jesus Himself, and the very same kind of relations he sustained to Christ He sustains to those who are Christians. Two principal thoughts formed the conclusion of the address, i.e., that the Spirit of God is given to make us holy, and that the Christian is the tabernacle of the living God, by the indwelling of the Spirit, which latter reflection ought to make us walk softly and carefully, lest by our walk and conversation we grieve the holy Guest within.

The Chairman made a practical application by entreating those who had not surrendered themselves to Christ not to resist the Holy Ghost, and those whose lives lacked religious freedom and joy not to grieve the Holy Ghost.

THE CHRISTIAN'S CALLING.

This formed the subject for the evening contemplation, when Mr. H. F. Bowker again took the chair, and made some preliminary remarks, dwelling chiefly upon that instinct of Divine life in such as are born again and entitled to take the name of Christ.

Rev. J. Bennett (Chelsea) said it would require an angel's tongue to do justice to the glorious subject under consideration; he only expected to raise the porch to the building which would be erected by the speaker who was to follow him. He had only last week had a proof of the reality of the grace from which the Christian's calling springs. It seemed laid upon him to mention it, as bringing out the graciousness of the Lord Jesus, and the wonderful way in which He works by the instrumentality of the Sabbath-school. A child of poor parents in his district, about five years of age, was dying; and the mother was praying that she might have some token of his safety before being taken. But he seemed unconscious. At last he spoke, and said, "Mother, there is so-and-so," naming a sister who had died three years ago, when he was so much of a babe as to be unable to recognise her in the flesh; and then relapsed into unconsciousness. Again he spoke, and said, "Mother, 'Suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.'" This he had learned from his Sunday-school teacher but a short time before, and was sustained by it. After another pause the child spoke again, and said, in a hushed voice, "Mother, look! That is Jesus;" and passed away. The speaker proceeded to dwell upon the fact that the disciples were first called Christians Acts xi. 26, and the calling was by Divine command and revelation as clearly indicated by the words employed in the original. We are called Christians because we are Christ's, and as He who hath called us is holy, we are expected, nay, commanded to be holy, in all manner of conversation.

Rev. H. E. Brooke, Dovercourt, cited the calling of Lazarus from the tomb as symbolical of the calling of the dead sinner to life. He drew the distinction between the general call spoken of in Matthew xxii. and the effectual call in Luke xiv., and enlarged upon the various aspects of calling mentioned throughout the New Testament.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ARMOUR, CONFLICT, AND VICTORY, was the theme for Thursday's first public meeting. Mr. H. F. Bowker again acted as chairman. He read from 1 Cor. ix., and said that there conflict and victory were both spoken of; but the preliminary was the statement of a certain condition of mind which animated the Apostle, and led him in all his service to be considerate and careful in endeavouring to win others, and that he might not put a stumbling-block in their way. This gives a true understanding of what conflict means and lies at the root of it. He became "all things to all men," not by compromise, not by want of remembrance of what God required of him as an obedient child, but by the grace of his manner, by the tenderness of his consideration. He did what the great Master did—he descended to the platform of everyone with whom he might come in contact, and put his loving arm around them and raised them up. The abnegation of self and the understanding of our true position are primary elements in the conflict which ultimately results in victory.

Revs. Evan H. Hopkins and W. H. Webb-Peploe gave excellent addresses on the Armour, the Conflict, and the Victory of the Christian. In the afternoon the Bible reading was presided over by the Rev. C. Wilson, and the Rev. W. Haslam was the speaker. The subject was "The Faith in Christ."

The evening gathering, which, in spite of unfavourable weather, was by far the most numerously attended, was under the direction of Mr. Blackwood, the appointed speakers being Revs. W. Haslam and J. Denham Smith. The topic was

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE.

The Chairman said that the Second Advent of our Lord was the most stupendous event to the Church and to the individual which could be conceived; it had been lost sight of, it was true, for centuries, but now, thank God, it was revived. Many are standing on the watch-tower, who can see the glimmerings of the "Morning Star," if not, perhaps, the first rays of "The Sun of Righteousness." To the expression of the hope that the Holy Ghost might lift all present into the attitude of expectation—that sphere of spiritual sympathy with the Master and the Bridegroom—and that their hearts might be indeed waiting for the Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, there was a hearty response of "Amens." The disciples were taught to ask that his kingdom might come, and Christians were wrong if they did not give the Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ pre-eminence in their prayers and anticipations. Adverting to Samuel xix. 11, 14, he said that as King David would not come back and cross the Jordan until a united message, as that of one man, was sent to him, surely it was the duty of the Christian Church with one accord, in the language of Revelation, to pray with our brethren at the Antipodes, "Even so come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." May it not be that that hour shall not strike for his Return until the heart of his Church, the Bride, goes out towards Him in earnest, passionate desire for that Return—until, casting aside every other consideration, we cry as one man, "Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly?"

THE REVIVAL IN LEEDS.

The meeting in the Coliseum last night of those who had received blessing through the Mission services was very impressive. About 2000 of the invited class were present. The Chairman, Mr. Beckworth, conducted the proceedings with great ability, and under an evident impression of the solemnity of the occasion. In addition to prayers and hymns there were short addresses from clergymen and laymen, on the duty of "Confession of Christ;" on "Nonconformity to the World;" on the importance of the reading of Holy Scripture as "a lamp to our feet," &c.; and on the duty of private dealing with individuals respecting the great work of salvation. The message of Mr. Moody by telegraph was received with much interest.

In addition to the known cases of conversion, or of spiritual blessing received during this Mission, there are no doubt many unknown. A lady at a distance writes to a friend: "I attended only one of the afternoon services, but that was a day ever to be remembered by me, for I then found the rest and peace I had been seeking for some months previously." Leeds, April 20.

A writer in The Leeds Mercury of April 21, says: "There is no doubt that the visit of the American evangelists has been an event of no small importance in the religious history of Leeds. I am told, indeed, that its results are already apparent in the increased congregations gathered in many of our churches and chapels. Along with the 'Evangelistic Mission,' great efforts have been made by the 'Gospel Temperance Society,' and very large numbers of persons have been induced to sign the pledge. Both these movements will have the good wishes of most persons. In connection with the question of temperance reform, I may mention a singular and interesting fact. The committee of the Leeds Liberal Club have recently found themselves under the necessity of making a small addition to the tariff for meals—not because the attendance of members has fallen off, or because there are any signs of a diminution of the general prosperity of the club, but because of the extraordinary decrease in the amount of the receipts for intoxicating liquors."

MR. SPURGEON'S PASTORS' COLLEGE.

THE nineteenth annual conference of the Pastors' College Association was held during the past week. The usual preliminary gathering took place this year at Lower Norwood, on Monday evening, where, in the chapel of Pastor Hobbs, a tea and public meeting was held, at which Mr. Spurgeon (who was accompanied by Mrs. Spurgeon) presided. The address of the President pointed to the necessity of preaching the truths of the simple Gospel, though deemed by some of modern times as platitudes, childish simplicities, and exploded delusions. These were the only truths that would convert the sinner and establish the saint in the faith of God. Earnest and impressive addresses were also delivered by Pastors Whale of Middlesborough, Rice, of Earls Colne, Hackney, of Oxford, and the pastor, W. Hobbs.

The first session of the conference proper was held on Tuesday morning, when a large concourse of ministers assembled at the College. Great was the disappointment produced in the meeting when it was announced that a communication had been received from the beloved president of the College stating "that a furious attack of gout had come upon him during the night, which compelled him to remain in bed." Throughout the conference hopes were entertained that he might recover sufficiently to come, but though successive days brought the welcome news of a measure of convalescence, the recovery did not progress with sufficient rapidity to allow of a visit; and for the first time in the history of the Institution the week's conference passed away without the presence of its founder. None, however, would be more rejoiced than himself to learn that God abundantly compensated for his enforced absence, by evoking an unusually fervent spirit of intercession on the part of ministers assembled, also by granting manifestations of his presence and power in such a degree as to produce a general and unanimous conviction that the success of this annual gathering was equal to any that had ever been held.

The customary hour of prayer having ended, the Vice-President, Pastor J. A. Spurgeon, in the absence of his brother, presided, and, upon the words of Jesus, "Thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness," based a brief but instructive discourse, gathering from it a great lesson of united action in Christian service, as well as the paramount necessity of Christian faithfulness in the discharge of all God's righteous claims, and unquestioning obedience to all his commands. Professor Gracey followed with a paper on "Faith," directing special attention to the relation subsisting between the faith by which men are saved, and that faith by which they follow Christ. After this the general business of the session was transacted, and the morning sitting concluded.

In the evening, the usual soiree at the Stockwell Orphanage furnished a delightful opportunity for social enjoyment and fraternal greeting. The programme of the entertainment included selections of music, instrumental and vocal, by the Orphanage choir, and an exhibition of views of America by Pastor Chas. Spurgeon. Among the things likely to be remembered was an enthusiastic speech by Pastor A. G. Brown, who maintained that the inordinate lust after visible success was one of the most insidious dangers to which Christian ministers were exposed; that before committing ourselves to the act of endeavouring to "keep abreast of the times," we must know in what direction the times are going; and that in order to maintain constant freshness in our work there must be close fellowship with God, unstaggering faith in his word, and absolute fidelity to his truth. "Don't trouble about me, but keep yonder flag floating," said the dying soldier to his comrade, who brought him drink to assuage his thirst. Even so, might all his comrades keep the Gospel flag unfurled and uplifted, whatever cost it might entail.

Wednesday morning found the conference again assembled to listen to an address by Dr. Charles Stanford. Basing his remarks on the Saviour's promise to his disciples, "I will give you a mouth and wisdom," the genial doctor eloquently discoursed upon the two essential qualifications for a successful ministry. The tea and supper to subscribers was given in the evening. Mr. Houghton, of Liverpool, presided at the meeting, and pleaded for the necessity of colleges such as was there represented, and warmly commended it to the support of the friends assembled, believing that the men who went from it were preachers of God's truth. He was glad to say that a good work was going on at Liverpool through the meetings of Mr. Moody.

The extent to which the Institution has grown, and the practical work it is doing, may be seen by the annual report. During the twenty-seven years of its existence more than 650 men have been received into the College, of which number forty-four have fallen asleep. There are 486 regularly engaged in the work of the Lord as pastors, missionaries, and evangelists. During the past year thirty-four students have left the College to take charge of various churches; two have gone forth as missionaries, one as an evangelist, and one has become the tutor of Hulme Cliff College, Curbar. It will also interest friends of Missions to know that a considerable number of the students have gone forth as missionaries, so that now in almost every part of the Mission field they are to be met, including Africa, China, Japan, India, Brazil, Hayti, Naples, and Spain. Students from the College are also occupying positions as pastors of churches in Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand, Cape Colony, St. Helena, Canada, Nova Scotia, Jamaica, and the United States of America. Among the missionaries are three "medical." Several students are hoping in due time to be qualified to go forth in the same capacity. The expenses of the Institution for the past year amounted to more than £7000; of which about £2000 was raised by the weekly offering at the Tabernacle, about £4000 by donations, and £1000 by legacies.

During the evening the Chairman called on three of the students respectively from India, China, and Africa. Mr. Norris gave an account of his work at Calcutta, and spoke of the work in its evangelistic bearing. He had circulated hundreds of Mr. Spurgeon's sermons among the rising young men of Bengal. He made an eloquent appeal for men and money for the evangelisation of the 250 millions of India, of whom only about half a million are Protestants. Mr. Turner appealed with equal fervour on behalf of the Chinese, among whom he had laboured for seven years, almost invariably conversing in the Chinese tongue, so as to have altogether lost fluency in English speaking. He urged the Churches to seize the present opportunity for evangelising the heathen, lest their memories be haunted with the consciousness of neglected opportunities. The recent famine opened the way for missionary work, and at the risk of incurring disease and death the devoted workers went among the stricken ones and ministered to their temporal and spiritual needs. He had himself been down to death's door; but though alone in a foreign land found God's presence and support all-sufficient. Mr. Billington told of the indebtedness of missionaries to the researches of Livingstone and Stanley for increased knowledge of Africa. Among the obstacles encountered by Christian workers were those of climate, difficulties of transport, and superstitious notions. Two Congo boys, during a visit to this country, had been saved, and were now telling others of the Saviour in their own land.

Three of the pastors were then requested to report concerning God's work in their several spheres of labour. Pastor Johnson told of his work among the potteries, and claimed for it a place in the forefront of those demanding sympathy and support. Pastor Blakaby, of Stow-on-the-Wold, described a conflict through which he passed during a season of dearth, and how he was moved to call for more prayer among the people of his charge, as the result of which not less than twenty persons were converted to God. Pastor Glover, of Coome Martin, was conducting three services every Sunday, and a meeting of some kind each evening in the week. As the result of a recent revival of God's work, no less than 180 conversions had taken place.

The Chairman having expressed himself as much refreshed by what he had listened to, the meeting closed, and the company repaired to the Lecture Hall, where a sumptuous supper was provided; before the close it was announced that the noble sum of £2087 had been contributed at the tables, of which the Chairman's donation was £100.

On the following evening a large meeting was held in the Tabernacle, known as the College public meeting. Much enthusiastic feeling prevailed. The utmost degree of warmth of loving feeling was manifested by the meeting toward the assembled ministers, whom they regard in a special sense as being their own. Addresses were delivered by Pastors Samuel, of Birmingham; Mayers, of Bristol; Tarn, of Cambridge; Longhurst, of Cheltenham; and Professor Fergusson. It transpired during the evening that among those who sent messages of inquiry after Mr. Spurgeon that day was the Prime Minister.

Many excellent papers were read during the week, including one by Pastor Hillman, on "Persistency in our work;" by Pastor Styles, on "Conversion and its Counterfeit;" by Pastor Anderson, of Reading, on "The Necessity of the Holy Spirit in the Christian Ministry." The reading of this last paper was accompanied with no small measure of power; at the close of which was sung, "Lord God the Holy Ghost."

On Friday, the last day of the feast, a holy solemnity pervaded the assembly, which had then met for the final gathering ere parting for another year. Mutual and fervent prayers were offered; fitting and suggestive words of counsel were given by the Vice-President; the Lord's Supper was administered, and with mingled feelings the company once more sang together with clasped hands the usual parting hymn; while some were wondering who among that gathering were meeting for the last time on earth, since each returning conference misses some of the number.

EVANGELICAL MILITARY CHURCH IN ROME.

THE tenth anniversary of this Church was celebrated on March 14. The place of meeting was the Methodist Church in Via della Scrofa, and the smaller hall, in which the daily meetings for the soldiers are usually held, was decorated and used as an ante-room. The soldiers present amounted to more than 300, and the visitors to about sixty; among the latter were several ministers of other churches, and missionaries belonging to different denominations. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. Gordon Gray, of the Presbyterian Church, Rome.

Signor Capellini, the minister of the church, briefly gave an account of his own conversion, and sketched the history of the beginning, development, and progress of the work, with the difficulties and the successes which have marked its course, expressing the gladness of his heart as he now beheld its prosperity. In the course of the service the President spoke of the earnest desire of Signor Capellini to build a suitable place of worship for the evangelical soldiers, and suggested that a collection should be made toward this end. The sum of Lire 364.65 was the result.

Rev. Henry Pigott also expressed the great satisfaction which filled his heart in looking upon the fruits which had grown from Signor Capellini's ten years' work.

At the close of a Communion service on a subsequent day, an elegant Bible, the gift of Mrs. Robertson's Society for the Free Distribution of the Scriptures, was presented to each of the new communicants, and Signor Capellini requested that all would remember in their prayers these kind friends who interested themselves so much on their behalf.

WELCOME TO MR. HUDSON TAYLOR.

THE intimation that this would be the chief business at the usual Home of Industry meeting for workers last week brought together a large party of friends. Many of those present must have shared our feelings of disappointment that instead of having the lion's share of the time, Mr. Taylor had to crowd his remarks into the last half-hour or so of the meeting. The preceding addresses were of deep interest, and under other circumstances would have been most timely; but we had not heard Mr. Taylor's voice in public for four long years, and so we listened with qualified patience while our good brother, Mr. Broomhall, read lengthy extracts from missionary letters, and while Mr. Nicoll, out of a full heart, vehemently charged his hearers to lay themselves on the altar as evangelists to China. In a few earnest sentences Mr. Wood told how he had been led to resign a good business position and give his life to Gospel work in China; he asked to be remembered in the prayers of the Christians who stay at home.

Mr. Hudson Taylor said there was no meeting in all London in which the China Inland Missionaries liked better to take part than this meeting of Miss Macpherson's. She was one of the last who wished him God-speed when he went away four years ago, and one of the first to greet him on his return. Out in China he and his fellow-workers were often at these gatherings in spirit. After some very choice reflections and practical exhortations based on the closing verses of Psalm xxviii., Mr. Taylor said he trusted God would give to China some from among those present who would go to that land and live out the Gospel of Christ among the people. Turning to a large map on the wall behind him, he pointed out the vast extent of the Chinese Empire, as compared with Great Britain. As an indication of the size of the country, he described how it took thirty days of hard boating on the Yangtsekiang to go from Nankin to Ganking, which are only a few inches apart on the map. To mark the progress that God had granted to their labours in recent years, he said that when he went out four years since there was not a single native Christian to their knowledge in the western half of China; now they had a record of at least 150. Five years ago there was not a European lady missionary to the west of the central line; now they had sixteen such labourers. Mr. Cameron and others had traversed the length and breadth of the empire—Mr. Cameron had visited every province in the land with one exception, taking the name and Gospel of Jesus Christ with them. It was difficult to reckon up or tell the effects that had been produced. Some at least of the seed sown had come to light again. To illustrate this, Mr. Taylor told how he knew of four distinct cases of conversion through the reading of each of the four Gospels; from these conversions several native churches had been founded in distant places where no European missionary had ever been. Then he proceeded to relate something of God's wonderful goodness in connection with the history of the Inland Mission, and gave a few intensely interesting early reminiscences of a personal character. We are sorry that the unusual pressure on our space will not allow us to reproduce them here in any adequate fashion; we can only hope to do so in a subsequent issue, for the encouragement of those who would follow the leadings of God towards any specific field of service.

At the beginning of the meeting Miss Macpherson delighted the friends with her usual monologue about the "little emigrants," and the Home of Industry work generally. Miss Clara Lowe asked prayer on behalf of the Brahmin young lady who embraced Christianity at Cuddalore some months ago, but had since been forcibly removed by her heathen relations and kept in close confinement. It is feared that her life is in serious peril.

THE MORAL STATE OF GERMANY.

THE following telegraphic despatch from the Berlin correspondent of The Times, dated April 18, appeared in that paper on the succeeding day:—

This day was the annual Busstag, or day of national fasting, prayer, and penitence in Prussia; but there were few signs of its observance in the way orginally appointed. The churches seemed to be the very last place of public resort. Taking advantage of the splendid weather—this being the first real spring day we have had—the whole city seemed to have turned out to disport itself in the sun; and all the beer-gardens drove a roaring trade. Moralising on this day, which was intended to give the Prussian people an annual opportunity for religious self-examination, the Kreuz Zeitung remarks:—

"If we look at the moral condition of our country, must we not be horrified in our inmost soul? What frightful barbarisation! What an increase of coarseness and bestiality! Truly not a few are taking their places at the head of their brothers, the animals. Every newspaper tells us of murder, of suicide, of terrible derangement in houses and families, of unheard-of atrocities, of a moral degeneracy which must fill us with horror. . . . And turning to our social state we see ourselves going downwards on the path of destruction. Our social institutions are in course of dissolution. Nihilism, it is true, may not be impudent and shameless, as in Russia and France; but we are on the road to a similar state of things. Our Social Democracy is not very far removed from Nihilism. . . And how is it with our political life? How much has the old feeling of loyalty disappeared! Revolutionary thoughts fill the minds of many. How few still look upon authority as by God appointed. What a sad impression is made in our days by the tactics of our political parties! . . . And then as to our Church affairs. How great is the falling away from the living God and estrangement from his Church! How many men literally live without prayer, without God's Word and Sacrament, and think they have made great progress in being able to live outside the shadow of his house. Materialism and Paganism dominate only too many, and that, too, among the educated; but still more among the half-educated classes."

There is certainly much truth in the above lamentation, and coming as it does from a native prophet, it will carry more force than if uttered by a foreign observer. The North German Gazette is also moved by this religious occasion to comment in a horrified tone on "the demoniac spirit of destruction which now possesses large classes of the population of all countries."

THE RECENT FISHERY DISASTER.—Sir,—It is to be sincerely hoped that the appeal made by the Lord Mayor of London will be generously responded to, and at the same time that the nation will set itself seriously to work to provide more places of safety for fishermen and others in time of storm and danger, so that such losses may not be so deplorable in future.—F. Johnson, Hon. Sec., National Refuge Harbours Society, St. Leonards-on-Sea.

BORDER CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.—A Christian conference for the border counties was held under the auspices of the Hawick Home Mission in the Exchange Hall on Saturday week. The chair was occupied by Mr. R. Hill, Melrose. Dr. Herdman gave an earnest and stirring address in introducing the subject of "Christ Jesus made unto us righteousness and sanctification." Rev. Mr. Kelman spoke on the relation between righteousness and sanctification. The two questions were afterwards discussed by Revs. Messrs. Hislop, Scott, Fordyce, and Mr. McCance. Reports regarding Christian work were given in by deputations from Galashiels, Jedburgh, Denholm, Cavers and Ancrum. An address was afterwards given on the subject, "Christians; lights of the world and witnesses for Jesus," by the Rev. Mr. Scott. On Sabbath evening Mr. Richard Hill, evangelist, gave an address in the Exchange Hall, when there was a large attendance. He spoke powerfully, and was listened to with deep interest throughout.

YOUNG WOMEN AT EXETER HALL.

THE annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held on Friday evening last, when the Earl of Shaftesbury occupied the chair. Long before the time for commencing the proceedings, the young women and their friends, with many others interested in so noble a cause, flocked into the hall; the choir sang several anthems ere the meeting commenced.

Rev. J. R. Wood opened with prayer, and then Mr. W. T. Paton read the report, which showed that the London society had now twenty-four institutions affiliated, besides forty outlying branches in London, with a membership of 5660, an increase of 1600 over the previous year. There were now twenty counties under the special charge of the association. With reference to the funds, Mr. Paton said that nearly two months ago Mr. Barlow Kennett offered £500 to enable the committee to extend the work of the association, on condition that three similar sums were collected within two months. One lady had given another £500, whilst the remaining £1000 had been contributed by other persons. But they still needed £2000 to open a branch in the City, as well as £3000 for a West-end restaurant and home in Oxford-street. Towards these schemes the committee had the promise of £500 from Mr. Samuel Morley, and £100 from another for the West-end establishment. The receipts, including balances from last year of £387, were £3100 14s. 7d., the expenditure leaving a balance in hand of about £174.

At this stage Lord Kinnaird presented the noble Chairman with an inkstand and silver pencil, on behalf of the young women of the parent and branch societies, and also read a suitable address of congratulation and thanks to the noble earl. His lordship, in reply, said he was very much surprised at receiving such a token of respect from the young women, and thanked them from the bottom of his heart for the gift. His lordship proceeded to compare the present with the past, as regards the many efforts and institutions for young women and young men, observing that the young women of the present day not only needed, but could find protection in such institutions as these. He was glad to be able to witness such a sight, and congratulated the workers on the attainment of such an enterprise. "God bless and long live the Y.W.C.A.," said the noble Earl, as he sought to impress upon the members that the great principle which must guide them was the extension of Christ's kingdom.

Dr. Oswald Dykes spoke impressively on the influence of young women, remarking that if the temptations for young men were great, those in the way of young women were still greater. The Doctor urged the necessity of union with Christ for strength to overcome, and also the need of pressing on towards the great end of life, cultivating the virtues obtained by sitting at the feet of Jesus.

Rev. J. R. Wood spoke of the need of seizing every opportunity as it came to hand. Every effort in Christian work must either grow or decay; there was no such thing as standing still.

Canon Wilberforce being interdicted by the doctor from attending the meeting, the Rev. Neville Sherbrooke was called upon. He briefly exhorted his hearers to a practical knowledge of the Saviour.

The good that is being done by this institution in a quiet way among the young women of our great city cannot be measured, and we earnestly trust that many will come forward to their help in these fresh and much-needed efforts they are now making.

OUR LORD'S APPEARING.—Christian friends residing in Ireland, who are animated by the hope of our Lord's Return, may be glad to know of "The Blessed Hope Union," founded two years ago by Rev. W. J. Christie, The Rectory, Gorton, County Tyrone, who will furnish full particulars.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

HULL.

THE three weeks' Mission of Messrs. Fullerton and Smith in this town has been an increasing success. Thousands have attended the services held in the Public Rooms, and souls are being saved. The noonday prayer-meetings are excellent in their attendance and spirit, and the meetings for "men only" are notably successful. The executive have succeeded in urging the Evangelists to prolong their visit, and have hired Hengler's Circus for that purpose.

MR. OPIE RODWAY AT TREDEGAR.

Evangelistic services were conducted at the Castle-street Congregational Chapel, during the first week of the present month, by Mr. Opie Rodway, of Stroud. Some twenty years ago Mr. Rodway visited Tredegar. As the outcome of these services, over sixty converts were added to the Episcopal Church, and about an equal number were added to the Congregational Church. On the present occasion services were conducted for the Congregationalists; pastor, Rev. B. Shankland. The attendance throughout was good, and the results, in the shape of new converts, have been very encouraging.

DR. SOMERVILLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The following is an extract from a letter by Mr. John Fraser, member of Parliament for Bloemfonten, Orange Free State, to a relative in London: "We have had a five-days' visit from Dr. Sommerville here. He left yesterday (March 20) for the Diamond Fields. May the Lord bless his word and work here. I was one of the committee to aid him, and I shall always be grateful for his coming here. I hope and trust his sowing of the precious seed here will bear much fruit. He certainly has a powerful way of telling the simple truths of salvation, and is mighty in clearing away doubts and exposing the fallacies of self-righteousness."

BASUTOLAND.

Mons. D. Keck, missionary, writes: "The work at Thaba Bosigo is abundantly blessed. I am sent for from all sides to hold services. A chief, formerly hostile to the Gospel, has sent for me three times to his village. The Christians are zealous in spreading the Gospel, several Churches have been formed, and many villages are visited every Sunday, in order to preach the Gospel. I have begun an evening school for the young shepherds who are all day in the fields, and have fifty-eight names, with an average attendance of fifty. Every Sunday our large church, holding a thousand, is filled twice with an attentive congregation. All our eyes are turned now towards the Cape Parliament, who are debating whether or not they will give up the Basutos. Let us pray more than ever that our Lord would watch over this tribe, which, whatever may be said, desires but to advance and to know the truth.

ILFRACOMBE.

As a resident of several years, I have been made glad by the wonderful change wrought by God's blessing through the Salvation Army among the lowest and most degraded of the population in this place, as well as in the homes of those of a little higher standing. Many a house that was the constant scene of brawls and swearing is converted into the abode of peace and comfort.

The Army have done even more than this; their example of untiring zeal in seeking to save souls has stirred up the hearts of all the dissenting ministers to redouble their efforts to win souls for Christ. The consequence is, that new members have been added by scores to all the chapels in the town and in the neighbouring villages. The whole place has undergone such a transformation that a former resident, on visiting Ilfracombe, said he could hardly recognise it. Drunkards he had left, deaf to all his persuasions, he found earnest Christians.

Springfield, Ilfracombe, N. Devon. M. Desborough.

SPRINGFIELD, FIFE, N.B.

A series of Evangelistic meetings was held in the Christian Institute in this village from April 8 to 15, by Colonel Oldham, assisted by Mr. W. W. Gray, and Mr. A. Smith, superintendent of the Children's Church. Colonel Oldham spoke with great power on the various subjects. It was not until the third night that there appeared to be any anxiety, but the wave of blessing has spread, and a good many souls have been won for the Lord Jesus. A number of young women have professed decision for the Saviour, also some young men and children. This is the second year of these meetings, and they have proved a great blessing.

MR. AND MRS. HASLAM AT WIMBLEDON.

A very successful ten days' Mission at Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, conducted by Rev. William Haslam, was brought to a conclusion on Tuesday week. There were daily services, morning and evening, in the church, and afternoon meetings for women, conducted by Mrs. Haslam, in the rooms of the Young Women's Christian Association, and in the iron room attached to the church.

Large congregations attended all the services. On the thanksgiving day (Tuesday) there was not only a liberal response to an appeal for funds for carrying on Mission work in the country by means of the Parochial Mission Society, but many publicly testified, both men and women, to the power of the Spirit in their hearts.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

BERLIN.

IN Berlin, for 709,000 Protestant inhabitants, there are but twenty churches and twenty-seven pasteurs, or one church for 40,000 inhabitants, and one minister for 25,000. A society has been formed under the direction of M. Stöcker, for the dissemination of religious truth among the non-churchgoing population, and during the course of last year 15,000 sermons were distributed, most of them apparently being purchased at a pfennig (less than half a farthing) each. Police and postmen, tramway employés, firemen, all receive copies regularly, and in some cases they are read aloud by the men to one another when off duty.

FRANCE.

Le Chrétien Belge gives the following statistics of Mr. McAll's work in France: In Paris there are thirty-one Gospel Halls open in various parts of the city and suburbs. A similar work has been founded in twenty-eight towns of France, with forty-nine Evangelistic Halls, seating altogether 13,200 persons. The number of meetings held last year was 10,500, at which 716,000 persons were present. The expenses during 1882 amounted to £11,520.

JUBILEE OF THE RAUHE HAUS, NEAR HAMBURG.

This institution, which has brought so much blessing, spiritual and temporal, to untold thousands in the Fatherland, was begun in 1833 by Johann Heinrich Wichern, then a poor and unknown student, who received a few starving children into a thatched cottage, where he might be a father to them and train them by work and prayer for an earthly and a heavenly calling. Twenty-five years later this servant of Christ established a similar institution in Berlin, the Johannis-stift. The Hamburg institution alone has sent out 477 brethren, who are working for Christ in Germany and its colonies, as heads of orphanages and other institutions, city missionaries, teachers, preachers, &c. Thousands of children have been saved from ruin, thousands of destitute, sick, criminal, and forsaken ones succoured by these two institutions, and whatever has been done for the Saviour's glory in the work of evangelisation in Prussia and Germany is in great measure due to the efforts of this man of God. The Jubilee year is being celebrated by collections in all the Evangelical Churches on behalf of this good work. —Evangelisch-Kirchlicher Anzeiger.

GENEVA.

The Journal Religieux de la Suisse Romande contains an account of evangelistic work in Geneva, carried on by the Comité de l'Evangélisation Populaire, which held its annual meeting last month. The report states that the year has been marked by specially encouraging results. "In many cases we have been able to hold after-meetings, which have been really fruitful and blessed. More than 1000 New Testaments have been sold in the halls, most of the purchasers being men."

Hitherto the work has been done by voluntary agents, most of whom can only devote a few hours in the evening to it. Its increasing development has decided the committee to appoint, as a special agent, M. le Pasteur Young, well known in connection with Temperance and Evangelistic work in Switzerland.

RUSSIA.

A pastor named Findeisen succeeded in 1869 in founding a Y.M.C.A. at St. Petersburg, which, though never large, has been enabled to carry on a good work ever since. It has obtained the Imperial sanction, and comprises young men of all classes of society, thus bringing into prominence the Christian side of social life. Many useful servants of God have gone forth from its midst as divines, missionaries, colporteurs; and other Russian towns, encouraged by the example of St. Petersburg, have now their own associations, at Riga, Reval, Mitow, Dorpat, and Moscow. At Moscow the Association is earnest and active in its endeavours to reach and benefit the young people of the city. At Reval, to quote their own account, "we seek to develop the spiritual life of each young man, and to encourage questions and remarks. Each of our members endeavours to make himself useful, and the more advanced take a pleasure in visiting the sick and the poor."

REVIVAL IN THE DRÔME.

An account by Mons. Vernier in La Mission Intérieure says: "This has become a new country since the visit of our brother, M. Sainton. The desert rejoices and blossoms as the rose. At Barcelonne, after much prayer amongst the Christians, we decided to have a meeting for testimony in the chapel at ten o'clock, to last an hour, and be followed by the usual preaching. But up to one o'clock in the afternoon we were still listening with rapt attention to the story of God's work in the souls of many converted twenty or thirty years ago, but who had never told it publicly before. Glory be to God! many unconverted were awakened to salvation, and these testimonies formed the most eloquent sermon that had ever been preached in the chapel. Similar meetings were held every evening for fifteen days in the villages all around, while I was absent on a missionary tour in Auvergne. At each meeting souls were saved and added to the Church; several being men whose evil lives had been notorious, and whose wives and children had been driven to the verge of despair. At two Saturday night meetings twenty-six persons found peace."

EMIGRATION OF CHILDREN TO CANADA.—We understand that a sum of money has been placed at the disposal of the committee of the Manchester and Salford Boys' and Girls' Refuges and Children's Aid Society, in furtherance of their scheme of emigration. It is felt that, as this is one of the most useful branches of their work, and as a single child's emigration outfit does not exceed £10, others might assist the committee by monetary donations. A number of children will be forwarded to Canada, under proper guardianship, next month. At a recent meeting of the Council, Mr. C. W. Busk (a member resident in Canada) made a special report on this subject, observing that all the children who had been sent out up to the present time were doing remarkably well. There was, he said, always a demand for boys—and perhaps a still larger one for girls—on Canadian farms. He urged an extension of emigration work, especially for children whose surroundings are of a vicious character.—Manchester Guardian.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

GENERAL Booth, on Monday, at Exeter Hall, took the opportunity, when presiding at the annual "May Meeting" of the Salvation Army, to reply to the assertions recently made against the organisation. With regard to the debate in the Upper House of Convocation last week, he said that two bishops uttered statements, of the falsity of which he was sure, bearing upon the moral character of the Army; and their assertions were confirmed by the Bishop of Hereford. The Bishop of Oxford expressed a wish that statistics showing the proportion of cases of immorality or illegitimacy to the number of Salvation Army meetings held could be obtained. Asked for the grounds upon which he founded his accusations, the Bishop of Oxford had written two letters, the first of which stated that the names of his informants—credible persons—must be withheld. Again asked to supply the grounds upon which his statements were based, or, failing this, to withdraw them, the Bishop said that "he would make some further inquiries, and if he could find any reason to modify his opinions he would do so." Inquiries made of every corps in the dioceses of Oxford and Hereford elicited straightforward replies that even no report of cases of immorality arising through the proceedings of the Army had been heard of save at Hereford, where, however, upon inquiry at the union workhouse hospital, it was found no woman connected with the Army had ever been there because of misconduct. Similar inquiries would be made of every corps in England; and, if the bishops who had so unjustly aspersed the character of the Army would not do them justice, the General proposed to send a memorial, signed by the million and a half of the Army's adherents, to the head of the Church—the Queen—praying Her Majesty to see that justice was done them. In this he believed he would have the support of the Primate. It was wholly untrue that at York Salvationists were "crawling for Jesus for two hours in darkness." Despite the attacks against which the Army had had to contend, they were still marching on, abroad as well as at home. The total receipts at the three meetings held during the day amounted to nearly £10,000, which included several donations of £1000 each.

The Church Standard of Friday contains the following letter from Earl Cairns addressed to the Editor:—

"5, Cromwell-houses, S.W. Sir,—I have to acknowledge your letter, in which you enclose a portion of a recent publication of the 'Salvation Army,' containing some words of mine in reference to the work of the 'Army,' and you ask me whether I still continue to entertain an opinion of their work as favourable as I then expressed. The words to which you refer were spoken by me about a year since. From what I had seen and heard up to that time I fully believed—and I still believe—that the 'Salvation Army' had, although by methods which might appear to us strange and perhaps uncouth, succeeded as no organisation had ever previously done, in attracting the ignorant, reforming the depraved, and in reaching a stratum of our seething population which never had been touched before. I was only too glad to welcome such efforts, even although I might question the taste and judgment of much that was done in making them. I am as much convinced now as I was then of the entire self-sacrifice, singlemindedness, and devotion of those engaged in directing this remarkable work. But I have been much pained by many things which have come under my notice in the further development of their operations. The language of irreverence—no doubt unintentional—in which some of their placards and advertisements are expressed; the 'Orders' and Instructions to the officers of the 'Army,' the teaching of some of their publications as to the Sacraments, and even as to the Bible, their financial scheme of inviting deposits without adequate security, and of inducing contributions by the promise to the donors of a high rate of interest for their lives, all these appear to me to be matters which offend much more seriously than merely against taste or judgment, and I regret to say that I would feel myself unable at present to speak of the mode of conducting the work of the 'Salvation Army' as I did a twelvemonth ago.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Cairns."

Letter to the Editor.

THE AFFIRMATION BILL.

Sir,—Before this can appear, the second reading of the Bill to make it lawful for open and avowed Atheists to bear rule in our land will have been proposed in the House of Commons. It is a cause for great thankfulness to God that, throughout the length and breadth of the country, so much deep and earnest feeling has been aroused in opposition to a measure so shameful and degrading to a nation professing godliness.

The time has passed in which to further petition Parliament, but it is not too late to supplicate a Higher Power. Most earnestly do I entreat your Christian readers who perceive the real character of the measure proposed, and its tremendous issues, not only for the time present, but for all time to come (for the step once taken can never be recalled but must inevitably lead to others in the same direction), to give themselves to fervent prayer to God, that (supposing the division has not been taken) his restraining and constraining hand may be upon every member when he is called upon to vote. Especially ought we to pray that those who bear the Christian name may be influenced by the fear of God alone in deciding whether they say "aye" or "nay" to a proposal which, if accepted, involves the entire nation in a declaration that righteous government and an acknowledgment of the being and supremacy of Almighty God are no longer necessarily connected.

Dark as is the present outlook, "God is," and is "over all blessed for ever," and our hearts and lips may yet be filled with his praise that for a while at least the "drag upon modern progress" is not taken off, and what The Nonconformist calls "the timid advance of the Government Affirmation Bill" is checked.

Thanking you from my heart for the very valuable and convincing leading articles which have appeared in your paper of late, and earnestly trusting you will steadily maintain your defence of truth and righteousness at all costs, I remain, yours faithfully, Frank H. White.

THE MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.

THE friends of this Society held their annual meeting in the Council-room of Exeter Hall last week, under the presidency of Mr. J. T. Drysdale. He said he considered this one of the very best societies in existence. The Committee were in earnest, but were crippled by want of funds; if they had a larger sum at their disposal, a great deal more good might be done.

Mr. J. H. L. Christien presented the report, which glanced at the work of a quarter of a century, during which time the Society had been engaged in rescuing the fallen, and in seeking to protect from falling those whose lives were beset by many temptations. During that period the Society had held nearly 800 meetings in London and the provinces, and these had been attended by 50,446 women. It was estimated that of this number at least 14 per cent. had either been sent to Homes or induced to return to their friends.

The claims of the Society were ably urged by the Rev. J. M. Andrews, who agreed with the remark recently made that London, with regard to this evil, is worse than Vienna, Paris, or Berlin; by the Rev. Dr. Davis, and Mr. Haig Miller, who, as a veteran in the work, bore cordial testimony to the good done by the efforts of the Society.

HINDOO AND CHRISTIAN SISTERS.

By Mrs. M. Porter,
For upwards of Thirty years Missionary in India.

THE HINDOO WOMAN'S LAMENT.

I AM weary of this darkness,
Oh, when will it be light!
There is not a gleam of sunshine:
My mind is dark as night.

I long to know a true God,
I have worshipped those of stone,
But no comfort can they give me,
Wand'ring, or when at home.

I have travelled till I'm footsore
To temple and to shrine,
That I might find a good God.
Whose face on me might shine.

But oh, I cannot find Him,
My search has been in vain,
I am told of Sheva, Brahma,
And many another name.

O Christian women! tell me,
Will your God for women care?
Does He feel for women's sorrows?
Will He hear a woman's prayer?

If you have light, oh, bring it,
That we may no longer pine
In darkness and in sorrow,
While on you the light doth shine.

THE CHRISTIAN WOMAN'S RESPONSE.

YES, yes, poor mourning sister,
We do possess the light,
And our God is full of mercy,
Of tenderness, and might.

He cares for women's sorrows,
He listens to our prayer,
And graciously He bids us
To cast on Him our care.

We will send his message to you,
Although we cannot go;
And our earnest prayers will offer,
And for you our tears will flow.

Jesus has died to save you,
Eternal life He'll give
To all who rest upon Him:
Only "believe and live."

And when life's journey's finished,
If our sins are all forgiven,
Hindoo and English sisters,
We all shall meet in heaven.

WILLARD TRACT REPOSITORY.—In consequence of the late fire in Paternoster-square, in which the Willard Tract Repository's publications were destroyed, Dr. Cullis will not be able to supply them until further notice. Communications can be made to Mr. S. Freeman, Hon. Secretary, Gloucester Villa, North-road, Highgate, N.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.—The various meetings in connection with the April anniversary in Dublin, which have just been held, appear to have had more than ordinary interest attached to them. The annual meeting was transferred to the Christian Union Buildings. The galleries, on Monday evening, last week, were filled by about 700 children from the Society's Homes and Schools, and their singing added greatly to the interest of the meeting. The Bishop of Kilmore presided. Rev. Horace W. Townsend, Clerical Secretary, gave a summary of the year's work, and incidentally referred to the attack made upon the Society recently by a Roman Catholic Priest, Rev. Columban O'Grady. Even the testimony of the latter, however, was a significant proof of the growing power of the Missions, for he remarked that "the Society is silently sapping the foundations of the faith (Romish) in this city and in many parts of the country." During the anniversary, a large new Home for Destitute Children was opened in Townsend-street, and a thanksgiving service was held in it for the blessing which had attended the Society's efforts.

NOTES FROM THE AUSTRALIAN BUSH.

By D. M. LOGAN.

DEAR SIR,—The intensely interesting matter that always fills the pages of your excellent periodical, which comes with constant regularity, is read by us with avidity and goes further to interest and arouse others. We used to long for the mail that we might hear what more Mr. Haslam had to relate concerning his labours and experiences in his "Yet not I," which was often so instructive and suggestive to those who live in the country; to hear of the progress of the work going on through the instrumentality of Messrs. Moody and Sankey; of the grand Gospel Temperance reformation; the exploits of the Salvation Army; Mission work by Miss Annie Macpherson, Dr. Barnardo, and others; to read the sketches of travel by Mr. H. Grattan Guinness, and notes of a variety of efforts in the spread of the Gospel.

TEMPERANCE.

On several occasions I have read extracts from THE CHRISTIAN, which have interested and aroused the people gathered for Christian service or at Temperance or kindred meetings. A little piece entitled "The Ribbon of Blue" was much appreciated, and my copy of THE CHRISTIAN containing it has been passed about with unusual solicitude. How my heart is warmed and my spirit cheered by reading of the prosperity of the Lord's work in well-known localities! Specially was it so when I read that No. 1 Branch of the Greenock Y.M.C.A. had received such blessing through Mr. Moody's visit to the town that their quarters were too small for them, their numbers having so greatly increased. Nineteen years ago I was a humble member of No. 1, and whilst there was converted to God. What encouragement in prayer I have received by reading of so many leading and influential Christian men at home joining the ranks of the total abstainers! Surely "superstitious faith" in the virtues of alcohol is fast disappearing from amongst Christian people. The Lord's name be praised! All the ministers of the Churches in our district here, whether Wesleyan, Church of England, or Presbyterian, are abstainers.

A MODERN SEER.

In a previous letter I mentioned that the Lord had directed a godly man to my place. It was as if the Spirit of the Lord came to John (John Keay is his name), and said, "Arise, get thee up unto a place that I shall show thee." John did as he was commanded, and came here as Elijah went to Zarephath. The Lord said to Elijah, "I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee." Of course we know the Lord's bounty was twofold, for not only did he sustain Elijah, but through Elijah's instrumentality the widow and her son were sustained likewise. And as John was paid for his labours here, I in turn was repaid by his presence, his faith, and his prayers. So far as my experience goes, I cannot recall any one character so like the Old Testament prophets as John. He is unique. We have pastors, preachers, evangelists, and teachers; but here is a seer, a prophet—one living in such thorough harmony with the Divine will; so constantly hearkening, watching, listening, waiting for the slightest wish or word from the Master, that he seems to be in that Master's thorough confidence. Surely "the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him; and He will show them his covenant." The latter part of this verse is often not quoted with the former.

I fear to trespass on your valuable space, yet if you can find room for the following I think it will not only be interesting, but may tend to strengthen the faith of those who may read it. John was in my service fifteen months. During that time we had two sheep-shearings. On the first occasion rain prevented our beginning on the day we had intended. We were delighted at the downpour. Two days later we started, and, after a few days, rain again stopped us for two more days. John came to me and said, "Please God, you'll not be stopped any more by rain." Some days afterwards the clouds began to draw down, and it looked as if promising rain. We don't say "threatening" in regard to rain here. I said to John, "What do you think of things now, John?" His reply was most memorable: "Though the heavens were black above us we won't have rain to stop you." The heavens grew blacker and blacker, a freshness was in the air, but John's face grew almost brighter as the smile of faith spread over it. At last, down came the heavy rain, but only for a few minutes, and then the storm blew off and we sheared out without any delay whatever. Then came the weary months of drought when thousands of cattle and sheep perished for lack of water, and all around us the scarcity of the precious liquid was alarming. John encouraged us to put faith in God, and as I previously related, He was graciously pleased to hear our prayers and send us rain.

For some time before our next shearing it was very showery weather and shearing was protracted in many sheds. I intended beginning early in November, and John came to me saying, "Please God, you'll get right through this time; you'll have no rain to stop you." Hot, dry weather set in whenever our shearing began, and people said we would be having a more severe drought this year than ever. Evil predictions were rife, but a smile just beamed on old John's always bright face, as he said, "You'll get all your water-holes cleaned out soon and some will have more water than they want." We finished shearing on the 14th of the month, and that very night, a few hours after we had finished shearing, down came the rain in torrents, and for several weeks, on every Tuesday, heavy rain occurred and water-holes were cleaned out, and some people had their dams washed away. I feel almost inclined to add, "according to the word of the Lord by the prophet John." At all events, it was as real to me as events we read of in Old Testament story in connection with the prophets. On one occasion I was going to cut some hay. John said, "We'll have rain soon, please God." I thought we had better leave the hay alone. Others in the district cut their hay and a quantity of it got spoiled. I waited and secured a fine crop, better than I should have had before.

(To be concluded.)

HAMPSTEAD.—In this delightful northern suburb the foundation stone of a new Congregational Church was laid laid week, by the venerable African missionary, Dr. Moffat. The pastor of the Church is Mr. R. F. Horton, a fellow of New College, Oxford, a young man of great intellectual gifts, and full of evangelistic fire. We anticipate much blessing in that neighbourhood from his ministry.

HIGHLAND ORPHANAGE, INVERNESS.—In the presence of a large number of friends and sympathisers of the movement, the foundation-stone of the first cottage was laid last week by Mrs. Forbes, of Culloden. Addresses were given by several gentlemen in commendation of the good work. Of the sum of £800 required, only a little over £250 has been subscribed, and as there are already six boys and four girls in the temporary Home, an earnest appeal is made for funds to enable the promoters to complete the first building free of debt. The Treasurer is Mr. George Walker, Ness Bank, Inverness, N.B.

THE "STRANGERS' REST," LIVERPOOL.—This agency has been greatly owned of God to the conversion of souls. Since the Friday evening meeting for prayer and testimony was instituted by Mr. Radcliffe, something like a revival has taken place; most encouraging are the testimonies borne by workers and converts at these joyous gatherings. The want is deeply felt of periodicals, magazines, books, tracts, &c., used in making up a sailor's "book bag," to take with him on the voyage, when he goes away, for reading at leisure, and distributing among his shipmates. Christian friends, having the sailor and the stranger at heart, are asked to forward contributions of old books and periodicals, &c., addressed to Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, The "Strangers' Rest," 24, Parklane, Liverpool. The need is a pressing one, the last bagful being given away weeks ago, and the demand for them is great.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

DALKEITH.

THE first anniversary meeting of this movement in Dalkeith was held on the 16th inst., 3000 persons being present. Nearly 1000 names have been enrolled during the year.

KIRKBY STEPHEN.

A very successful Mission has just been closed here. Five hundred and thirty pledges taken, out of a population of 2500. Several notorious drunkards have been reclaimed, and much good the result.

CLEVEDON.

A four days' Mission has just been conducted here by Mr. W. Forbes, who, by his earnestness and inexhaustible store of incident and illustration, completely carried his audience with him. A number of pledges were taken.

KNIGHTON.

A week's Mission has been held in this town by Mr. George Blaiklock. The meetings from first to last were crowded, and the audiences most enthusiastic. One third of the population have now donned the blue ribbon, and the Temperance cause was never in so flourishing a condition as at present.

BATTERSEA, S.E.

On Sunday evening, 15th inst., Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., addressed a large meeting in Bolingbrooke Hall, in furtherance of the Blue Ribbon Army Mission in Battersea. In his usual homely common sense style, he sought to persuade those who stand aloof from the Temperance movement to become identified with it. Forty pledges were signed in the hall.

HIGHBURY VALE, N.

A four days' Mission amongst the poor of the district of St. John's, Highbury, has been held, Mr. Joseph Samme being the conductor. On one occasion two hundred of the poor were gathered, at the invitation of the vicar (Rev. G. D. Wyatt, M.A.), to a tea, after which Mr. Samme gave a Gospel address, and Mrs. Wyatt, the vicar's wife, sang a solo. It is believed that many souls were born again, backsliders restored, and believers stirred up.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.

The Mission conducted here by Major and Mrs. Evered Poole is becoming daily more of a success. From the first night the Drill Hall, holding 2000 people, has been full, and the enthusiasm great. In the week past over 2200 pledges have been secured, and these are but a token of the numbers that we hope will eventually be drawn in.

The after-meetings are largely attended, and have been followed with blessed results. On Friday night, after a solemn address from Mrs. Evered Poole, all who had decided for Christ that night, or during the preceding nights, were asked to stand, and thirty-nine rose to their feet to confess their new-born faith in Christ. The scene was most impressive, and the silence only broken now and then by sobs.

Many who have hitherto held aloof from the blue ribbon movement have come forward to confess that they see the hand of the Lord working in their midst, and to welcome the blessing He is sending upon Kingston by his servants.

Among those who signed the pledge and took the blue ribbon during the Mission Canon Basil Wilberforce recently held at Torquay, was the Duchess of Sutherland.

The Kiosk and Coffee Stall Company have received permission to place a kiosk in Hyde-park, similar to the one in Regent's-park, for the sale of refreshments without intoxicating drinks. The site selected is near the Marble Arch.

A publican of Ilkeston, near Belper, has joined the Blue Ribbon Army. To show the sincerity of his conversion, he pulled down his signboards and presented them to the Army as trophies. He also had all the ale and spirits in his house washed down the gutters.

STRANGERS' RESTS IN GERMANY.

It was felt in November, 1880, that there was an urgent need for Strangers' Rests in the two chief ports of Germany, Hamburg and Bremerhaven. Accordingly, Mr. A. Brunnschweiler and Mr. Reginald Radcliff proceeded to these ports, and after working for some weeks succeeded in forming a Rest in each place. These Rests have continued open for seamen of all nations each night of the week ever since. The reports received speak of much blessing. Some time afterwards an aged but devoted lady helper of the Liverpool Rest went over with a companion and worked several weeks both at Hamburg and Bremerhaven.

The Rest at Hamburg has now begun to walk on its own legs, asking but little pecuniary help from England, and that only for one year more. But it must be borne in mind that Bremerhaven is only a little town (two hours by rail from the important City of Bremen), and the Germans who give their labour to the Rest are all poor Christians. Some of them were unable to aid in the support of their own pastor, so that he, helped by our Liverpool sister, had to emigrate to America, whilst his congregation continued to minister to one another without a pastor.

After the current year it is expected that the amount required from England will much diminish, but towards the present urgent wants and to provide one more year's rent for Hamburg there is needed about two hundred and fifteen pounds. It is hoped that the friends of the sailor in Great Britain will generously help in providing this sum. Contributions will be received by Mr. Arnold Brunnschweiler, Manor-avenue, Urmston, Manchester.

Notices of Books, &c.

Lunar Rainbows. By S. E. Saunders. 3d. J. F. Shaw & Co. This little book contains texts of Scripture for the night season for every day in the month. They are appropriately selected, and nicely printed.

Look unto Him. By the Author of "A Companion to the Birthday Text Book." The Book Society. The Saviour is here set forth under various scriptural images. The little work is attractive in style, and as instructive as it is interesting.

The Sunday School Union has just published a collection of Anniversary Hymns and Tunes for Sunday-schools, by Mr. Alfred H. Miles, price 6d. Some of the hymns are new ones, and the tunes appear to belong to that class which will wear.

Memorials of a Beloved Child. By her Mother. Clark, Dorking. This is a brief but touching story of a daughter who passed away at the early age of twenty-two, leaving behind her a bright Christian testimony. It may help some anxious ones looking to their own experience for rest, instead of to Him who hath said, "I will give you rest." We heartily commend it.

Illustrations and Meditations; or Flowers from a Puritan's Garden. Distilled and dispensed by C. H. Spurgeon. 2s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster. It would really seem that the busiest men are those who have the most time; else how could Mr. Spurgeon attend to the thousand and one arrangements of his many institutions, and at the same time send forth a constant stream of the richest and freshest writing of the day? We will not seek to solve the mystery: we will thankfully accept the fact, and pray God that his bow may long abide in strength. This latest volume from his prolific pen is marked by all the qualities that have gained him such popularity as an expositor of Divine truth. He is, no doubt, fortunate in his choice of texts for these meditative illustrations; the flowers of thought he has culled from the sermons of Thomas Manton are redolent of heaven's perfume. But they lose nothing of their original fragrance in the process of distillation by this gifted professor of spiritual chemistry; indeed, we may safely say that the extracted essences seem often to have a sweeter and more pervasive odour than the flowers themselves. Preachers and teachers will do well to inhale it oft, for their own refreshment and that of others.

We have received Tedlams and Mabel Watson, little books for children, written by Elizabeth Manton; they can be had from that lady at 8, Gough-road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

Wayside Talks. By E. W. W. Sunday School Union. A capital little book for boys and girls, suited for Sunday reading, and full of illustrations, pictorial and verbal.

Maranatha: A Watchword for Christians. 3d. Houlston & Sons. A simple but deeply interesting outline of prophetic truth is presented in these pages by a surviving daughter of the late Rev. John Cox. The pre-millenial view of the Second Advent, with the need of constant watchfulness and readiness, is advocated, by one who evidently loves our Lord's appearing, and who longs to bring others to share with her in the joy of anticipation.

"Unto the Perfect Day." Life Thoughts; selected and arranged by Rev. John A. Jennings. Carson Bros., Grafton-street, Dublin. A literary gem. Small enough to go into an ordinary vest pocket, it contains some of the wisest and weightiest sayings of many of the most gifted Christian poets and prose writers of the age, on the greatest themes that can occupy the human mind. Every reader will thank Mr. Jennings for having introduced him to such choice and profitable companionships.

Melodies of the Fatherland, Translated from the German. By the Rev. Robert Maguire, D.D., Rector of Southwark, and dedicated to the congregation of St. Olave's Church. All lovers of sacred poetry into whose hands this little volume may fall will richly prize it. It is full of gems, and we commend it heartily to all as a beautiful gift-book to a friend or companion and help to devotion for personal use. The book is published at the Office of Home Words, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.

Household Management for the Labouring Classes. By H. L. Hamilton. Partridge & Co. This little treatise contains valuable advice on five most weighty subjects, viz., Money, Home, Children, Clothes, and Illness. It is full of eminently practical hints for guidance, and throws much light upon many matters of the utmost importance to the class for whose benefit it is written. A more useful book for circulation, in connection with Mothers' Meetings, District Visiting, and Home Mission operations generally, we have rarely seen. We should like a copy of it to be in every cottage home throughout the land.

Year by Year. These collected addresses of Lord Polwarth, issued during fifteen years past as "Watchwords for the New Year," are now published in one volume, which we are glad to see has reached a second edition. They are full of Gospel truth, clearly and simply expressed. The type is good, making the volume very suitable for the aged, to whom in its present form it will be of special service and value. The addresses can also be had separately, and should be largely used in tract distribution, being admirably adapted for general circulation by Christian workers. They are published by Mr. Rutherford, Kelso, N.B.

The Age and Origin of Man Geologically Considered. This is another of the series of Present Day Tracts, publishing by The Religious Tract Society; it is written by Mr. S. R. Pattison, F.G.S., and Dr. Friedrich Pfaff, Professor of Natural Science in the University of Erlangen. It is a valuable contribution to a subject upon which many minds are unsettled and confused, and contains facts which it is desirable all such should be in possession of. The arguments employed lead most clearly to the conclusion that Scripture has nothing to fear from modern scientific criticism, but is only proved "more well-founded and irrefragable" by being sifted and examined in its light.

The Perversion of Dr. Newman to the Church of Rome, in the Light of his own Explanations. Common Sense, and the Word of God. By Pastor Chiniquy. 1s. W. T. Gibson, 58, Parliament-street, S.W. This pamphlet is likely to do good service to the cause of Protestant truth, and should have a wide circulation. It treats Dr. Newman's works with bold and trenchant criticism, and contains an exposure of the real principles and subtle practices of Romanism, which should in these days be understood by all classes of society. The connection between Nihilism and kindred movements and Jesuit influence is clearly shown, and the fearful evils of Auricular Confession exposed. The author was at the time of the issue of "Tracts for the Times" a Roman Catholic priest, and so is able to deal with his subject from a point of view specially advantageous to a fair and candid review of its bearings upon the cause of truth.

MANUEL MATAMOROS.*

[In April, 1865, the writer of these lines and his daughter spent part of two fragrant days at Lausanne with Manuel Matamoros, the Spanish exile, and with M. Bridel, an eminent minister of the town, and warm friend of the Spaniards residing there. Matamoros died on the 31st July, 1863, M. Bridel on the 1st of November following.]

I LITTLE thought, else keen had been my pain,
Those brilliant eyes should beam on me no more,
That scarcely fifteen moons should wax and wane,
Ere death had sealed them by blue Leman's shore.

Dear Matamoros! No friend have I known
Of soul less soiled with earthliness than thine;
In chains and exile, brave thy Lord to own,
The victor's wreaths thy martyr temples twine.

Loving and lovely, gentle, guileless, pure,
All base alloy thy lofty bosom spurned:
To lead thy bleeding Spain to Christ for cure,
With life consuming fire that bosom burned.

I loved thee, as did those of many a clime—
Thy glorious race on earth seemed but begun.
The Lord "does all things well." In golden prime Thou servest now, where shines no setting sun.

And Bridel's voice by Leman's lake is dumb;
Its silvery tones on earth are hushed for aye;
The Great Belov'd has to his garden come,
And, stooping, caught the lilies quick away.

Requests for Prayer.

PLACES.—For blessing upon a Mission to be conducted by Rev. R. D. Monro, at Gosforth, near Leeds, April 21 to May 3; also praise for much blessing upon the Mission at St. Paul's, Chippenham.——For a Mission at St. Paul's, Balham, April 28 to May 8, conducted by Rev. H. Dening. ——For blessing upon Mr. Varley's Mission to Ipswich, commencing April 22.——For blessing on a further week of Mission services at Brixton-hill for non-churchgoers.——For blessing on a Bible-class for young men at a ragged-school in Pendleton, Manchester.——For blessing on open-air preaching at Belvedere-road, and outside Christ Church, Westmidster-bridge-road.

MR. SPURGEON was unable last Sunday, through an attack of gout, to officiate at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. The affection has got into his hand, shoulder, and knee.

BIBLE FLOWER MISSION.—The short notice of the last report of the above Mission which appeared in our issue of the 5th inst., may have caused an erroneous impression as to the real state of its finances. The hon. secretary states, that although £11 were in hand on November 30, there were bills for rent, printing, &c., sent in immediately afterwards, and that at the present moment the Mission is in debt to the extent of over £50. There was a very large increase in the work done last year, the total number of distributions being just under 400,000, and there is great need for more helpers, either as visitors to the hospitals and infirmaries, senders of flowers and suitable text cards, or contributors of money to the necessarily increasing expenses. The report for 1882 may be had on application at 110, Cannon-street, E.C.

THE LATE MR. WILLIAM MORLEY.—A correspondent writes to The Record: "The religious and commercial worlds have sustained a severe loss in the removal by death of Mr. William Morley, who entered into rest on the evening of the 10th inst., at the age of sixty-seven, at his residence at Streatham, after a short illness. His life was one of truly Christ-like simplicity and unostentatious beneficence. He was the head of the firm of Messrs. Morley and Gray, of Gutter-lane, where he was most highly respected, and there are perhaps but few principals of London establishments to whose Christian consistency and practical solicitude for the best welfare of their associates and employés such striking testimony could be borne as was conveyed in a most touching letter written by them on his decease to his widow. One special feature of the Christian work in which he was engaged was a personal effort on behalf of atheists. These he would meet in goodly numbers on Sunday afternoons, and after hearing their arguments, instead of entering on logical instruction or controversy, he would take a brief text and apply it in a way so original as to disarm his opponents almost in spite of themselves, and so secure for himself a hearing upon those everlasting truths which he so firmly and persistently held."

900 MOTHERS OF ENGLAND

Are wanted to contribute

ONE POUND

each for the erection of

"The MOTHERS HOUSE," at the new HOMES for ORPHANS, at Swanley.

The House will be ready this summer. Will each mother who reads THE CHRISTIAN pray for these fatherless boys, and try and help them?

Gifts will be most thankfully received by Mrs. A. O. CHARLES, 19, Alwyne-square, Canonbury; by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, at the Office of THE CHRISTIAN; or by the Secretary, at the Homes for Little Boys' Offices, Ludgate-circus.

Works suitable for Bible Students.

John, whom Jesus Loved. Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Isle of Patmos." Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.

"This is not a book to be taken up lightly, read hurriedly, and carelessly dismissed. It merits, and will reward, a quiet, thoughtful perusal."—The Record.

"Thy First Love." Christ's Message to Ephesus. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A clear and thoughtful exposition. Dr. Culross writes in an easy, interesting manner; sometimes quaintly, always pointedly. Many a laggard in the heavenly race would be stirred to activity by reading Dr. Culross' exposition."—Penuel.

"Behold, I stand at the Door, and Knock." Christ's Message to Laodicea. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. Tinted covers, 1s. cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A most opportune book. Would that every professing Christian would thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse it. Sunday-school teachers also would find it immensely stimulating and reviving."—Hive.

Notes for Bible Readings. A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath-school Lessons, &c. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. A cheap edition may also be had in tinted cover, 2s. 6d.

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class-teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It brings together an immense number of subjects, with groupings of Scripture texts on each. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

Christ Lifted Up. Meditations on the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. By Rev. ROBERT GILCHRIST. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The subject from beginning to end is well thought out, and the volume altogether is well fitted to be at once edifying and awakening."—Free Church of Scotland Monthly Record.

"The fulness of Christ for every need of fallen humanity is set forth in a clear, convincing, and attractive manner."—Christian Week.

The Gospel according to Moses: as seen in the Tabernacle and its Various Services. By Rev. GEORGE RODGERS. Frontispiece. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."—The Record.

"A very spiritual as well as instructive little book, the Saviour being typically portrayed in the Tabernacle, the High Priest, and the Sacrifices."—Churchman.

TURKISH MISSIONS' AID SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL MEETING will be held in the LOWER ROOM of EXETER HALL, on FRIDAY, MAY 4. The EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G., will take the Chair at 3 o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. THE ANCHORAGE.

Hebrews vi. 19.

TRAINING INSTITUTION OF THE ANCHORAGE MISSION

(Of Hope & Help).

For the reception of the more respectable class of young women in trouble.

Conversion of heart, according to the simple Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, is the one thing prayerfully and faithfully sought.

The young women are fitted for resuming their position in life, by thorough instruction in household duties, cookery, dressmaking, fine laundry work, &c. &c.

A full description of the work of the Mission, with regulations for admission to the "Anchorage House," will be sent on application by letter to Mrs. H. STUART-WORTLEY, Rosslyn House, Grove End Road, N.W. (President of the Ladies' Committee), to whom, or to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, subscriptions may be sent.

On THURSDAY, MAY 3, 1883, the

REV. DR. PARKER

Will preach a SERMON on behalf of

The Benevolent or Strangers' Friend Society

(Established in the year 1785 for Visiting and Relieving, by an unpaid Agency, the Sick Poor of the Metropolis), in the

CITY TEMPLE, HOLBORN VIADUCT,

At Twelve o'clock Noon.

THE SYSTEMATIC BIBLE TEACHING MISSION,

67, PATERNOSTER-ROW, LONDON, E.C.

Mission and other Appeals.

Ramsey-street Juvenile Mission.—The Committee of this Mission solicit help to meet the rapidly increasing needs of the work. Contributions received by the superintendent, W. Rawles, 477, Cambridge-road, Hackney, E.

Deaf and Dumb.—Mr. D. Murray, Secretary of the Royal Association in Aid of the Deaf and Dumb, 419, Oxford-street, London, W., appeals for the increased support of the public on behalf of this important work of this institution.

Convalescent Home, Broadwater, Worthing.—Mr. Aulay Macaulay appeals for help for the Home under his care. He writes: "The home was opened last May, and has benefitted nearly ninety children. The children we take into the home come from homes of the most wretched description. The home at present is in urgent need of funds. Subscriptions will be thankfully received by Mr. Aulay Macaulay, Hon. Sec., Blechynden-street, Notting Hill, W.

Grove Hall Gospel Mission, Lisson-grove.—Omega-hall, where Gospel services have been held by the Evangelistic Mission, is to be sold; but several converts and friends are anxious that the work should be continued in the neighbourhood. It has been arranged to conduct meetings at the above hall (not in connection with the Evangelistic Mission). Friends desiring to help forward the work are asked to send their contributions to Mr. James Spruntt, superintendent, 16A, Omega-place, Alpha-road, N.W.

Nottingham Tabernacle.—If it were not for the exceptional circumstances of my plea, I would not venture to trespass on your space. The debt when I became pastor here was over £7500. In two and half years, by God's blessing, we reduced this amount by £1,500. Now, owing to the faulty construction of the roof, we are compelled to have certain repairs done, and we have had to find a temporary home elsewhere. The Lord is working in our midst, but the heavy drain upon a congregation composed of working people is too much. Will you just let your readers know these facts? £1000 is needful.—H. E. Stone.

[We shall be glad to take charge of any donations for our earnest ministerial friend.]

Battersea Park Tabernacle.—A special appeal is issued for the erection of a new building for the use of the Baptist Church worshipping at Battersea-park-road (Rev. T. Lardner, pastor). Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, Beulah-hill, Upper Norwood, endorses it, and says: "The pastor and the people are earnest workers and are doing their best; but Battersea consists mainly of working people who have little to spare, and must be helped from the outside. The work can be done under £3500, and they have a start of £700; but they need a number of large donations to lead the way, and then a cloud of smaller gifts to bring up the main body. I have consented to act as treasurer, and the sooner I am burdened with funds the better. Houses are springing up all around like dreams of the night, and the house of God ought to be builded at once."

Notices.

The Life of GEORGE WHITEFIELD.
By J. R. ANDREWS,
Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Shortly after returning to town he decided on the bold step of preaching at Moorfields during the great annual holiday of Witsuntide ('the season of all others,' he says, 'when, if ever, Satan's children keep up their rendezvous.') . . . . . He gives us the following account of his proceedings: 'I mounted my field pulpit, glad to find that I had for once, as it were, got the start of the devil. The people immediately flocked round me, and I addressed them from the words, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." All was hushed and solemn; they gazed, they listened, they wept.' He gave notice that he would preach again from the same place at six o'clock in the evening."—Extract.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

"CHRONIC BRONCHITIS merging into CONSUMPTION."

The following is an extract from a letter of Mr. James Mackay, Maclean-street, Paisley-road, Glasgow:—

"My father, who was under your treatment for eighteen months, was completely cured by it. No doctor had been able to afford him any relief. His case was 'CHRONIC BRONCHITIS MERGING INTO CONSUMPTION.'

"My mother, two years ago, likewise came under your treatment, and became so much better as to require no medicine. This Winter, however, seems to try her chest. Kindly forward a large bottle of your balsam."

SECOND LETTER of REV. P. CAROTTE, of SLEAFORD—who reported the Cure of a "CASE OF RAPID CONSUMPTION" (Mrs. Y—, of Thorne) in December last.

"One of my members living at Helpringham tells me your medicine undoubtedly saved his life."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

The Things that God Uses.

AN ADDRESS TO CHRISTIANS.

By D. L. MOODY.

"I verily believe we are not going to see a great work of revival in this land until the Church of God wakes up, and each individual member of it improves the talent God has given him. Moses was nothing; Joshua or Gideon were nothing. God did the work; they were but the instruments. People say they have no strength; but the trouble is that they have too much. It is when we become as nothing, and are emptied of our own strength, that God can take us up and make use of us. He will do the work, and He shall have the glory."

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation" D. L. Moody.

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."

The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. DANIEL BAKER. With Preface by D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

Spiritual Power

FOR

Missionary Work,

By REV. GRIFFITH JOHN,

Missionary to China.

With Preface by Rev. HENRY SIMON, of Westminster Chapel.

"The need of the Spirit of God in all missionary work, and of Christian work of every kind, is the burden of this pamphlet. He is to the Church the Source of all spiritual illumination—of all holiness—of all spiritual unity—of all spiritual joy—of all that influence in the the Church and in ministry of a man that gives him special capability for dealing with human souls. He is the Inspirer of all true prayer; indeed, every element of spiritual power is of Him. That is what Mr. JOHN presses home, and we wish his pamphlet was sown broadcast in our churches."

CHOICE SAYINGS.

Being Notes of Expositions of the Scriptures.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

EXTRACT FROM THE WORK.

"Take no thought for the morrow.' (Matt. vi. 35.) That is, no anxious thought, for this comes of distrust of God. But there is a thought for the morrow which is a holy carefulness: 'A prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself.' (Prov. xxii. 3.) Gathering clouds bespeak a coming storm Watch and be ready for every storm: be it in your own heart, in the church or in the world, provide against it by abiding in Christ; He is our hiding-place our high tower, into which the righteous runneth and is safe.

The Life of GEORGE WHITEFIELD.

BY J. R. ANDREWS,

Author of "The Life of Oliver Cromwell to the Death of Charles I."

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Among those in the higher ranks of life who statedly attended his ministry at the Tabernacle, was Lady Chesterfield. One day, when she was at Court, the King (George II.) noticing the dress she wore, which was not such as was usually seen there, said to her, "I know who chose that gown for you, Mr. Whitefield; and I hear you have attended on him this year and a half." To which she replied, "Yes, your majesty, and I like him very well." Whitefield was pleased with her boldness, and when relating the circumstances to Lady Huntingdon, observed: 'Oh that she, and all that have heard the Gospel, may have grace given them to speak of their dear Redeemer, even before kings!'"

URGENT APPEAL.

"Bis dat qui cito dat."

The Parish of Eston W. Normanby, including South-Bank and Grangetown, in the district of Cleveland, has a population of 18,000, consisting of Miners, Iron-workers, and small Shop keepers. The only Church is the old Parish Church of Eston, which seats 180 people. A new Church is in course of building, towards which £3,000 has been subscribed; £1,000 is absolutely needed to complete the same. At South Bank the site for a new Church is given: the plans are passed, and tenders conditionally accepted. £2,000 has been promised towards the Building Fund, but an additional £800 is required at once to enable the Committee to commence the work. Who will come to our help in this great emergency? Cheques can be paid into the National Provincial Bank of England, Middlesbrough, to the credit of the "Eston and Normanby" or the "South Bank" Church Building Fund account; or addressed to the Rev. C. BYRON WILCOX, Eston Vicarage, Normanby, near Middlesbrough.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts where required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS, E.C.

—At the last Quarterly Committee Meeting it was proposed by Rev. Dr. Edmond, Chairman of Committee, and agreed to nem. con.: "That in view of the rapid growth of the Mission, embracing weekly Addresses at Albion Hall, London Wall; instruction in Night School, Harvey-street, Hoxton; Bible Readings at Barbican House, House to House Visitation, Scripture and Tract distribution, &c. (with occasional help to distressed believing and inquiring Jews from among the Refugees), besides the Brighton Branch work during the summer, conducted by Mr. Warschawski and his assistants, the claims of this work as an instrumentality much blessed in its manifold operations should be brought under the notice of the friends of Jewish Missions for their prayerful consideration and sympathy." The last Annual Report is replete with interesting information, and will be forwarded to any address. Free-will offerings towards the maintenance of the work will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Rev. HOME FOR AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND WOMEN, 90, Junction-road, Upper Holloway, London, N.—Funds urgently needed. Resources are seriously taxed by illness, age, and infirmities, inmates need so much care. Will friends send help in this emergency? Report sent on application.

HENRY & ANN BRIGHT, Hon. Superintendents.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street,

Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of THE CHRISTIAN; or to the Secretary, JAMES ATKINSON, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N.

For Delicate or Backward Youths

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of harder Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

DECISION OF CHARACTER

SURREY HOUSE, 52, CLAPTON COMMON, LONDON, N.E.

Entrance at any date, Fees in proportion.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL,

WELLINGTON, SHROPSHIRE.

Principal—Dr. CRANAGE, M.A., Author of "Mental Education," "Three Lectures on the Tabernacle in the Wilderness," "The Mark of the Beast," &c., &c.

Vice-Principal—Robert Weston, Esq., T.C.D.

Head Master—Mathematics: T. Woodcock, Esq., B.A., Wrangler, and late Scholar and Exhibitioner, Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Master—Classics: H. May, Esq., B.A., late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford; with other Masters.

Dr. CRANAGE'S undeviating aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington. Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. Exhibitions, dependent on entrance examinations, are offered each April, July, and December; two of the value of Ten Guineas per annum, for seven years for boys under ten years of age; two of the value of Twenty Guineas per annum for five years, for boys under fifteen; and one of the value of Fifty Guineas per annum for boys under sixteen, for three years. The next Term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, May 3rd.

For further particulars, apply as above.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

MAGNETO-ELECTRICITY: ITS JUDICIOUS APPLICATION.

The varied applications of Magneto-Electricity are too well known in the present day to need explanation. A schoolboy can demonstrate the existence of magnetic force, or produce electric light by powerful batteries; but it needs very little penetration to understand the difference between these crude experiments and the amount of study which led to the perfected and steady illuminating power of the incandescent lamp. The same illustration will apply to its Therapeutic properties, for although the Odo Magnetic remedy is one of almost universal applicability, in fact more so than any other form of Electricity, its best successes are only achieved by careful and studied adaptation to the particular complaints it is intended to remove. With this aim constantly in view, we can now claim for the remedy a success unparalleled in the art of healing. If John Wesley could say with regard to one of his cures by electricity, "Can all England afford such a case as this wrought by a course of medicine?" what shall we say after such statements as are found amongst a list of 850 of our patients to whom reference is permitted? Experience abundantly demonstrates how marked and speedy, as well as permanent, are the benefits obtained among that class of sufferers whose ailments had been pronounced incurable. Can anything more be required to remove all doubts from the minds of inquirers as to the best standard by which to calculate the probabilities of successful treatment, and by which to secure all practicable and personal advantages from the means employed?

Mr. Garratt will be happy to confer with inquirers in search of health, or with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment. Whenever sufficient interest can be secured, Mr. Garratt will be happy to conduct a Drawing Room Medical Talk, with Readings from his Lectures, illustrated and explained by experiments.

Correspondents should state briefly, nature of ailment and cause (if known), how long suffering under what treatment (if any), age of patient; general health, and habit of body; in fact, everything that may promote successful treatment The date and entire postal address, including the prefix Mr., Mrs., Miss, Rev., Dr., &c., should be legibly written at the commencement of each letter. Different cases should be described on separate papers in patients' own handwriting (if practicable). After-references to cases should have folio numbers prefixed. A form has been provided for a description of symptoms by the patient; and after careful consideration of the particulars, if the case is judged amenable to Magnetism, the necessary treatment will be suggested. Mr. Garratt will be happy to reply to any inquiries without charge. Hours for consultation from 10 till 4, or later by appointment, at his rooms, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

Further information on Curative Magnetism and its energising properties, in mental as well as physical affections, will be found in "Essays" by B. C. Garratt, explaining the radical effect of Magnetism and Electricity upon the human organism in health and disease. The Essays on the "Philosophy of Health," and the "Art of Healing," were originally delivered as Lectures, and are now published at 1d. each. They are devoid of the technicalities which attach to scientific subjects generally, being intended to simplify such principles as will conduce to the relief of common ailments of the most fixed and chronic type.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

THE union of Christians of various sections of the Church is a subject calling for much concern. The lack of it is a cause for humiliation before God, and tends most seriously to retard the progress of the work of Christ. Canon Gregory presented to the House of Convocation recently a gravamen containing the following clause referring to the efforts to restore "magnificence of worship" in the Church of England:—

That the observances so restored have caused great differences of opinion in the Church, and in consequence there has been much unseemly strife, much costly contention before the law courts, and much injury, directly and indirectly, inflicted upon the cause of religion, and a grievous weapon placed in the hands of the Deist and Atheist for undermining the faith of many.

From the reformandum which accompanied this, it would seem the object of the Canon was to obtain for Ritualistic observances greater toleration and sanction. With this purpose evangelical Christians can feel no sympathy, but the words quoted above indicate, nevertheless, a fact of grave importance. The divided state of Christendom furnishes a weapon of attack enemies of the truth are not slow to employ, and there is urgent need for considering how it can be remedied. There are in our country somewhere about a hundred and eighty different denominations, thirteen new sects being registered at Somerset House last year.

"For the divisions of Reuben there were great searchings of heart." For those of the Christian Church there may well be the same. In the case of true believers their cause is not so much any real or essential differences of belief on fundamental truths, as apparent differences and contrariety of thought on minor matters. There is not a little truth in the statement that—

At the present day that which keeps Christian people apart is largely respect for merely tradition, the feeling that what has been for a long time must, forsooth, continue to be out of respect to our ancestry and the systems which they builded and cemented with their blood, whether wisely or foolishly.

The limits within which Christian unity should be confined, or the extent to which it should be striven after, is a difficulty with many who consider the subject. A correspondent signing himself "Old Paths" writes to The Record recently, calling attention to Eph. iv. 3, where in the Greek the definite article occurs before the word "peace," from which the writer thinks we are taught that—

"The bond of peace" is not woven out of placid indifference to theological error, or unrequited, concessions to it (as is too commonly supposed) but out of these three threads: (1) the person, (2 the finished sacrifice, (3) the continued spiritual presence with us of Christ, who is said in ii. 14 to be our peace; in ver. 15, to have made peace; and in ver. 17, to have "come and preached peace."

In the bond of that peace which Christ is, made, and preached, it is, indeed, our duty to "strive to keep the unity of the Spirit: "but, most assuredly, not in the bond of any other peace, else surely the Epistle to the Galatians had never been written, and St. Peter had never been "withstood to the face."

Christ the one sacrifice, Christ the ascended Lord, "Christ all, and in all," is assuredly the centre to which all true faith converges. Outside these the evangelical believer can find nothing in common with his own deepest convictions. The Divine Spirit testifies to these cardinal facts, and those who are led by Him must surely bear their unwavering witness to the same. But questions not affecting the fulness and glory of Christ as the Saviour and Redeemer of men, however they may affect the conscience as matters of personal conviction, should be held subordinate to Christ, and should not be allowed to prevent brotherly sympathy and co-operation among those who are members of the one body of which He is the Head. Those who are true to Christ should also be true to those who are his.

The glorious fact of the real oneness of the body needs to be kept more prominently in view, and its preciousness more deeply felt. Whatever differences prevail, if we are truly Christ's, it remains a fact as He said, "One is your Master, and all ye are brethren." Be it ours to recognise and act upon his words.

LONDON PUBLIC HOSPITALS.

THE condition of some of our metropolitan hospitals in relation to funds calls for earnest attention on the part of the public. It seems that both in the case of St. George's Hospital in the west, and the London Hospital, Whitechapel-road, in the east, there is a serious falling-off of income. Both institutions are highly deserving of confidence for the efficiency of their management, and are greatly needed in the districts where they exist. The meeting held at Grosvenor House on the 23rd inst., presided over by the Duke of Cambridge, will probably do much to increase the spirit of liberality on behalf of the former among the wealthy inhabitants of the West End, to whom, as Lord Shaftesbury justly said, it is a disgrace and a reproach that such an institution placed in the midst of such a neighbourhood should languish for lack of support.

The case of the London Hospital calls for special concern and widely increased aid from all classes of society having it in their power to assist. Its position in the midst of a dense population of poor and hard-working people, exposed to all sorts of peril amid the wharves, factories, and various trades and occupations involving danger to life and limb, makes it of vast importance to the district. The arrangements for the welfare and comfort of patients appear to be specially worthy of commendation. Special departments for special diseases, Jewish wards where arrangements are made for cooking and serving food in accordance with the religious principles of their occupants, bright and cheerful children's wards carefully and specially attended to, are features which indicate wise and beneficent management.

The work accomplished by this valuable centre of medical skill and philanthropic effort to ameliorate suffering and distress, may be judged of by the fact that 7171 in-patients have been treated during the past year, while no fewer than 62,000 out-patients also received relief. At a meeting presided over at the Mansion House by the Lord Mayor, held last week, Dr. Andrew Clark said of it that it was "the greatest hospital in the country, and the one which was perhaps doing the largest work."

Surely such institutions demand regular and liberal support. It would be well if those who have time and means at their disposal would sometimes visit them, and from personal inspection satisfy themselves of their noble and deserving character. Compassion for the needy sufferers would be excited, and the scenes witnessed would be more eloquent and effective in their pleading than any other means that could be employed to induce practical sympathy with the necessities of the work. Most assuredly, all who are actuated by the Spirit of Christ should give to such claims a foremost place in their sympathies and benevolent action.

"HIGHWAYS FOR OUR GOD."*

By LADY HOPE.

OUR crowded streets of London! What thoroughfares for Satan they are! What highways for our God they might be! Why do we not use them more? When thousands upon thousands are signing the Temperance pledge, and many thousands are donning the Blue Ribbon, why do we not take advantage of the movement to open Mission coffee-houses by the hundred? The people's money has kept up the drinking houses, the music-halls, the theatres; why should it not now be turned towards the support of places for beneficial result—places where the Lord's name is honoured, his Word read, his laws manifested and taught? Why not? There would be a great deal more encouragement for the people to become abstainers, and having become abstainers, or, better still, Christians, to keep so, or be kept so, by the continual opening afresh of large, spacious, and Christian coffee-houses.

The Coursales abroad teach us a lesson. There, beneath a great roof, the people mingle together, eating and drinking; listening to music, enjoying conversation, or games, or handiwork. They pay a fee for entrance, and hundreds thus find a shelter which they appear to look upon not only as a luxury but a necessity. If we could devise cheaply a covered space, more like a rink than anything else we have in England, where the people might crowd together, and enjoy themselves apart from the public-house or outdoor temptations, the place ventilated throughout with a godly influence, hymn singing, speaking, music, temperance talk, above all Scripture reading, going on at intervals throughout the evening, the powers of evil would be kept in check, the people would be happy and comfortable and, without a doubt, we know from our every day's experience the results would be marvellous.

Perhaps some brave speculator may, with faith, ere long, give us our wish in some central position in London, and let us see the theory brought into practice, with results accruing therefrom more abundant even than our expectations. And these are large, because the promise is large.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—6.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

IT is Christ's appeal to us, and his entreaty, Be ye therefore perfect!

Ye are the salt of the business life. A power in the midst of it, to check its corruption.

Do not smile at such an assertion as absurd. It can be done. "All power is given unto Me, in heaven and in earth," saith He who is our strength, and He fits us for our position. Surrender yourself to Him for this purpose, to check all that is underhand; all that is actually ungenerous.

"Well, but you can't do business on those principles."

Very well, then, if that is really so, settle which you will give up, Christ or the business. Don't call yourself a Christian and be false to your King. Will you give yourself right up to Him for this? Never was there greeter need of a valiant, enthusiastic devotion to Christ than in the business life of to-day. It may not pay. Very likely it will not. Leave that matter to the Lord Jesus, and make your one thought an out-and-out loyalty to Him

The world ha some honesty about it after all. If a man wil be steadfastly consistent in the service of his heavenly Master, the world may laugh at his scruples, but it won't despise him in its heart of hearts. It will honour him; it will believe in him; and he will act upon it as the salt. But the world eeps its scorn for those religious people whose religion makes them only clever. They don't fall down into the black pit of cheating and lying, not because they hate a lie as damnable, but because they have learnt to trim and shape their words so cleverly that they make the truth itself tell lies for them. Ah, if they looked up, surely they should see that Face filled with a grief which is changing into indignation! What, these the salt of the earth, the light of the world?

Salt, so needful, so wholesome, yet is it to be wisely used. There are some good kind of people who find it saves so much trouble to deal out religion in large doses, especially, perhaps, to servants and children; giving them a long and solemn lecture on religion at some solemn time, or when one is in the mood for it, or, still more likely, when some grave offence is committed, as if religion were only a supplementary punishment. No wonder such sufferers never like the taste of it again. Salt, discreetly sprinkled over all the common dishes of life, giving all things a savour and sweetness—this our Master seeks to make us.

Look up again to the gracious Lord; this is his desire and purpose concerning us. Ye are the salt of the earth. . . . Be ye therefore perfect.

Ye are the light of the world. So the Saviour takes us again to share His great work, and to further it. "I am the light of the world," He saith of Himself. Then He lifts us up to his high level, and saith of us, "Ye are the light of the world."

Here again there meets us at once the thought of our self-surrender to Christ. The "light" is a candle, a lamp—not a star, much less a glow-worm. It is a burning, and therefore a shining light. The candle consumes itself in blessing others. So are we to be like unto Christ, who gave Himself for us.

We cannot get this truth too firmly fixed within us, that on our part this self-surrender is everything.

We cheat ourselves with vague aspirations and desires to be useful—moonshine, cold and transient. We set ourselves to rush to and fro trying to do a hundred good works—a zeal that may never see the Master's face; never hear the Master's voice; never know the Master's will. Holiness is coming unto Him, and giving ourselves right up to our dear and blessed Saviour that He may fulfil in us his purpose—the purpose of glorifying the Father.

Glorifying the Father! Why do not the words stir us and inflame us? To serve HIM were much; but we are called to more than that. To please HIM were blessed; but ours is to be a higher life than that. So living as that men shall GLORIFY Him. What possibility can be beyond that? It is the heaven of the highest angels; it is the rapture of the seraphs; it is the great life-work of the Son of God; and yet it is Christ's command concerningyou and me!

A lofty work, indeed—the highest and grandest conceivable. Say then, is it not the saddest proof of our blind, deaf, dead souls—that we can think of it so coldly, so unmoved! It is the fullest proof of his great salvation, that we should be called to such a high estate, and made capable of so sublime a service. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift.

And yet, though it is so high and noble a work, this holiness is to reach down to all the lowliest round of life. It giveth light to all that are in the house. I knocked my head once in going up the dark staircase of a lighthouse tower. "You want more light inside," I said to the keeper.

"Oh, it doesn't matter about us, sir, so long as the light shines well out at sea."

Holiness shines within as well as without. It brightens every room in the house—the kitchen, the nursery, the dining-room, upstairs as well as down. It cannot be hid.

And yet it is always hidden. So shine that men may . . . glorify your Father, in heaven. Self-seeking is slain, self-consciousness even is overcome. Oh, happy deliverance! who does not long for it? Well, here it is for us, like all other gifts, in Him—coming unto Him, and, in his strength and for his sake, giving ourselves right up to Him, for his great purpose.

THE HIGHWAY OF HOLINESS.

Where is it? Ah, what weary searches some have had for it. What journeyings men have gone in the hope of finding it—the holy grail, the vision of God, at once the source and crown of holiness. And some have found it, after years of toil and peril—found it in a whirlwind of rapture, up at heaven's gate, far away and out of sight of earth, up in visions of bewildering glory; and simple men have sighed and trudged along life's muddy roads, and faced the dreary winds and rains, and wished that they could fly—then they might be holy too.

Cheer up, sad heart, cheer up. The Highway of Holiness is along the commonest road of life—along your very way. In wind and rain, no matter how it beats—only, it is going hand in hand with Him.

Look again at this fifth chapter of St. Matthew, ver. 17. He is come to fulfil in us the law and the prophets; to show to us their innermost meaning, and to bring out their fullest life.

Read ver. 21—24. He is come to go down with us into the midst of those who vex and wrong us—the slow and blundering people, the quick and careless ones, the hot-tempered, who set us on fire; the clumsy, who provoke us to impatience. Holiness is in just taking his hand for strength to check our temper, and to hold our tongue. And if we have spoken sharply, that gentle hand leads us back again, and gives us courage to say that we are sorry for it, and so to be reconciled to our brother. That is the Highway of Holiness.

(Ver. 27.) It lies along a way where evil suggestions meet us and whisper foul things at our ear, but He goes with us and we hold Him. "The Lord my strength . . . my goodness, and my fortress" (Ps. cxliv. 2). Oh, blessed victory is ours then! Hand-in-hand with Him, all that He has is ours. We walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. Christ and Him crucified is ours most fully, when we walk and talk with the risen, the living, the present Christ,—more than conquerors through Him that loved us.

I know not what is meant by "the destruction of the evil principle" within us—"the rooting up of the remains of the carnal mind." Do not bewilder yourself about yourself. Set eye and heart and hand on Him. I do know that hand-in-hand with Him I can overcome. I do know that without Him I am the helpless slave of sin. What more need any know?

(Ver. 33—37.) The highway of holiness leads down into the market-place, amidst the many words of those that buy and sell—the beating up and beating down. It goes still hand-in-hand with Him, and so finds strength and grace to be quiet. Oh, rarest gift and truest grace! In Him we find the even truth, whose yea is altogether yea, and a nay that is altogether nay. Hand-in-hand with Him is this grace learnt, to speak a word that needs no oath, that does not overstate nor understate, nor "say perhaps silently," a word that hits the mark at once and needs no second. That is the Highway of Holiness.

(Ver. 38—48.) The Highway of Holiness goes down into the midst of enemies who injure and defraud. But still hand-in-hand with Him, He teaches and strengthens us neither to resent nor to avenge such injuries; but in all things to be governed by a noble charity, a charity which has its penalties and prisons it is true, but uses them neither in malice nor anger, for charity is sister to justice.

So holiness is in receiving Him, and thus having authority to become the sons of God, and true brothers to all men.

Y.W.C A. INSTITUTE, DUBLIN.

NEAR the close of 1881 an Institute was opened in 13, Nassau-street. We have had over 150 members enrolled; besides these upwards of 500 young women in the houses of business in our city have received invitations, and attend occasionally. There are two Bible-classes weekly, Sundays and Fridays, which are well attended and have been a source of blessing. We have also a missionary working party, music, singing, drawing-classes, and lectures on nursing. Our Registry has, so far, done well, but we still need our Institute to be better known, and then it will become more useful, both to ladies who require servants and young women to apply for suitable situations.

We gladly avail ourselves of this opportunity of letting the work be more widely known through your columns, for we believe that many who are interested in young women only require to hear of such work to give it a helping hand. Any further information can be obtained from, and contributions sent to, the secretary of the Institute, Mrs. A. Jones, 43, Stephen's-green, Dublin.

MR. SPURGEON had not sufficiently recovered from his attack of rheumatic gout to officiate on Sunday last at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. His health, however, is much improved, and it is hoped he will be in his place on Sunday next.

MAY MEETING NOTES.

THE sermon of Dr. Stanford at the City Temple on behalf of the Baptist Home and Irish Mission was one of special value and striking originality of thought and expression. From the words of our Lord to Peter, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren," the preacher called attention first to the fact that Peter was already a disciple when he needed this re-conversion; and, secondly, urged that the text should make each disciple of to-day ask whether he himself needs thus to be converted before he can strengthen others. Very searching and salutary were his words as he pointed out how Christians who possess a strong human nature, a worldly spirit, and those who take little or no part in the Gospel enterprise, need a re-conversion in order to power for service. The sermon deserves a very wide circulation, and should be read by all Christian professors. The closing words indicate the tone of deep spiritual pathos and power which pervaded the whole discourse:—

But it is plain that if we would serve our age as true Christians, and true Britons, we must be converted—converted to a life of closer communion with Christ, and made to feel that whatever interrupts that communion interrupts our missionary power. Augustine once said, "O Lord, convert me, convert me, but not now!" Reverently, humbly, earnestly, we would say, Now! This we would say for ourselves, and for all the churches, and would have ever on our hearts, words once written by Ward, of Serampore—"The conversion of the Church must precede the conversion of the world."

The address of the Rev. J. P. Chown, as Chairman of the Baptist Union, was delivered on Monday morning in Bloomsbury Chapel. The subject was one of vital importance, "Christ in the Christian." The address was a manly and outspoken one, on a theme which is precious to all saints. Speaking of "Christ in the man," he said:—

We notice how it should be in the case of those who bear the Divine name. This is what the Lord feels, as, looking down on his disciples, He says, "I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me, and hast loved them as Thou hast loved Me." This is what He teaches, as to the spirit by which they should be known, when He gives the new commandment, "That ye love one another as I have loved you; that ye also love one another;" and it is by this men are to know they are his disciples. This is the authority with which they are invested, as the Lord says to the Father, "As Thou hast sent Me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world. So that a Christian without Christ is a contradiction of terms."

It was a good point made when Mr. Chown said:—

He had seen the word spelt a few days ago with a small "c," but let their conduct be such that it would be felt, not only by them, but by the world, that there was so much of Christ in Christian, so much of the divinely personal in the human representative, that the word was worthy of being spelt with a capital C, or if all in capitals and in letters of gold, so much the better.

The other parts of the address pointed out what must be the results of Christ being in the man and in the Church, viz., eminent holiness, thorough oneness, and sanctified consecration to missionary work, &c. On the latter we read:—

Christ is a leader and commander too, and if He leads where He commands, as He does, and that may be rejoiced in, He also commands where He leads, and that should be obeyed. "If ye love Me, keep My commandments," is a principle that is very broad in its application, and certainly should be remembered in connection with this. Look at the condition of the greater part of mankind, and the fact that the Gospel is the only power that can fathom the depth of their depravity, or give them the blessing without which they can never be really blest at all. Look at the relation they sustain to us, as "God hath made of one blood all nations of men," and "all the world" is around us as the field in which we are to work, and every part of which is to be filled with the Gospel.

The introduction of a strongly-worded resolution in favour of the Affirmation Bill seems to have cast a shadow of discord over the meetings of the week in connection with the Baptist Union. The feeling of the minority who voted against it was very strong, and it would seem to have struck many even of those who voted for the resolution that it was a pity to bring before an assembly of such a character a political subject which involves strong religious convictions, and necessarily excites differences of opinion among Christian men. At the Annual Members' Meeting of the Missionary Society, the Treasurer, Mr. Joseph Tritton, intimated that his own feeling was so strong on the matter that he must take time to prayerfully consider whether he could longer hold public office in connection with the body.

From an announcement made by the Secretary of the Bible Translation Society at its annual meeting, there appears to be a possibility that the long-standing dispute between the Baptist denomination and the British and Foreign Bible Society may soon be ended. The Editorial Committee of the latter institution has been instructed to allow of a translation of the words baptize and baptism being placed in the margin of aided versions—e.g., "Some translate immerse." It is to be devoutly hoped that an arrangement which appears to be so thoroughly consistent with fairness and loyalty to truth may be adopted on both sides, so that complete co-operation may be secured in the grand work of circulating the Scriptures. Anything which tends to increased unity without the sacrifice of principle, must surely be hailed with satisfaction by all well-wishers to the cause of Christ.

Sir Richard Temple's speech, as Chairman of the Soirée held by the Baptist Missionary Society at Cannon-street Hotel, calls for special note. Having filled the position of Lieut.-Governor of Bengal he could speak with peculiar force on the work of Missions in India. His address was full of encouragement and hope concerning the results secured, and still to be expected from the efforts being put forth by the Christian Church. We give the following extract as eminently arousing and cheering to the supporters of Mission work:—

You may be confident, when I appeal for your pecuniary support, that the results are fully commensurate with the expenditure. As an old Finance Minister of India, I ought to know, if anybody does, when the money's worth is got by any operation, and myself having also administered provinces which contain, from first to last, 105,000,000 of British subjects—that is, nearly half British India—I say that, of all the departments I have ever administered, I never saw one more efficient than the missionary department, and of all the hundreds of thousands of officers I had under my command—European officers and gentlemen—I have never seen a better body of men than the Protestant missionaries, and I say also that of all the departments I have administered, I have never known one in which a more complete result was got than in the great department—the grand department—which is represented by the Protestant missionaries.

The Annual Meeting in Exeter Hall of the Baptist Missionary Society on Thursday last was well attended. It was presided over by the Right Hon. W. E. Baxter, M.P. The report read by the Secretary, Mr. A. H. Baynes, was of a very pleasing character, all the fields of the Society's operations showing advance. The treasurer, J. Tritton, Esq., said that he had to report an income of £60,722, a sum of £8000 in advance of any previous year. The Rev. Dr. Bevan spoke eloquently on the opportunities presented to the Church for conveying the Gospel to all the world, and produced a deep impression by urging the inquiry, "Are the churches ready to meet the changes imminent in heathendom through the breaking up of the various systems of superstition and idolatry?" The conviction in his mind was that they were not, and that a fresh infusion of life and power is essential if the work of evangelisation is to be adequately maintained.

The United Methodist Free Church has just held its annual meeting on behalf of Home and Foreign Missions, in Exeter Hall. Financial difficulty was reported, and circumstances causing trial and anxiety in connection with the Society which had prevented extension. The first resolution contained words to the effect that "This meeting prays that the Holy Ghost may be poured out on the Mission stations, resulting in the salvation of souls." Here we have the great desideratum in all the departments of Christian work. We cannot be too often reminded that it is "not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

The Primitive Methodist Metropolitan Chapel Building Fund held its annual meeting, last week, in the City Temple. It appears to be doing a useful work, and that in a modest, unpretending way. The Chairman, Mr. W. Green, of Highgate, gave a wise caution when he said, "They might build new chapels, but this would do little good unless the Church exhibited more of the spirit of unity, and more clearly revealed the Christ of the Gospels to man."

The seventy-eighth annual meeting of the British and Foreign School Society has just been held at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Lord Mount-Temple. It is cause for congratulation that this Society continues to advance successfully upon its old lines, the necessity for its operations becoming increasingly urgent as the cause of secular education and the influence of scepticism strengthens their hold upon the nation. The President spoke truly and wisely when he said:—

The especial object of Agnostics and Secularists was to get within their control the training of teachers. The Society, therefore, had more than ever an important work before it, and he believed that its main object must command the sympathy and support of the public, and of all those who wished that in the primary schools there should be a full development of all the faculties of the children, their minds, hearts, souls, spirits, and consciences.

YOUNG WOMEN IN HOLLOWAY.—A meeting was recently held at 4, Cambridge-terrace, Holloway-road, to open a new Institute there for the benefit of the shop employés in the neighbourhood; Mr. S. Morley, M.P., in the chair. Mr. W. T. Paton said there were thousands of young girls employed in the immediate vicinity who would be tempted to go in the wrong direction were not such doors of sociality, kindness, and Christianising influences thrown open to them. Mr. Morley congratulated the friends on the opening of the Institute, and wished God speed to the Association. Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, Revs. M. Washington, J. R. Wood, and other friends also expressed their sympathy in the work of the new Institute.

THE LIVERPOOL CONVENTION.

THE "Christian Conventions" which are now so increasingly popular in this country, as a stimulus to effort and an expression of brotherhood, may be said to have largely originated with the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey eight years ago. Mr. Moody's unrivalled gifts as a leader of such gatherings have invariably made them a success, when he was present, giving a practical turn to the discussions. The Convention over which he presided in the city of Liverpool at the close of his last British campaign was one of the most memorable and fruitful of these occasions. It would, perhaps, have been too much to expect that any such tangible result as the establishment of the famous "British Workman Cocoa Houses" should follow the Convention of Thursday last; but if it only fostered the growth of union among Christians of different names, and give an impulse to the spiritual energies of the churches, it would have amply fulfilled its purpose. Much more than this, however, has been its outcome, as our report will show.

Much interest was felt in the proceedings, not only by the Liverpool friends, but by those at a distance, many being present from London, Leeds, Manchester, Newcastle, Glasgow (which sent a large contingent), Dublin, &c., &c. Mr. Moody presided throughout. During the day Mr. Sankey sang, "Tell it out," "While the days are going by," "Go work in My vineyard," and other favourites.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE.

The first hour of the morning session—10 to 11—was devoted to this important subject. Canon Wilberforce was expected to take a leading part during this hour, but was unable to attend in consequence of a throat affection.

Rev. Jas. Scott, of Glasgow, opened the topic with a statement of facts respecting Temperance progress in Glasgow. The Mission of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey, he said, gave a great impetus to Temperance work in that city. He hoped there were few cities in the kingdom that stood more in need of such a movement. They had put the Gospel in the forefront, believing it to be the only real lever by which they could uplift the drunkard. The victims of the drink came to the meetings by the thousand. In the course of a year some 50,000 men and women took the pledge. Between 20,000 and 30,000 of these had been visited, and were found, as a rule, to be holding out well. Mr. Scott gave an interesting account of the formation and progress of the "Mizpah Band," the facts of which are pretty well known to our readers. Only some 8 per cent. of the 900 that joined that band had relapsed. They were not only studying the Bible together for their own edification, but, in order to reach their fellows, they had started nine Gospel Temperance Meetings in different parts of the city. The "male choir," under Mr. W. Moodie, was a great feature of the work, and did good service in sustaining and extending it. Some of the best workers in the city were men who a short time ago had been down in the gutter through indulgence in the intoxicating cup.

Mr. Moody having referred to the appeal by Rev. Chas. Garrett at the Liverpool Convention in 1875 on behalf of the "corner-men," which resulted in the founding of the Cocoa-houses, Mr. Babcock, Chairman of the Liverpool British Workman's Public-house Company (Limited), gave some details as to the history of that remarkable movement. With a capital of £30,000, forty-six of these cocoa-rooms and seven cafés of a superior order had been established and maintained, yielding the good return of 10 per cent, while exerting an excellent Christian influence in the community. Many of the managers, he said, were able and effective Christian workers, having abundant opportunities of speaking a quiet word for Christ to those who frequent the establishments. The secret of their success, he believed, lay in the fact that it had been undertaken as a work for God, whose blessing had been invoked upon it from first to last.

HOW TO EXTEND EVANGELISTIC WORK.

This subject was introduced by Mr. C. Russell Hurditch. The first thought that came to him, he said, was that of thanksgiving to God for the establishment of such agencies as Gospel literature, united prayer-meetings, and the raising up of Evangelists who had gained the ear of the masses. As to future extension, he thanked God for the more general recognition by the churches of the gift and office of the Evangelist. Would that many more whole-souled, God-called, and God-qualified men might be sent out to the great world-parish, proclaiming the simple message of the Gospel. He hoped many of the recent converts in Liverpool would henceforth labour among their fellows in this line of service. We want more men of the right stamp—men of might, of understanding, of ability, who will eschew business prospects in order that they may devote their gifts to God's service in direct evangelistic work. As to methods, said the speaker, we want a greater adherence to the good old Gospel and less of intellectual essays or apologetics. Let us utilise all kinds of buildings—barns, circuses, tents, &c.—if we would reach those of the masses who cannot be drawn into church and chapel. Then there must be more "button-hole theology"—seeking by individual effort to win those who are afar off. Mr. Hurditch made an earnest appeal to Christian women, especially those in good positions, to take up more heartily and courageously rescue work among their fallen sisters. In all Christian effort there must be more real unity among those who call themselves by the name of Christian worker.

Five minutes' speeches were called for—a stipulation not in every case adhered to. Mr. Grattan Guinness said this large Convention ought to yield a goodly number of young men for foreign missionary work. Over in France there were 37,000,000 of people, mostly Romanists and infidels; there the field is absolutely open, as indeed it is all throughout Europe. Evangelists are much wanted in Norway, where they can speak by translation. Letters are coming from Finland speaking of much blessing there. In Russia, with her 80,000,000, there are wonderful openings for service, and also in Austria. Italy and Spain are both stretching out their hands to the Gospel. Across the Mediterranean, in North Africa, a small work has been begun, but that gigantic continent is yet practically a heathen one. Then if we look at India, Central Asia, Mongolia, Burmah, and the adjacent nations, we find loud calls for workers. China with its vast population is open to the preacher, but to a large extent it is still in darkness. South America, Brazil, Central America, and the East India Islands, also present opportunities. "Young men and young women, rise up and go forth to these lands with the light of the Gospel. Their people are redeemed with the blood of Christ, but they have never been told of it. The word of the Lord is first 'Go ye;' then comes the promise, 'Lo I am with you alway, even to the end of the days.'"

Rev. Mr. Robinson (Dublin) spoke of open-air preaching as an effective method of evangelistic work, and told of several striking cases of the conversion of drinking men through this instrumentality. He wished that in his country they had the same grand opportunities for open-air effort as in England. He believed, however, there was never before so much independence of thought and so much hunger for the word of God among his countrymen. He asked for believing, importunate prayer on behalf of his poor bleeding country.

In response to this appeal, Mr. Moody offered fervent prayer for the sister isle: "Bless thy children there," he pleaded, with broken utterance, "who have been passing through such deep trials, and may the day soon come when there shall be a mighty work of grace up and down the land. Calm the passions of man; bring them out of the darkness of superstition and breathe upon them the breath of life."

Mr. Campbell White, while urging more effort for the uplifting of the masses, said that the lives of Christians as well as their words ought to speak for Jesus. It needed more courage and faithfulness on the part of Christians to testify for Christ among those on the same social plane; but this is a duty that ought not to be shirked.

Mr. Moody thankfully referred to the work among the lapsed masses of the Cowcaddens, Glasgow, that had been begun during the Mission there last year; he called on Major Colquhoun to give a statement of what had been accomplished there. The Major said they had made every effort to make the meetings attractive—short addresses, short prayers, and plenty of good singing. But the direct kindly dealing with individuals had been the most effectual instrument in pointing sinful men and women to Christ. The results had been most encouraging. The people came in their working garb. The work among the children was most successful. To keep up the interest they had the lime-light showing Gospel and Temperance pictures; object lessons were also found to be a source of much attraction and instruction.

MR. MOODY'S QUESTION-DRAWER.

The last hour of the morning session was taken up with the answering by Mr. Moody of various practical questions that had been sent in. The first question, he said, he would himself propound, and try to answer, in case he might forget it:—

How can the mechanics and other working-men who have been alienated from churches and chapels be reached? One of the best things that can be done, in my opinion, in all our cities and large towns, indeed in smaller places, too, is to have a good, permanent Evangelistic Committee. It should be composed of the leading Christian workers of the place, men of character in whom the combined churches have confidence. Let the Committee take frequent counsel together, and when they find a man who is able to reach the different classes of the people, let them invite him to come and evangelise. Let them give him a good backing up from the beginning of the meetings, and stand by him throughout. I hope I shall live to see the day when there will be such a committee in every town and city throughout Christendom.

Should Christians dance? Well, I think if a person has got plenty of Christian work to do he will neither have the time nor the desire for dancing. Christ does not call upon us to give up this or that amusement, He gives us something far better, and these other things go of themselves.

A brewer who has been in the inquiry-room wants to know if he cannot legitimately continue his business? I would say to him: Make it a matter of prayer, and if you think you can go on in your business to the glory of God, go on; if you cannot, give it up. I think it would trouble some men to distil a barrel of whisky and pray God to make it a blessing to their fellow-men; they would get stuck before they were very far on in their prayer.

Would you advise collections in Mission Churches and Halls? Certainly. Men do not like to be treated as paupers. It is a great mistake, I think, to call these buildings "Mission Halls"; why not call them "Churches"? I used to have over the door of our church in Chicago "Illinois Street Mission." A good many of the people said they were not going round there among a lot of paupers. I took down the sign at once and called it a Church. We have not got two kinds of Gospel, one for the high and another for the low. We want to get these men interested in the work, and treat them as men; then they will be much more likely to give of their substance. It is good training for them, and they should be taught to show the fruits of their profession by giving.

Should women be allowed to take a leading place in Home Mission Work? My experience has been that women can get into many homes where men cannot. They are the best workers in every respect. I feel very strongly on this point, because I have seen it. We want to have educated, godly, consecrated women; they can reach all classes, the highest and the lowest. Women can read character better than we men can. They can almost always find some one at home, and a husband will not be so jealous if a godly woman calls at his house as if it were a man. You smile at that remark, but I am talking about facts. I hope to see in every church and chapel well-educated consecrated women doing pastoral work all the while. Ministers have so many demands on their time now-a-days, that very often pastoral work is neglected. A Christian woman could visit the people in the congregation frequently, and report what was being done. She could hold cottage meetings, gathering the mothers together for prayer and conversation; there would be conversions all the while.

How long should Evangelistic meetings last? About an hour; if they are prolonged, you lose most of your inquirers. About after-meetings, let me say that the Benediction should not be pronounced at the close of the first meeting, because people take that as a kind of polite intimation to go home. Then those who conduct the meetings should not say, "If there are any anxious ones present." They should take it for granted. I believe there would be thousands of people in England converted inside of twelve months through the regular church services if the ministers would only have after-meetings. Some say they have tried it, and have failed; but they did not use the right method. It will not do for the minister to say he will be glad to speak with any inquirers in his vestry; it would be pretty hard work for any one to get up and go in there alone in the presence of the whole congregation. Ask all to stay to a prayer-meeting, and you will find that many anxious souls will remain.

How does Mr. Moody prepare his addresses? Well, I do not prepare them as well as I would like to do. I have been more successful in taking up particular subjects than in dealing with single texts. I get so full of a subject, that I go at it and preach as best I can. If a thought occurs to me in connection with a subject that I think will help in a sermon, I note it down at once; when I get home I put it away with that sermon. Sometimes a thought strikes me in the night, and, if I am not too sleepy, I get up and put it down. If I hear a man on the platform say a good thing, I take hold of it and pass it round.

Should Christians travel in tramcars and railways on the Sabbath Day? I do not carry the consciences of other people; but I do not do it myself. I do not like to take away any man's Sabbath from him. If I had a horse and carriage of my own and could let them rest on the Saturday or the Monday, I could use them on the Sabbath with a clear conscience.

How can the elder Sunday-school scholars be retained in our churches? By getting the very best talent you have got in the church to take the class.

How would you further union among ministers of different denominations? Well, if I were to answer some of the questions that have been sent to me, I should break up the union we have here, inside of an hour. There are some Ishmaelites who are all the while trying to disturb the peace of God's people. They bring out their hobbies on all occasions. There are some things that we must agree to differ about. Wherever you meet a man who brings out his hobby on all occasions give him a wide berth. I believe every child of God is bound to keep the peace with his brethren as far as he possibly can.

Are the young converts brought in at a time of special revival as good as those converted in connection with regular church work? My experience is that they are better; let a hundred of them start together, and they will help one another. If some of those who speak against revivals would only examine their Church rolls they would find that the great proportion of their earnest members were brought in at a time of revival. In further referring to this point, and specially to the fruits of the great American Revival, as seen during the Civil War that shortly afterwards followed, Mr. Moody entreated prayer for his country. Large numbers are gathering there, he said, from all parts of the world; the Continental Sabbath is being introduced in many places by the foreign element, and much prayer is needed on behalf of the Christians of America.

What would you advise young converts to read? Let them read the Bible, in the first place. It is a good thing, I believe, for a young convert to take some religious paper. It broadens them out; brings them into sympathy with other Christians, and with different branches of the Lord's work.

HOLY LIVING.

After an interval the afternoon session of the Convention began at three o'clock. The great circus was crammed from end to end. After Mr. Sankey had splendidly sung, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed on us that we should be called the sons of God," an address was given by Rev. Evan Hopkins, of Richmond, on the foregoing topic, from Gal. ii. 20.

If we are going to speak about "Holy Living," he said, we must think about the Holy One—the Lord Himself. There is only one holy life. Jesus Christ did not say, "I am the Vine, and ye are other vines in the same vineyard." No; we are not to be parallel lives. "I am the vine, and ye are the branches"—only one Life flowing through the vine, and through the branches. "Christ liveth in me"—that is the secret of Holy Living.

I am going to speak about the provisions for this life, but first let me point out some of the mistakes that we often make in connection with holy living. There are many who clearly understand God's way of justification who do not so clearly understand God's way of sanctification. They have a sincere, earnest desire to be like Christ. They make constant and vigorous efforts, but oh! how sadly they are disappointed in their walk. Defeat and failure meet them at every turn, because the life they are living is essentially a self life, and not the Christ life. Instead of making Jesus Christ the centre of their life, many are working out from the self life in order that they may make themselves righteous, and bring forth fruit unto God. They are trying to do that which the Lord said no Christian can do—bring forth fruit from himself. The branch cannot bear fruit of itself, or as it is literally, from itself. We have to follow in the footsteps of the Lord Jesus in this respect. He said, "I can do nothing of myself. The Father that dwelleth in Me He doeth the works." He voluntarily took that position of dependence. He emptied Himself and took the place of a servant.

Then mistakes are made as to cross-bearing. We know that there can be no discipleship without cross-bearing. But let us see to it that we are not reversing God's order. What is the denying of self that Christ requires of us? It is the ignoring of self. The only place where we get rid of self is at the Cross of Christ. We are not only to see Him bearing our sins there, but we must see that we are crucified with Him—identifying ourselves with Him in his death, bearing about in the body the dying, the deadness, or the death, of Christ, that the life also of Christ may be manifested in our mortal bodies.

Another mistake is made in reference to conflict. What is our true position in this matter? In reading Eph. vi. never pass by verse 10. Many people think that the conflict begins with the eleventh verse, "Putting on the whole armour of God," &c. But the essential condition to fighting wisely is told us in the tenth verse, "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might." The Lord Jesus Christ has Himself conquered all our enemies—hell, sin, Satan, death, and every enemy that can be named. By faith we must take up that position which He has won for us, before we engage in conflict.

Now as to some of the blessed provisions that God has made for us in our Christian walk. There is, first of all, momentary cleansing. It is my privilege to speak to many young converts, and to them I would especially address myself. You have taken your stand upon the finished work of Christ. But the path opens up before you; there will be temptation, and trial, and conflict. You are privileged to walk with Him who is the light, and to have continual communion with God. But in order to have this continual communion there must be the continual cleansing by the blood. Moment by moment, step by step, you must know that you are under the blood that cleanseth from all sin. That blood not only cleanses us in the sphere of our justification: it covers the whole ground. When we realise that the blood cleanses us continually, the communion is maintained.

Again, there is momentary deliverance. We shall carry about "the flesh" with us to the last. Let it be clearly understood that there is no such thing in this life as sinless perfection. But, if the flesh can never be sanctified into the Spirit, we may walk above it in a path of continuous deliverance from its power. What is the secret of this walk? "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh." In reading these words, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh," let me charge you against one interpretation. Do not look at it as if it meant that the flesh and the Spirit are the "two natures," fighting the one against the other. "Walk in the Spirit"—that is, in the Holy Ghost—"and ye shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh." Which is the stronger of the two? The Holy Ghost. If you are under the power of the Spirit, you shall be delivered from the power and dominion of the flesh.

There is also momentary strength. You cannot live upon the grace of yesterday. Living in entire dependence upon God, the stream of his power is continually flowing into us, meeting the necessities of the moment. So, too, there is momentary guidance. If we are truly living this Christ life we will discover a wondrous change come over our experience. There will be rest instead of worry. How many of us are carrying our cares instead of casting them upon God? There will also be ease instead of strain. There will be victory instead of failure. People say, "Ah! but you do not know my peculiar circumstances." Well, in Romans viii. 37 we have what seems to me the very perfection of adverse circumstances. Did you ever notice what the circumstances were that the Apostle mentions? "Tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, and sword"—seven things, the very perfection of adverse circumstances. Yet he says he is "more than conqueror" over them all. The secret of it was, "Not I, but Christ in me."

There will be gladness instead of gloom. How many gloomy Christians there are in all our churches, and what a sad hindrance they are to the Spirit's work. What a stumbling-block they are to young converts. When there is a full surrender to God there will be a wondrous change even in our very countenances. We talk about getting dying grace, but I call it living and working and overcoming grace. So, too, there will be plenty instead of scarcity. "They shall be like a watered garden, like a spring of water" (Isa. lviii.). A spring overflows; are you overflowing with blessing and with power? If you are, it will soon be seen in its effects upon those around you. You will not be trying to pump up these things; it will be in you "a well of water springing up into eternal life." That is the kind of Christianity we want.

POWER FOR SERVICE.

During the second hour of the afternoon meeting, an address on this subject was given by Rev. Dr. Mackay, of Hull. Paul knew what it was to be weak, he said, and what it was to pray for more power. His great desire was that he might "know Christ, and the power of his Resurrection" (Phil. iii. 10). This Epistle is the epistle of Christian experience—not the experience of Christians; that is a different thing altogether. The word "sin" is never mentioned in it, because there is no sin in Christian experience. There is much sin in the experience of Christians. Christian experience is perfect, because it is like Christ. The word "flesh" is only once used in this Epistle, and that is when the Apostle bids us have no confidence in it. The word "joy," or "rejoice," is found in it eighteen times, because Christian experience is a rejoicing experience. We should never have known where Paul wrote it except for an incidental hint in the first chapter, where he trusts that even his "bonds" may be for the furtherance of the Gospel. Although he wrote this letter in a prison, chained to a Roman soldier, he yet tells these Philippian believers eighteen times to rejoice. The secret of this happiness is to have Christ between us and our circumstances; then we will be perfectly happy. By as much as our circumstances are between us and Christ, to that extent we will be perfectly miserable.

In addressing young converts, let me bring before you three texts—"That I may know Him and the power of his resurrection" (Phil. iii. 10); "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you" (Acts i. 8); "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth" (Rom. i. 16). Here we shall have to look first at the risen Saviour's power, next at the descended Spirit's power, and, lastly, at the authoritative Revelation from God carrying his power with it.

"That I may know Him and the power of his Resurrection." Thank God if you have got as far as the Cross; but you must get a little further. Christ was not only delivered for our offences, but raised again for our justification. I was lately crossing the Atlantic, and as we were entering the Gulf of St. Lawrence we encountered a stiff gale from the north-east. I was rather enjoying it; those that go down to the sea in ships see God's wonders on the deep, and no mistake. A friend of mine on board came upon the deck after the gale had moderated a bit; pointing to a black cloud away to the south-west, he said he feared we were going to get more of it yet. "Oh, no!" I replied, "that cloud has passed us; we have got to the windward of the storm." So it is with us as we stand on the Resurrection side of Christ's grave; we are to the windward of the storm. Death, damnation, judgment, wrath, are all behind us.

Not long ago a man walked into my study at Hull. He stared at me with such a wild look that all sorts of dynamite ideas came at once to my mind, and he gave me quite a scare. He said, "I am lost; I have come a long distance to have a conversation with you." I thought he was mad, besides being lost, as I saw his glaring eyes. "I was converted twelve years ago," he said, "but I have sinned away my day of grace;" then he brought up those texts about the sin against the Holy Ghost and so forth. "Well," I said, "compose yourself a bit, and we will have a talk about it." Then I asked, "Where is Christ?" The man went on to tell me about his having been all round the world, and having done this and that and the other thing. "Where is Christ?" I repeated; "that is the thing I am talking about." "Oh, yes, but I once felt the calm of religion—" "I am not talking about 'the calm of religion;' where is Christ?" "Christ! of course He is in heaven." "Then," I said, "there is one man in heaven, at any rate. It is not a question, therefore, of any man ever getting there, for there is one there already." "Oh, but He was holy, harmless, undefiled, the very God of very God." "Whether had He or you the more sin upon Him?" He didn't see the point of it yet, so I repeated the question, and quoted the passage, "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world." "There is a man—the God-man—hanging there on Calvary's cross, with infinitely more sin on Him than ever you had, and yet He is in heaven. Therefore it is not a question of a man having sin upon him that will absolutely condemn him. It is because you are a great sinner that you want to believe in the Saviour. Christ is in heaven, but he would never have been there if sin had not been put away. 'If Christ be not risen ye are yet in your sins.' Some people do not know the meaning of being in their sins at all. Thank God I am not in my sins, but I am sorry to say that sin is yet in me. In the resurrection of Christ from the dead, we see God's answer to every question about sin, God's receipt in full for all the demands of his justice."

After some further elaboration of this point, Dr. Mackay took up the next division of his subject: "Ye shall receive power when the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto Me, in Jerusalem and in all Judæa and unto the uttermost ends of the earth." We have not yet got that Evangelistic steamship that Mr. Grattan Guinness has sometimes told us about, to ship the workers off in loads to the great mission fields of the world. Think of every third man in the world being a Chinaman; and millions on millions of these have never heard the name of this risen Saviour. Now, when we have this power we are to be witnesses for Him. Let me draw your attention again to the text of which Mr. Hopkins spoke, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit;" as he said, it is the Holy Spirit that is referred to. It is generally supposed that the passage means, the flesh lusteth against the Spirit so that we cannot do the things we would like to do. Nay, it is the Spirit lusteth against the flesh in order that we may not do the evil things we might be inclined to do. The speaker proceeded to illustrate the work of the Spirit in man by a reference to the functions of steam-power in an engine. There may be the appliances there—pistons, connecting-rods, and all the working gear, even the water in the boiler; but unless the fire is introduced, pistons and wheels and everything else are practically useless. So we are dependent on the Holy Spirit for the power which will enable us to be witnesses for God. We cannot lay in a stock of this power; we must get it moment by moment. We must live in the Spirit, and so have power for each day's service. He thanked God that we do not get power to-day for to-morrow's service. If we did, we would use it all up to-day, and there would be none left for to-morrow. Many Christians fret all their life long about to-morrow's troubles; why should they try to cross the bridge before they come to it? God will not lay up a store of grace in his children, but his grace will be sufficient when the need arises; his strength will be perfected in the hour of weakness. As an illustration of the failure that must come from attempting to serve God in the energy of the flesh, Dr. Mackay referred to the life and work of Moses. He thought at first he could serve his nation best after a pugilistic method; and so he began to settle off the Egyptians seriatim. God showed him, however, that he erred from excess of energy, and so He sent him away for forty years' college training in the wilderness, keeping sheep instead of knocking down Egyptians. He had to learn his own weakness, in order that God could use him in the deliverance of his people. So it was with Job. In the twenty-ninth chapter the patriarch was full of himself; after he had been in the Divine college awhile he learned to abhor the very self which he had before been extolling.

Then came the third and last point: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation." This is the weapon God has put into our hands. I saw a book in a shop window to-day, and it was described as 'Moody's Bible'; I thought that would be a very poor thing. The Lord has given us his own Bible, which, thank God, Mr. Moody uses. The Doctor went on to remark that it was an utterly wrong thing to speak of any one as so-and-so's converts; they are nothing of the kind. All that any one of us can do is to proclaim the authoritative word that God will bless. He had heard preaching in which the sharp chisel of the word was guaranteed to glance off every man's conscience, without making the least impression. God has placed this instrument in our hands, and we must use it, whether men will bear or whether they will forbear. Repeated attacks have been made on the Word of God, and many apologies have been offered for it by would-be defenders, but the grand old Ship goes on, sailing away through the seas of criticism as if nothing had touched it, beyond a little spray raised by a passing breeze. He urged young converts, and especially young evangelists, to keep to the good old Gospel, and be sure to get plenty of "sword-exercise," if they would be successful combatants in the Christian warfare. It was not so necessary that they should stand up for the Word of God as that they should stand upon it; then nothing in earth or hell could move them.

THE GOSPEL AND THE MASSES.

So great was the desire to be present at the last meeting of the day that the Circus was crammed to the doors long before half-past seven, the stated hour for commencing. On reaching the building about seven o'clock our reporter found himself, with several local gentlemen of the Press, on the wrong side of the door, without the least hope of getting in by any species of manœuvreing. For the following excellent summary of the proceedings we are indebted to The Liverpool Courier, whose representative was more fortunate:—

The evening's proceedings were the most exciting, and probably the most practical of the Conference. The circus was crowded long before the time announced for the commencement of the proceedings, and for some time hymn after hymn was sung with great heartiness. Sitting immediately behind Mr. Moody was the Right Rev. the Bishop of Liverpool (Dr. Ryle), and surrounding them were ministers of almost all Protestant denominations. The subject set down for discussion was "The Gospel and the Masses." Mr. Moody delivered a short, pithy address on the duty of Christians to consecrate themselves and to consecrate their efforts. He remarked that the Conference was to stir up Christians, and that if it did not do this it had failed. In referring to the efforts which were being made in Liverpool to raise the fallen and to rescue young and destitute children, he urged upon Christians the necessity of assisting in their emigration to Canada. He thought pounds should be pouring in for such an object. The children would be taken to Christian homes, and they might yet sparkle in the Saviour's crown like diamonds.

The Bishop next addressed the meeting. He said he could not refuse Mr. Moody's invitation to speak at the meeting, for he believed him to be a man worthy of all honour. He had not the honour to know to what Church Mr. Moody belonged, and he had no affair with that, but whether he was Episcopalian or Independent, Presbyterian or Baptist, Wesleyan or Methodist, of this he was quite certain—that he was a real good servant of Jesus Christ, and belonged to the Holy Catholic Church, which was made up of all God's saints. He thanked God with all his heart for all the work that he had done by the grace of God the two last times he had been in England. He was not going to believe it was all nonsense, all smoke, all fireworks. He praised God for Mr. Moody's simple declaration of Jesus Christ, and his preaching of the 'truth as it is in Jesus.' He had made much of the Cross, and therefore he believed God had made much of him. The people did not want a new religion, but the old religion unadulterated; and if it was so preached it would have the same power that it had eighteen hundred years ago. He appealed to those present if Mr. Moody had not proved this fact by his great meetings; and he dared infidels or Socialists, or Mr. Bradlaugh, to get the circus filled for weeks by people anxious to hear their opinions. He thanked God for the really catholic spirit with which Mr. Moody had acted. There had been no sectarianism about his preaching, but he had besought his hearers to believe in Christ. He asked the people what use they were going to make of Mr. Moody's visit. He prayed that many might repent and be converted, so that they would bless God for the visit of the American evangelists. So long as Mr. Moody continued to act and preach in the same catholic way, he (his lordship) hoped he would never be ashamed of speaking in his favour.

Mr. Moody then said he was beginning to feel on fire, and asked Mr. Balfour, "What do you want?" Mr. Balfour said he wanted helpers at the Sunday Free Breakfast Mission, and voluntary teachers in the ragged schools. He also stated that the committee connected with Mrs. Birt's Sheltering Homes were anxious to rescue the orphan children of Liverpool, and send them out to Canada. Mr. S. Smith, M.P., had given the committee the use of Clifton Hall, and the estate attached, for eight or ten years, so that it could be utilised for the training of orphan boys, with the view of sending them out to Canada. Plans had been drawn out to make the house suitable to accommodate 100 boys, and it was estimated that the alterations would cost about £1800. Mr. Moody had asked him what he wanted, and he wanted £1800. Mr. J. Houghton had promised to give them the use of the Homes in Byrom-street, and £1,000 was wanted to fit them for the accommodation of 100 girls. Mr. Moody then jumped up, and asked for subscriptions and a collection, and announced that Mr. Balfour had just given £250. Mr. Houghton promised £100, and Mr. Moody said that if they would send ten bright orphan boys out to him he would get them educated for the ministry. That would be his contribution, and he then turned round to various individuals and asked for similar contributions. For several minutes written promises to send boys out to Canada were handed up to Mr. Moody, who announced them as soon as he received them. A special cheer was given on the announcement that the Glasgow delegates had subscribed £50, and this was renewed shortly afterwards when Mr. Moody stated these delegates had agreed to send out four orphan boys from Liverpool. Above twenty promises to send boys out were received, and a liberal collection was also made.

THE FAREWELL MEETING.

As a correspondent surmised in our columns last week, the evangelists were in harness till almost the last hour of their stay on these shores. The final meeting on Friday evening was primarily intended for converts and inquiry-room workers only. To satisfy the marvellously eager desire to be present, it was decided that the general public should be admitted, special provision being first made for accommodating those who professed conversion through this Mission and that of eight years ago. It need scarcely be said that the Circus was full to overflowing an hour or so before the advertised time.

To utilise the time, Mr. Moody called on various friends to say what ought to be done in continuing the work. He proposed that at the close of the meeting a "Mizpah Band" for reclaimed drunkards should be formed, similar to the Glasgow organisation. Mr. Jas. Scott and Mr. Hunter Craig, both of that city, explained the working of the Band, and afterwards assisted the Liverpool friends in launching the new venture. We understand that 100 members were enrolled.

Mr. Drysdale, who has been conducting largely attended Sunday services in the Circus for the last five years, invited the help of those who had been converted at the special meetings, in view of the next winter's campaign. Mr. A. Balfour urged the young converts to attach themselves to the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations respectively. Mrs. Stephen Menzies, addressing her Christian sisters in the audience, spoke of the varied ways in which they hoped to advance the cause of Christ among their townswomen, and called for volunteer helpers. Rev. R. H. Lundie, as representing the ministers of the city, counselled the young disciples to connect themselves with some Christian communion both for purposes of edification and usefulness.

The remarks of these and other friends very profitably filled up the time of waiting. When the meeting proper had begun Mr. Moody said he really thought they ought to make it a thanksgiving service. He proceeded to express the heartfelt gratitude felt by Mr. Sankey and himself for all the Christian kindness and brotherly love that had been shown to them, and the spirit of unity manifested, during their nineteen months' sojourn in England, Scotland, Ireland, and France. He warmly thanked the Liverpool friends for their co-operation—the Press, the choir, the policemen, the officials, the ministers, the committee—in brief, everybody. He made special mention of the services rendered by Mr. Robert Paton, secretary of the London Evangelistic Committee, who had freely, and at the expenditure of much labour, arranged the provincial programme. Mr. Moody urged the young converts to stand by the ministers and help on in every possible way the Lord's work in the city. After he had offered earnest prayer, mingled with thanksgiving, Mr. Sankey very pathetically sang his new hymn, "When the mists have rolled away." Mr. Moody gave a lengthy address to the young converts on "Overcoming Faith," notes of which we must postpone to our next issue. Though the proceedings were protracted till a comparatively late hour, many seemed loth to leave the building that had become hallowed by so many remarkable scenes of blessing and manifestations of Divine power. Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey quietly took their departure before the gathering was formally dismissed, in order to avoid the multitudinous hand-shakings and farewells that would have been imposed upon them.

Next forenoon the evangelists were accompanied to the Alaska by a large number of friends, who were accommodated in a special tender. Though the rain fell with a steady persistence, enough to damp any ordinary type of enthusiasm, a goodly crowd was gathered on the landing-stage to witness the departure, and to wave their last good-byes to our American brethren, who have found so warm and lasting a place in the heart of Christian England. If the most fervent prayers and heartiest good wishes could waft them, and their dear ones who accompanied them, safely across the broad ocean, "the greyhound of the Atlantic" will this time outstrip all her former feats of speedy sailing. And while thousands of grateful hearts follow them to their native land, as many more look forward with expectation and hope to their return six months hence, if it please the Lord to bring them back again in the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel which it is their delight to proclaim.

A SUPPER TO OMNIBUS MEN.

THROUGH the liberality of Mrs. Potter, a shareholder in the London General Omnibus Co., a supper was given last Thursday night, at the Coffee Palace, Notting Hill Gate, to over 100 men in the employ of the Omnibus Co. A bountiful repast was served shortly after 11 o'clock; and when full justice had been done to the creature comforts provided, the tables were cleared and a pleasant hour soon passed away.

The chair was occupied by the Rev. Dr. Thornton, who welcomed the men in the name of Mrs. Potter, who was unavoidably absent. Short addresses were given by Mr. Spottiswoode, Rev. T. S. Hutchinson, Secretary of the London City Mission; Admiral Macdonald, Dr. Small, and Mr. W. Smith, the City Missionary to omnibus men. Mr. Hutchinson expressed the pleasure it gave him to be present that night. He had seen some of the men before, when he visited some of the yards in company with Mr. Smith. He was sure Mr. Smith had their happiness at heart, promoting temperance and, above all, true religion. He counselled them to carry their religion with them in their every-day life; never mind the little trials it may subject them to, ask God for the help to sustain them. Mr. Small and Mr. Smith also addressed the men.

WALTER J. KIBION.

MY PRAYER.

I HEARD the voice of Jesus in the night,
Stealing upon my soul in music sweet—
Music that put all anxious thoughts to flight,
And brought me trusting to the Master's feet.

He bade me "Ask"—and I, what should I say?
I thought of loved ones still upon the road
Which leads to death, unconscious of the way,
And others, conscious, sinking 'neath their load.

I thought of sin, and misery, and death—
A thousand ills came trooping on the night,
And puzzled me, and stayed my fleeting breath
With questionings and doubts o'er Wrong and Right.

I thought of Infidelity and Truth,
And longed to stamp out Error with the lie,
And yearned to fix the thoughtless heart of Youth
On solid joys—His gifts, that never die.

The music of his voice awoke again—
"O Lord," I cried, "What shall I ask of Thee?
So much of doubt and darkness, strife and pain
Is round me, to perplex and sadden me.

I love Thee, and I long to bear Thy name
Into the lists, where combat rages high,
And win, through Thee, a conqueror's lasting fame,
To cheer the weak when foes and fears are nigh."

I paused—"O foolish heart!" the whisper came,
"To waste thy longings in a vain despair.
Am I not everlastingly the same?
Canst thou not watch and wait in patient prayer?"

Rebuked, I looked into my inner heart,
Vain-glorious Self was seated on its throne,
Forgetful of the faithful servant's part,
To learn of Christ, the Master-hand, alone.

I prayed, "O Saviour-Christ my Teacher be,
And make me humble, patient, true alway!
'Tis Thine to use me as Thou best shalt see,
'Tis mine, in Thee, to watch, to wait, to pray."

Thus watching, waiting, praying in his love—
I serve my Lord, who bids his children "Ask"—
For prayer can bring all blessings from above,
And mountains sink, if faith but crown the task.

MARGARET B. GEEDS.

THE MISSION IN LEEDS.

AN interesting communication, giving details of the close of the special meetings here under Mr. J. M. Scroggie, by some misadventure did not reach us in time for our last issue. The writer says:—

"In all, some 1800 persons have been personally and separately conversed with by a staff of Christian workers, Mr. Scroggie and Mr. Vance assisting. All of these testify to having found a personal Saviour. The prayers and blessings of thousands of Christian hearts will follow Mr. Scroggie; his kindly, genial manner with both workers and inquirers, has won for him golden opinions.

"A choir of 1000 voices, gathered mainly from the various churches of the town, have rendered splendid service to the Mission. Not by any means least has been the influence upon these vast gatherings of Mr. Vance's renderings of some of the choicest solos in Mr. Sankey's collection. Although with us but four nights, too much cannot be said of Mr. Vance's appreciative setting forth of the Gospel in hallowed song. In addition to a finely cultured taste, he possesses a rich tenor voice. He literally enchains the audience."

We understand that Mr. Vance, who now fills a business position in Belfast, has resolved to relinquish it in order to join Mr. J. M. Scroggie in Evangelistic work.

SWANLEY ORPHAN HOMES.—Mrs. A. O. Charles has published an earnest appeal to 900 mothers of England, each to contribute £1 towards the erection of a "Mothers' House" at the New Orphan Homes at Swanley, Kent, now in course of erection. This effort is for orphans, as distinguished from homeless boys, and will be connected with the work at Farningham. We hope the mothers of England will readily respond. Communcations may be addressed to Mr. or Mrs. A. O. Charles, 19, Alwyne-square, Canonbury, N.

Notes and Comments.

IT is said that the preparations being made by the Malagasies for war are very great, more than 15,000 assegais and other weapons being made daily in Tamatave. The spirit of opposition to foreign aggression upon their territory is exceedingly strong and determined. We may still hope, and fervently pray, that so disastrous a war as has been so long threatening may even yet be averted.

Dr. Temple, the Bishop of Exeter, has been elected Bampton Lecturer for the ensuing year. This is a post of great influence in relation to the direction of religious thought, and, let us hope, will be turned to good service in the hands of its present occupant in the cause of truth. It has often done so in the past, as in the case of Canon Liddon's famous lectures on the Divinity of Christ.

The Annual Festival Dinner of the Field-lane Ragged Schools and Refuges was held on Wednesday last. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught presided, and stated that at this time no fewer than 2120 were receiving benefit from this institution in connection with its various agencies. During the past year 484 men and women had been afforded shelter and accommodation in the night refuges, and 216 had been assisted in getting employment, or had been otherwise provided for. The annual expenditure was £7000, and the reliable income only £4000.

A correspondent sojourning on the Continent writes: "Unitarians are spreading their literature very industriously. On the tables of salons in hotels they are to be found, and even to the reading-rooms of health-resorts abroad their journals are regularly sent. Generally on pointing them out to the proprietor, and objecting to them as false, they will be destroyed or returned. Christian travellers should be on the watch, and bring all such literature to the notice of principals, and request its removal."

It appears that the name of God is becoming so offensive to French notions of what is desirable for society in the present day, that it is to be expurgated as soon as possible from all school books. This is secular education with a vengeance, but there are those in our own land who would gladly adopt the same course. The abandonment of the Divine right to be acknowledged and to have his supremacy asserted, in one sphere, leads to the surrender of it in other spheres. Concessions to infidel opinion create a dangerous sliding scale, and the descent is more easy and rapid than many perceive.

A paragraph has appeared in the papers to the effect that the Baptist denomination have taken steps to induce every member of their body to renounce all connection with the spirit trade. Surely every denomination should hasten to follow this grand example. We should not, however, show respect of persons, but deal equally with the great brewers and distillers. Those who own public-houses are as blameworthy as those who keep them. And yet we see these over-rich producers actually patronising religion. It is time the Churches of God should mark their sense of the iniquity of all concerned in the drink traffic, and refuse to accept their patronage.

A native Bible-woman thus reports a Hindoo astrologer's testimony to the power of Christianity: "A Sudra, a person of caste, called me to see a woman who was suffering great pain. According to his request, I went and saw the patient, who was suffering very much. An astrologer was there, trying his utmost with magical performances to give relief; but on seeing me he said, 'As this Christian woman has come, my attempts to relieve will do no good.' The people of the house asked him, 'Why can you do no good with the Christian woman in the house?' He replied, 'If Christians will come wherever we are our efforts will be useless.' So saying he left the house, and the poor woman soon after was relieved." Shall we not send more Christian men and women thus to oppose the powers of darkness?

The Temperance cause continues to advance with very rapid strides. Its influence is extending in the very highest circles of the land. A large and influential gathering assembled at Stafford House the other day, in response to an invitation from the Duchess of Sutherland, who has herself donned the Blue Ribbon. Lord Mount-Temple presided on the occasion, and addresses were delivered by the Revs. Canon Wilberforce and John Hewett. Among those present were the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Marchioness of Ailsa, Sir D. and Lady Baird, Sir Richard Temple, Lady Mount-Temple, Lord Radstock, Lady Wolseley, and others. The example of such an assemblage of members of the aristocratic class joining other classes of society in one common effort to raise the nation from the burden of intemperance and its attendant evils, cannot fail to be highly beneficial in its influence and results.

How needful it is that the admonition of the Apostle should be remembered by Christians in these days: "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men, for kings, and for all in authority." All, that is, who are in "eminent place," as the marginal reading is given. We need to pray that their minds may be turned to a consideration of questions requiring their action, as also that they may be disposed to adopt a right course in relation to them. "It is the honour of kings to search out a matter;" and we may remember that "The king's heart is in the hands of the Lord, as the rivers of water; He turneth it whithersoever He will." It was in answer to prayer that the heart of Ahasuerus was turned to the Jews in their time of distress, and also that "all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king helped them."

Many of the Lord's people have much yet to learn as to the place and power of prayer in reference to all that transpires in this world of sin and abounding sorrow. Some have very limited ideas on the matter, and draw lines of distinction between the material and the spiritual, which sadly restrict their freedom and boldness at the throne of grace. God has not resigned his right to control and govern men in any sphere. The usurper's power is great, as the "prince and god of this world." He has vast sway over the affairs of men, but nevertheless "The Lord reigneth," and interposes his strong arm as and when He pleases. The power of prayer is still mighty, and should be far more vigorously brought to bear upon national evils, whether pertaining to our own or other parts of the world.

Those who are troubled as to the lawfulness or otherwise of this or that pleasure, and as to their duty in reference to doubtful pursuits, will find the following rule laid down by that eminent woman, the mother of the Wesleys, worth reflection and personal adoption:—

> Whatever weakens your reason; whatever impairs the tenderness of your conscience; whatever obscures your sense of God; whatever increases the strength and authority of your body over your mind—that thing to you is wrong, however innocent it may be in itself.

In giving to the Lord of our substance, it is of utmost importance that we offer willingly and of our best. It was a charge brought against Israel in Malachi's day: "Ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: should I accept this of your hand, saith the Lord?" There are many ways in which we may prove the fulness or otherwise of our consecration to God in connection with giving for his cause, not only in gifts of money, but in acts of service and of kindness to others. Rarely does giving reach the point of real sacrifice or self-denial. Too often that which is little cared for is given, rather than that which self desires to retain. Let us remember to give our best unto the Lord; even then we fall far short of his worth and of our indebtedness. In showing kindness to the poor of his flock, we do well to act upon this principle, seeing Him in them. It is not patronage or bare charity they want, but the brotherly kindliness and Christ-like compassion and sympathy He loved to show.

At a Church Missionary Meeting, recently held at St. Michael's Church, Bournemouth, the Rev. W. T. Storrs, B.D. (Vicar of Sandown, and many years a missionary in India), narrated a number of very interesting facts with reference to his work amongst the Santhals. He described the work from its commencement, and mentioned that on May 15, 1864—which was a red-letter day in Santhally—he baptized the first three native Christians. He had no font, for there was no church then, and even if there had been they would not have had a font, for the rule of the Church was immersion, and they were getting in all their churches in India regular baptisteries, in which the converts could be properly immersed, so that a person might be buried in baptism, as a sign of being buried with Christ.

Referring the other day to Lord Wolseley's official attendance at the procession of the Mecca Carpet, and the parade of British troops in honour of it, Mr. R. N. Fowler, M.P., made the following assertions. They are capable of a wider application than that he intends, and it would be to our credit as a nation if all our action in foreign lands was based upon them. He says:—

> I believe that, as a Christian nation, we should maintain our principles, and not allow it to be supposed that we are indifferent to the truths we profess. I believe further, that we do not really gain the confidence of our subjects of other creeds by allowing it to be supposed that we are less attached to our religious tenets than they are to theirs.

Compromise in religious matters, and surrender of loyalty to conscience and truth, ought never to be resorted to under any circumstances; when they are, the effect can only be disastrous to the cause of righteousness and to the claims of God.

The extract given on a preceding page from Lady Hope's new book, raises a most important and pressing question; the sooner it receives the earnest consideration of Christian reformers and philanthropists the better. We are strenuously agitating for laws that will empower us to close up the dram-shops, those seed-plots of evil in all its foul and varied forms. We trust and believe the agitation will never cease till the cause of it is removed. But when we have gained our point, what shall we have to offer the working classes in lieu of the warmth and good fellowship, such as it is, of the public-house? What have we to offer them now, when, as it may fairly be hoped, many are anxious to find some easy way of escape from oft-recurring temptation?

Of course the abolition of drinking dens would not only remove a powerful rival to the working man's home, but would enable him to increase its comfort and attractiveness. But if the rich man, with all the luxuries of life at command, craves for the companionship of his fellows at the club, can we expect the exhibition of less gregarious instinct in the "labouring man"? We must take him as we find him, not as we think he ought to be. Where, then, we repeat, is the adequate substitute for the place of temptation and ruin that we are striving to disestablish? Are there any Christian capitalists who will accept the challenge of Lady Hope?

Lord Aberdare, Mr. Forster, M.P., and others are exerting their influence in promoting the establishment of self-supporting schools for boys, on the same principle as those which are proving so eminently successful in connection with the Girls' Public Day School Company. The need of schools of this class for boys is felt by large numbers of the inhabitants of metropolitan districts and leading provincial towns, and their establishment cannot fail to be a great boon, or to be attended with speedy success. The company formed to initiate them, we are glad to know, does not propose to make the education of a secular character, but, as Mr. Forster puts it, will "teach the boys a knowledge of the great facts of Christianity without instilling into them feelings of a purely denominational character."

The Bishop of Gibraltar has refused to sanction the erection of an English Church at Monaco, on the ground that its effect would be to give an appearance of respectability to the place which would tend to draw English families to this nest of temptation and vice, and so by exposing them to its dangers, rather hinder godliness than promote it. The English chaplain at Monaco, the Rev. W. Wright, M.A., has written to The Times, advocating strongly the other side of the question. He says, with not a little show of reason and force, "If Monaco is a very wicked place, the greater the need, one would imagine, to provide moral deterrents to neutralise the evil." It seems scarcely in accordance with the spirit of the Gospel that a place should be left destitute of religious influence on the ground of its wickedness and vice. A Church with evangelical agencies, and sustained with Christian faith and fervour, ought to be a match for the devil even in his principal strongholds. Supposing the testimony to be clear and strong, even in Monaco, the Gospel would prove itself the power of God. But, as the Bishop puts it, the question involves nice distinctions, and somewhat complicated points of consideration.

It is now suggested that the letters sent to the Newcastle Chronicle, headed "The Triumph of Anti-Christ," upon which we commented in a recent issue, were written in the spirit of satire and sarcasm, rather than as expressions of the real sentiments of the Author. The Editor says of them in a note appended to the last of the series:—

> They appeared to us to be, and as such we printed them, a vigorous but ironical exposition of arguments and facts on a subject that is largely occupying the public mind, and upon which political feeling, in the opinion of the author, is leading many well-meaning persons to forget the consequences to which their policy inevitably tends. Satire is sometimes so subtle that it is taken for reality.

It matters comparatively little whether they were satirical or otherwise; they expressed truly a state of things which has become awfully real, and which, like a leprosy, is spreading among all classes of society.

The decadence of preaching has furnished a theme for correspondence in the columns of The Record the last week or two. A clergyman, writing from Ipswich, makes some good suggestions as to the cause for this, so far as it may be supposed to exist. He puts in the forefront the statement that the laity do not pray for their clergy, as also that they do not listen intelligently and earnestly to their utterances, but discourage efforts to preach lucidly and with the purpose of teaching, by showing decided preference for short sermons, too short to admit of fairly handling important themes. Pulpits, or rather boxes, and robes too tightly-fitting to admit of action, are also spoken of as hindrances to power in preaching. Read sermons come in for wholesome condemnation, while too long continuance on the part of a preacher in one sphere is also declared to be opposed to efficiency.

The fault, doubtless, does not all lie at the preacher's door. Hearers need earnestness and spiritual purpose as well as preachers. But after making fullest allowance for external considerations of every kind, it still remains true, that if a preacher is "full of power, as by the Spirit of the Lord," hearers are as it were compelled to attend, and, as of old, are constrained to admit the Gospel to be "the power of God unto salvation." The Apostles and first preachers of Christ had few advantages such as in our day are regarded as essential to success. Spite of all, however, they succeeded in turning the world upside down, and in compelling widespread regard to their message.

The foundation-stone of the new premises for Carrubber's Close Mission, in High-street, Edinburgh, was laid by Mr. D. L. Moody, on Tuesday week in presence of a vast concourse of people. A large number of leading ministers and laymen of all denominations were present, among whom were the Revs. Dr. H. Bonar, Dr. A. Thompson, Dr. Wallace, and many more well known in the various circles of Christian society. The site of the new buildings is immediately west of John Knox's house, and has a frontage to the High-street of nearly sixty feet. After prayer by Dr. Bonar, Dr. Thompson gave a brief history of the Mission, which he said had three features: first, it acted upon the principle that as soon as a man became a Christian he had to exert himself to get others converted; secondly, all the labour of its members was gratuitous; and, thirdly, it did not seek to make churches, but converts. He questioned if there was a single congregation in Edinburgh with a particle of spiritual life that had not received an accession to its membership from this Mission. Mr. Moody then laid the stone, while the audience sang "Rock of Ages," and afterwards engaged in prayer. He also gave as a motto for the institution, Isaiah xxvii. 3. £11,000 has been already collected toward the cost of the building, which it is hoped will be opened by Mr. Moody on his return to Britain next winter.

We are glad to announce a cheap edition of Rev. W. Haslam's YET NOT I; OR, MORE YEARS OF MY MINISTRY. Mr. Haslam is also issuing a special, cheap edition of FROM DEATH INTO LIFE. This latter edition will be of advantage to those who are circulating the book gratuitously.

We cannot but regret that with regard to the measure before Parliament under the name of the Affirmation Bill, we are opposed to Mr. Gladstone and on the side of a speaker who could follow the Premier's magnificent speech on Thursday night with the contemptible vulgarity of charging the Government with "an electioneering job of the lowest and basest character." Mr. Gladstone's speech was full of noble sentiment. We honour his sincerity in thinking that he is doing justice under difficult circumstances; and we thank him for these golden words: "The measure of the difficulty is the measure of the duty and the honour."

We are, therefore, all the more grieved that it is a statesman so conscientious and so noble who is so mistakenly using his mighty influence to promote this God dishonouring legislation. It is not a question of Affirmation instead of Oath, but of England avowing the principle that although "power belongeth unto God," men who deny God are competent to exercise the power of government; and that although the nation acknowledges that "the powers that be are ordained of God," she will ordain as powers men who deny God and blaspheme his name. England is, we believe, on the edge of a fatal precipice; and the numerous petitions prove this to be the conviction of a vast proportion of the nation. It is, at least, a most important step, and ought not to be taken until the country has deliberately made up its mind to do it. The glorious answer to prayer in relation to the Contagious Diseases Acts may well encourage us to cry mightily to God to deliver us from our perilous position.

The Rev. Dr. Trowbridge, of Aintab, President of the Central Turkey College, and well known to many in this country as a distinguished member of the American Mission Staff in Asia Minor, has arrived in London on a visit for health's sake. He will give a short address at the meeting of the Turkish Missions' Aid Society in Exeter Hall tomorrow afternoon, and may be expected to throw some light on the Armenian Question, as well as to give fresh information as to the success of the Gospel in Bible lands. The new number of the Star in the East, the organ of the above Society, contains some interesting facts from several parts of that great field.

ST. GILES' MISSION.—On Tuesday evening, April 24, the anniversary meeting of the St. Giles' Christian Mission Sunday Schools was held in the commodious Mission Chapel, Little Wild-street, and was presided over by Mr. Sheriff Savory. The meeting was a large and enthusiastic one. It was stated that more than a thousand of the children of St. Giles' were in regular weekly attendance at the three schools.

For the Young.

A TROPHY OF THE SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

WE read from time to time in The Christian short accounts of the various works carried on by those connected with the "Children's Special Service Mission," the very mention of which causes a joyous light to sparkle on many youthful faces.

In our daily reading, a few weeks ago, the text was, "Let us search and try our ways;" a grand text for a birthday. It was just on that day, five years before, that the Lord first revealed Himself as a God of Love to the heart of a young girl who for several years had been wearily uttering the cry, "What must I do to be saved?" Services for the young were being held in the town by one well known to the friends of the Mission, and thither the Lord led that young girl, unaccustomed as she was to anything like "going to church on a week-day." Entering the hall, merely to escape the snow, and having nothing to do for an hour between one class and another, the words of the well-known hymn, "Only trust Him," sounded with a strange solemnity. How distinctly all the events of that afternoon are recalled by the writer—the fast-falling snow, the darkened hall, the sweet singing, and, above all, the sense of the Divine presence.

A weary week followed—sad, deep, and sleepless nights—until at length light broke in that troubled heart, and there was joy in the presence of the angels over another sinner returning unto God. As the writer calls to remembrance the days that are past, and considers the way by which the Lord has led her, most lovingly and earnestly would she beg young brothers and sisters to give their hearts now to the Lord. As one of themselves, she can truly say, the young Christian's life is indeed a happy one. How gladly then are our daily tasks performed, compared with what they were when we did not realise that a loving Friend was watching our every action. As life is but beginning with some of us, shall not we, as Christian boys and girls, determine to lay our bodies, souls, and spirits on the altar, and consecrate ourselves to the Lord, bravely fighting against the evil within us, and earnestly trying, by loving words of sympathy and prayer, to lead those without to surrender to the Great King?

May we, who have been brought into the fold through the instrumentality of the "Children's Special Service Mission," become, indeed, a praying band, asking daily that the hearts of the dear workers may be encouraged and cheered, and that we young people may be fitted and prepared for taking the places in later years of those whose labours shall have ended. M. W.

THEATRICAL MISSION.—The Committee of this Mission on Thursday evening held a social meeting in their reading-rooms, King-street, Covent-garden, of two distinct companies of ballet girls who are very shortly to leave London on a tour through some of the Continental cities. In view of the hardships and dangers recently proved to exist for such on the Continent, it was thought wise to enrol these girls as members of the society, so that wherever they may be, some of its lady associates may be able to befriend them. Tea was followed by a very suitable address, with some sacred solos kindly rendered by lady friends. This Mission has recently opened a similar institute for boys and youths. Some 300 or more professionals are reached weekly by the varied agencies at work in connection with the Mission. The Secretary is Mr. Courthope E. Todd, 21, King-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

NOTES FROM THE AUSTRALIAN BUSH.

(Concluded from our last.)

MORE ABOUT "JOHN THE SEER."

OF course, many people don't understand John. They can't, because they don't know his relationship to God. I almost laugh again as I fancy I see him coming down to me from the hut, with a copy of The Christian in his hand. I had lent him the copies with the accounts of the Mildmay Conference. I specially pointed out Dr. Mackay's address, as I had much enjoyed it. He read it over and over again; but on first perusal he came to me, laughing till the tears rolled down his brown cheeks, and saying Aha! Dr. Mackay's right in; he's in the right place; he must know all about it, or he couldn't speak like this, for he says, 'The world doesn't understand us.' Ha! ha! they think we're mad, oh, dear, dear!"

John's special book in the Bible is Isaiah, and one of his favourite passages is ch. lix. 15, margin, "is accounted mad," so he appreciated Dr. Mackay's remark most thoroughly. I wish we were all more like John, and accounted mad by the world. Many think him clean gone. He may do things that some would count mad, but the man of faith is the man of courage.

One day a young man jumped on a horse to run in some others from a paddock. The animal was fresh, and after jumping about a bit, landed the young fellow far ahead and gave him such a fall that he did not recover from the effects of it for weeks. As soon as John was informed of the accident, he ran, along with others, assisted the lad up, and seeing he was in safe keeping, mounted the horse and rode round, bringing in the others. Few young men would have dared to do the same.

One morning John came to me, and said he had got his Master's orders to go off; he didn't know where he would eventually be sent, but he was told where to camp for awhile, and that was eighteen miles away. He was to go in a week. I was sorry to hear it, but didn't try to dissuade him. He was full of the Spirit, and as happy as ever, and asked me for a slip (No. 1) with the hymn, "Happy, ever happy," some of which friends at home had kindly forwarded. In a few days John was away. In the morning, after an early breakfast, he said, "Now then, a word of prayer," and down we went, in the same business-like way as at the "Refuge" in old times, and John prayed one of his warm, hearty, earnest prayers. He specially prayed the Lord to deliver us from wild dogs among the sheep. This is a prayer that many of the readers of The Christian have united in, and one friend wrote me saying, "You see if these wild dogs don't all disappear." Well, to God's glory, I can say that for several months we have scarcely had any trouble from them, and I do trust they may soon be entirely destroyed. When John was mounted my heart was too full to speak, but, grasping my hand, he said, "Keep looking up;" and, as he rode off, his last words were, "Praise the Lord."

I have read a good deal about the secret of power; I have seen it exemplified in the case of this prophet John. The secret was Psalm v. 3. John was up at four in the summer mornings, and five in winter. His first hour or more was spent in communion by prayer and through the Word. By day God's Word was his constant meditation. His sleep was unbroken, so that he rose early and began the day well. His face shone for the Master; his conversation was to edification, and his actions such as to bring glory to God. He was most industrious, and could do almost anything, from making fancy bread to pick and shovel work. He could have been earning two or three times the wage I could offer, but when I mentioned what I could afford, he said, "I've nothing to do with that, the Lord sent me here, and I must stop."

Since he left me I have seen him several times. One day when I met him in a township, he said, "I saw you riding in this morning." I replied, "You must have made a mistake, for I didn't pass your camp." He replied, "It was by the Spirit, and I saw you at the top of the creek, by the end of the wire fence, and I thought Mr. H——— was with you." I had passed that spot, though I might have come several other ways, and Mr. H——— had just left me. John is a seer, and let people count him mad if they like; it does any Christian's heart good to spend an hour in his company. I could relate many things about him, but your space would not allow more at present. Enough to show what God hath wrought in a man by the power of his Spirit, simply through the teaching of his own Word, with little or no help from human lips. Let us say with David of old, "My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from Him" (Ps. lxii. 5).

Since I began writing the above on "The Prophet John," I have heard from a Wesleyan minister of a somewhat similar case in Queensland, of a man who went out without a penny in his possession to preach to the people in the interior. He walked, carrying tracts and Bibles with him. After accomplishing a good work, the Lord sent him back in a waggonette and three horses, people having been moved to help him, and he travelled thousands of miles, constantly getting supplies of books, tracts, &c., and preaching as he went. Since then he has been trying to reach the natives of a wild island in the ocean, north of Australia.

I have added J.P. to my name at the end of this letter, as some friends may be glad to know that I have been so far honoured in this out-of-the-way place. It gives me further opportunities of doing good. D. M. Logan, J.P.

A CHRISTIAN CHIEF IN FIJI.

SIR,—As your valuable paper, with its short notices of the moral condition of various parts of the world and its stirring descriptions of mighty spiritual workings in England, comes to me regularly and always interests and blesses me, I send you in return a few lines giving a short account of the state of things in this country and of God's work.

He has taken away from us during the present month the great Chief Thakombau, whose name is so well known to those who know anything at all of Fiji. As the conversion of Paul has often been used for one of the great evidences of Christianity, so in our smaller part of Christendom, Fiji, the change in Thakombau which the Gospel wrought, has been a powerful argument for the divine nature of the Gospel preached in Polynesia. A fierce, imperious, haughty, unbending, barbarian prince, licentious in morals, merciless and cruel, he became a professing Christian. He was, after a time, married, and admitted, with his consort, into membership with the Church by baptism, and lived there, after a decent, moral life, marked too by most regular attendance on all the means of grace, by a habit of Bible-reading, by heart devotion, and consistent effort on behalf of Christianity.

He died at Bau on February 1, at the age of threescore years and ten. Rev. F. Langham, his pastor, and a native minister, were with him as he passed away. The Chief asked them to pray with him. Being asked "if he were trusting alone in Jesus the Saviour, who never left us in sickness or in health," he answered heartily, "Jo" (Yes). He died quite peacefully. The churches were draped in mourning. The Fiji Times appeared with deep black edgings to its columns, and a general feeling of loss exists throughout the country.

In a future letter I hope to say something of the moral and religious state of the people of our own race in Fiji.—Yours truly,

Arthur J. Webb.

DEATH.—At St. Leonard's-on-Sea, on April 24, aged 58 years, Samuel Michael Haughton (late of Southboro', Kent), author of "A Saviour for You," "Heaven: and How to get There," "Faith," &c. &c. He passed away in great peace, almost his last words having reference to the Saviour's promise, "I will give you rest."

CONFERENCE AT SOUTHSEA.

[By a Correspondent.]

THE second Southsea Conference was held on April 11 to 13. As we look back to the happy time we can only thank and praise the Lord for his great goodness. The weather was all that could be desired. The friends who had promised to speak on the subjects proposed for consideration were all present. "Not I, but Christ," was the key-note of every address. Christ, and not experience, was put in the foreground throughout. Although the meetings were composed of Christians belonging to various sections of the Christian Church, there was no jarring; from first to last, the unity of the spirit was very manifest.

The first of the Conference meetings took place in St. Simon's Schoolroom. Rev. J. B. Figgis, of Brighton, spoke on "A Manifestation: 'God is love.'" Very sweetly did he dwell upon these wonderful words, glancing at the fact, the proof, and the effects. In answer to the question, How does God love? he showed from Scripture that God loves as a Father, mother, shepherd, friend, brother, bridegroom, and, lastly, as He loveth Himself. Before concluding a most interesting address he pointed out that the worst thing we can do to love is to doubt it. It should be believed and obeyed. Captain Baring followed with some weighty words on the proofs of love.

After dinner Mr. Fegan, of the Boys' Home, Southwark, spoke of the terrible condition of the masses of London underneath the surface. Mrs. Urmston followed with a brief account of Gospel Temperance work, in which she has taken so large a part.

In the afternoon Rev. Hubert Brooke, of Liverpool, gave a most interesting Bible reading, in which he pointed out the characteristics of the books of the New Testament, and suggested that the very order of the books was designed to correspond with the growing experience of the Lord's people.

Mr. Brooke also spoke at the evening meeting on the subject of the day. He first pointed out how Christ is the manifestation of the love of God, and proceeded to notice progressive manifestations from the following passages in the Gospel according to John i. 29—31; ii. 11; xxi. 1, 14; xiv. 20—23. He urged believers not to rest satisfied with the earliest of these, but to desire also the latest and fullest which is vouchsafed to those who are walking obediently.

Mr. H. F. Bowker followed, illustrating from the Book of Joshua the secret of success and victory in the Christian course.

On Thursday the subject was "A Message: 'God is light.'" It was opened by Rev. J. Luce, of Gloucester, who showed the Christian's calling to be a life of fellowship with God. God is light, and to have fellowship with Him we must be like Him, and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.

Mr. Bowker followed, presenting Christ, the Light, as the Christian's example. Then came some earnest words from Rev. J. Genders, Baptist minister, and Captain Baring.

After dinner, Mr. Bowker and Mr. Gawin Kirkham, secretary of the Open-air Mission, gave most deeply interesting particulars of Christian work amongst the masses. In the afternoon a Bible-reading on four "Fear nots" in the Book of Joshua was conducted by Rev. J. J. Luce. He drew an important distinction between life in the wilderness and life in Canaan. The former is not to be followed, yet too often Christians get no further. The life in Canaan after Israel crossed the Jordan is the type of what the life of a Christian ought to be.

Rev. H. Brooke then dwelt upon the Christian's responsibility to shine (Matt. v. 14). From Zech. iv. 1—6 he pointed out that Christ is the light, and a Christian the lamp (Philipp. ii. 16, 16). The nearer to God, the higher up, the further the Christian will shine. A Christian who does not shine is like a lamp-post on which the lamp is not lit. It is not only useless, but a dangerous stumbling-block in the way of others. But the Christian is only a wick. All the power for shining comes from the oil which is everywhere typical of the Holy Ghost. Why, then, do we not always shine? (1) If the wick does not run right into the oil there is only smoke, not light. To shine brightly we must "abide in Christ." (2) If the wick is not kept trimmed the light soon gets dim. The snuff thus formed is a picture of the "little sins," as they are called, which hinder many a Christian from shining brightly for his Master. Like the snuffers to the lamp-stand in the Tabernacle, so is confession to the Christian. (3) If there is a knot in the wick the oil cannot get through. Perhaps some secret sin known only to the Lord and ourselves may keep us from shining. Ask the great High Priest to undo it, to remove the hidden evils that his light may be seen in us and shine forth from us.

Rev. E. N. Thwaites, of Salisbury, then spoke of light (1) as the purest of all things; it cannot be defiled. (2) As free to all. (3) As bright. (4) As revealing. And enforced the duty of the Christian to let his light shine, not to make it shine. Capt. Baring dwelt, in conclusion, on our responsibilities as hearers of the word.

On Friday morning the Lord's Supper was observed in St. Simon's Church, and a very precious season it was. An address was given by Rev. Hubert Brooke which made a deep impression on those who were privileged to listen to it. He regarded the Passover as a type of the Lord's Supper, and he spoke of the first three passovers as bringing the Lord Jesus Christ before us in three different aspects in relation to his people.

The subject of the third day was "A Memorial: 'God is faithful.'" Rev. Graham Thwaites, of Newport, opened out the passages which speak especially of what God is faithful to do. He was followed by Rev. J. J. Luce, who spoke on the Song of Solomon viii. 5, 6, 7. Lord Radstock illustrated the faithfulness of God from Ruth iii. 18, and Captain Baring pointed out three directions which the faithfulness of God takes: (1) to Himself as a covenant-keeping God; (2) to his dear Son; and (3) to his believing people.

After dinner, the Rev. Evan Hopkins described the operations of the Church Army at Richmond. In the afternoon, Rev. Hubert Brooke gave a Bible-reading on 2 Kings ii. 1—14, bringing out the lessons connected with Gilgal, Bethel, Jericho, and Jordan.

At the evening meeting, Rev. Evan Hopkins gave a very precious address from the words, "Yet not I, but Christ," showing that to be successful and victorious Christians we must cease to live a self-life, and must live a Christ-life, a life of continual dependence on the ever-present Son of God. Rev. Hubert Brooke then asked, "What shall we do with all we have heard?" and answered the question from Nehemiah xi. 24.

A very blessed Conference was brought to a close by Lord Radstock, first of all speaking of the faithfulness of God to his people, and then solemnly pressing the immediate acceptance of Christ upon the unsaved. The following morning a praise-meeting was held, when many bore grateful, joyous testimony to the help the Conference had been made to them.

THE GOSPEL TENT MISSION was established in 1875 to send the glad tidings into our neglected villages. During the seasons of 1875-6 George Heath, now of Hildenborough, Kent, took the tent 500 miles, and had during the tours 60,000 attendances, with much blessing. Year after year the good work has been carried on. The same evangelist will take it this year. The treasurer is Mr. Thomas Radcliffe, Church Aston, Newport, Salop.

ROSSLYN HALL MISSION.—Last year, Miss Emma Garnet, being impressed with the need of doing something more to bring sinners to Christ, opened a room for Gospel services near her residence in Barnsbury, and the Lord blessed the word preached. Objection being taken by neighbours, the room was refused; and after much prayer Rosslyn Hall, in Church-street, Islington, was taken, and there are many signs of encouragement. Not only do the people come in, but sinners are converted. As yet, however, the work is but in its infancy, and therefore monetary help is much needed. It is a purely Gospel effort, but also includes a Gospel Temperance movement.

"BE YE ALSO READY."

"I am now ready."—2 Tim. iv. 7.

READY to fight for Jesus,
If the trumpet call resounds,
And the rallying hosts of evil
Fill earth's great battle-grounds.
Ready to raise his banner
Mid the foemen's fiercest din;
Or ready to die in his service,
If death win the day for Him.

Ready to speak for Jesus,
If he needs a human tongue,
To tell out the wondrous story,
That from age to age has rung:
With never a thought of laurel,
And never a hope of gain,
Content to be just an echo
Of his matchless love to men.

Ready to work for Jesus,
If work be his will for me;
By swift light-hearted service,
Showing my loyalty—
Stooping to lift a burden,
Or offering sympathy;
Thankful to share with angels,
Such happy ministry.

And ready to sit down silent,
To lie at his wounded feet;
If service or speech be denied me,
By his will supremely sweet.
Ready to suffer for Jesus,
If suffering bring Him praise;
If any new ray of glory,
I've won by my weary days.

Ready to give to Jesus
My life, my love, my all;
If my heart, alert and eager,
Hear his sweet constraining call.
Never a thing withholding,
That He stoops to ask of me,
Giving my choicest treasures,
With a glad heart willingly.

Ready to wait for Jesus,
If He wills to tarry long,
Wiling away the watch night,
With soft and Heaven-taught song.
Watching each pale star waning,
Ere the golden glory dawn
Floods earth and sky with brightness,
And crowns the coming morn.

CLOUDESLEY INSTITUTE.

A VERY interesting meeting was recently held in connection with this Institute, when the new house was opened by the Earl of Shaftesbury. In his opening address he strongly urged upon each Christian young woman the duty and privilege of undertaking some definite religious work, and suggested that there must be in the neighbourhood many Sunday-schools greatly in need of teachers.

Rev. C. Julius stated, in reply to Lord Shaftesbury, that members of the Institute were doing precisely the work indicated by his lordship; some were labouring in a very poor ragged-school, and others were managing a large Sunday-evening service for children.

Mr. George Williams, Mr. T. A. Denny, Rev. C. F. Lillingston, Rev. R. C. Billing, and Mr. E. M. Denny, afterwards spoke words of cheer to the workers, and counsel to the young women. The proceedings were varied by some sweet sacred solos from Miss Sydney Roberts and Miss Lizzie Jones, and hymns were heartily sung by the whole company. Mrs. W. T. Paton, hon. secretary, is always glad to receive new members, especially at the Bible-classes, and is likewise happy to give information as to the boarding accommodation, which is homely and comfortable. The address of the Institute is 8, Upper Barnsbury-street, N.

MR. AITKEN ON "WEST-END" LIFE.

DURING the bygone week, Rev. W. H. Aitken has been conducting a Mission at St. Matthew's Church, Bayswater. On the evening of Wednesday, when our reporter was present, there was a very large congregation, though the spacious church would have held some hundreds more. Before his sermon, Mr. Aitken affectionately urged all whose hearts were fully given to God to lay themselves out for bringing to the meetings those who were still undecided.

The discourse was one of great power, and was listened to with the most rapt attention. With the three closing verses of Hosea, chap. v. and the first verse of chap. vi. for a text, the preacher's key-note was the egregious folly of men and women turning their backs upon God and looking to the world for satisfaction and happiness. Having illustrated this by a reference to the history of Israel as described in the text, Mr. Aitken went on to say that our wonder at the conduct of these ancients almost ceases when we contemplate the facts that are daily happening in our own time. He graphically pictured the universal heart-hunger and weariness that are inseparable from the present life, when that life is divorced from Him who is its fountain, and who alone can give the power that will sustain amid all its burdens and vicissitudes.

How hopelessly insoluble are life's problems apart from God! Need we wonder that thoughtful men, who have not learned its true secret, become misanthropes, and give up the problem in despair? Such a one was the young man at Oxford, who made his exit from the world under very startling circumstances. He was an undergraduate, and had been two or three years in residence at the University. One night he went into his room and deliberately wrote down a statement to the following effect: "Let no man say that I am insane. I am in the full possession of all my faculties, as much as ever I was. I have carefully, and to the best of my ability, examined the problem of life, and I have definitely come to the conclusion that there is no such person as God, and no such thing as a hereafter. I have also come to the conclusion that life is full of trouble, and care, and disappointment. We have to work hard, and we get little or nothing in return. And the end of it all is, that we turn to the dust of which we were originally composed. We struggle along on earth for a few brief years, enduring all the hardships that fall to our lot, and then we pass back into the constituent elements of our being. Under these circumstances, I have come to the conclusion that life contains more of trouble than of gratification; and that the balance is decidedly against the expediency of living; therefore I intend to live no longer. This night I intend to terminate at once my wretchedness and my existence." He took a dose of prussic acid, and was found dead in his bed next morning, with this written paper beside him, as the deliberate statement of his conviction.

Coming nearer to the presumptive condition of many in his well-to-do audience, Mr. Aitken proceeded to describe the exactions of a fashionable West-End life. "How hard men work," he exclaimed, "in the endeavour to find pleasure. If I could gather all the Christians of London town into some such building as the Albert Hall, and if I could by some strange inspiration of the Holy Ghost send these Christians forth into London to work as hard for God and for the benefit of their fellow-men as the Upper Ten Thousand in this West-End work for their own gratification and self pleasing, we should see a moral revolution so stupendous that this city, in a few years, would scarcely be known as the same place. Alas! we Christians are not half so much in earnest to serve our God as the children of the world are to serve themselves." Then followed a vivid and faithful portraiture of the fashionable frivolities of "the season," of the weary, monotonous round of gaiety, in which the night is turned into day and the morning brings no respite. When "the season" is ended, the young ladies have to be taken into the country to be nursed, that they may gain strength for the important business of next season's campaign.

All are not pleasure-seekers, but the same spirit appears in many forms—absorption in business, the gambling-table, the race-course, devotion to literary pursuits—all equally hollow and unsatisfying to the soul of man. The time comes when all these resources fail, and then bitter is the disappointment. In the parish where he conducted his last Mission the vicar said he had just come from witnessing a terrible scene. "What was it?" "I visited a house where a child was dying—a dear little fellow; there he lay on his bed, evidently near his end. Over him hung his mother with her hair dishevelled, her hands clasped, and her eyes as if they would start out of her head. She said, 'Oh, God, Thou art a hard God! Thou art taking away from me the thing that I love dearest on earth.'" So it is with many; they think God is dealing hardly with them, while He is all the time yearning over them. It is in love that He sends stroke upon stroke; for the creature is so constituted that he can never find true satisfaction till he finds it in God Himself.

The closing part of the discourse was an intensely pathetic exhortation to weary worldlings to imitate the example of the Israelites, when, in the final words of the text, they exclaimed, "Come and let us return unto the Lord, for He hath torn and He will heal us: He hath smitten and He will bind us up."

We are requested to state that an address to Sunday-school teachers will be given on Saturday evening next, at eight o'clock, at St. Matthew's Church, Bayswater, by Rev. Jas. Stephens.

AMONG THE YOUNG IN GLASGOW.

FEW things have more distinguished the present Revival movement in and around this city than the work among the young. Special arrangements in after-meetings, during the visit of Mr. Moody, had to be made for the young people, and those interested in this branch of Christian work were cheered by finding numbers of them asking, "How can I find Jesus?"

The Foundry Boys' Society, and the Sabbath School Union, the two principal Societies in this city for work among young people, took advantage of this outpouring of God's Spirit to organise a joint evangelistic effort for the conversion of our youth, the chief agents being Messrs. McKeith, Steel and Pratt. More than a year ago these gentlemen, along with other warm-hearted Christian workers, began special evangelistic meetings in the north end of the city, which were attended with the happiest results. The meetings were crowded with the very class desired to be reached; impression was in many instances produced, and conversion in not a few cases followed.

Starting in the north end, these gentlemen have carried on meetings in church after church, passing round the city from east to west; they have now made a complete circuit, having returned during the last fortnight to that district from which they set out.

These meetings have not alone been blessed to the children, but workers have been stirred up, and some who held back from timidity have become soul-winners. It is to be hoped that the agencies for the young in this district will continue to carry on the work so auspiciously begun. W. A. C.

"FULLY RIPE."—With sorrow we record the death of another of the Lord's labourers, Rev. James Stack, who for so many years worked unceasingly in his Master's cause. His earlier years of service were spent in the Church Mission Field in New Zealand, in which he ever evinced a lively interest, but although compelled to leave his post on account of ill health the missionary spirit never left him, and his labours in Oldham, Woolwich, and Portsmouth are remembered by many grateful hearts who first learned from his lips the words of truth.

THE RICHMOND CONFERENCE.

[From a Correspondent.]

RICHMOND is a place of not a little interest and of much effort in Christian work. It has had its share of blessing, too, so far as blessing comes of success, in very many of the forms of spiritual and moral activity which mark the day in which we live. Few places have greater privileges, and still fewer have less hindrances to a full knowledge of what truth is, both in doctrine and in practice. Christ in his person and work is so manifestly set forth, that none need be in ignorance of his claim and of his offers of salvation.

It was thought, therefore, that Richmond would be a suitable place to hold a general Conference on the deepening of the Christian life. The opportunity has been given, and has been a blessing to many. The hall for the use especially of the Church Army, so munificently placed at the disposal of the Vicar of Holy Trinity, was the place of meeting. The work was planned for the inside of a week, commencing on Monday evening, April 23, with a general prayer-meeting. The Rev. E. H. Hopkins, the Vicar of Trinity Church, presided, and was assisted by many helpers, among whom were the Revs. H. Webb Peploe, G. R. Thornton, C. Graham, J. A. Jacob, D. B. Hankin, John Pigott, W. Hay Aitken, C. A. Fox, W. Haslam, J. B. Figgis, A. Barnes-Lawrence, H. Sharpe, H. Wilcox, W. Frith, J. C. Taylor, J. A. Aston, and several laymen, both local and from afar. Among these were Captain Baring, Messrs. E. Wilcox, Carlile, A. Head, Davidson, Stanley Smith, Olliphant, Maynard, E. Crewdsop, &c.

A great variety of subjects were handled, and some of them with great power. The manifestation of the presence of the Holy Spirit was occasionally great. To those who watch these gatherings carefully, it is instructive to observe the variety as well as progress shown in the teaching of those who are called to speak. That life of Christ so free, so abundant, so full of resurrection power, which constitutes the sanctification of the believer, is an endless theme. Its aspects are so many, its power so great, to all who, being willing to be emptied of self, are then willing to receive Him as their sole Director, Guide, Deliverer and Keeper. One prominent truth in relation to that life, much dwelt upon at Richmond, was its oneness, not merely that Christ is its centre, but that He is the One Life, and that of that One Life all who believe in Him are partakers. This was much enforced, and, in consequence, when one of the speakers urged Christ's consequent claim, "Yield yourselves unto God," at one of the meetings, there was a great manifestation of the Lord's presence, moving many hearts and stripping many of all thought of self. In the afternoon generally there was some testimony given of God's blessing received, and some of these were evidently very real, coming from hearts broken by God's goodness.

Each evening the last half-hour was devoted to an after-meeting, which the majority of those present remained to, and these were very solemn occasions, as they have for a long time proved to be.

Some very encouraging instances of hearts longing for more of Christ in their lives, from those not able to be present, came under the notice of one who assisted in arranging the Conference—cases so simple and true as to be as great an encouragement as any given by those who were present. So we will thank the Lord and take courage. The wave of blessing is rising. May it overflow the Church of Christ all over the earth, enabling it to give a final and very distinct testimony to Christ before his appearing.

FROM THE FAR WEST.—By the kindness of someone unknown to me, I receive The Christian regularly. I am greatly obliged for it. It is a great pleasure to me to know what my brethren of new names and remoter places are doing for Christ. Besides, I have some poor "Britishers" among my people who are very glad to get this paper. I thank my unknown friend for them and myself. I am doing Mission work, and tracts are very acceptable. John K. Harris.

THE THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

THE Annual Meeting of this Mission on Wednesday last in Exeter Hall, under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury, was as interesting as any anniversary which has yet been held. The Lower Hall where the meeting took place was well filled; among the audience, as well as those on the platform, were some whose appearance clearly proclaimed them to be sailors.

Mr. E. J. Mather presented the Thirty-eighth Annual Report. It was read with genuine feeling, and elicited expressions of cordial sympathy. To attempt even a summary of it here would be scarcely to do it justice. It must suffice to say that the income for the year was £3700, that the visits to the shipping by the worthy missionaries numbered 35,931, being an increase of 7,451 upon the previous year; also that there were 1042 more services with 24,483 more attendants. The British and Foreign Bible Society had freely given 36,660 copies or portions of the New Testament to emigrants and soldiers, while the Religious Tract Society, the Church of England Book Society, and the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and various friends, had kindly given us no fewer than 224,624 English and foreign tracts, and 56,029 magazines. It was cheering to learn that these gifts were really prized by the men into whose hands they fell.

Rev. R. C. Billing expressed his conviction that the two new smacks, the Edward Auriol and the Cholmondeley, would do good service among the fishermen of the North Sea. Referring to the useful work of the missionaries among the navvies at Tilbury, he said he had been pleased to hear the hearty cheer which rang through the room when the name of George Simon was mentioned. They had sent George from the east of London, and he hoped he would be made a great blessing.

Rev. W. S. Lewis, vicar of St. Mary's, Hornsey-rise, hoped managers and men would stick to the ship, and that the subscribers would by their liberality cheerfully bid them to "go on ahead!"

Very general interest was excited by the brief and simple addresses of some of the missionaries of the Society. The master of the smack Ensign, Mr. Daniel Budd, said: "It is three years ago now since God called me to trust in Himself. I was enabled to do so, and my earnest prayer was, 'Lord, use me for Thy glory!' I asked Him," the speaker continued, "to give me some work in which I might be so used, and the answer He gave me was to send me to the North Sea, where some of the fishermen never know what it is to have a Sunday to themselves.

Another of the missionaries was Mr. Barnes, who had been a North Sea fisherman thirty-one years. He and two of his companions had met together to pray year after year that a blessing might be poured out on the men at work in the North Sea, and he remembered one of them tapping him on the shoulder one day and saying, "Harry! the blessing must come soon, for our God will not withhold it." And the blessing had come, for that summer about thirty men were brought to the Lord.

Among the missionaries, too, was Mr. Lowman, formerly mate of the Swan, and he gave a very encouraging account of the manner in which the sailors generally received the message of salvation. The meeting was also addressed by Rev. J. W. Marshall, Mr. G. Weatherley, Captain Maude, Admiral Buckle, and the Earl of Shaftesbury.

WIDOWS' FRIEND SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of this society was held at the Guildhall Tavern on Wednesday last week, Alderman Fowler, M.P., presiding. Mr. Cæsar, secretary, read the report, which stated that a large number of widows had been effectually relieved by comparatively small sums judiciously administered. He urged the claims of the society to increased support. Addresses were given advocating the work of the society by the Chairman, Revs. A. S. Herring, B. Cassin, H. A. Mason, J. Huleat, and others.

DR. BARNARDO'S EMIGRATION PARTY.

IT was with no little anxiety that last year we essayed our first systematic effort in the direction of emigration, and readers of THE CHRISTIAN will remember with what prayerful solicitude many who sympathise with our work followed the dear lads who left Liverpool for Canada on the 10th August, 1882. They will, therefore, expect to hear something now as to what has befallen them; it is with unfeigned thankfulness to God that I am able to state that all, without exception, have so far done well, having given real satisfaction to their employers, are in good work, and apparently are perfectly happy and satisfied in the new openings which have thus providentially been presented.

One or two of the cases that have gone out are remarkable. One little mite of a child, taken in miserable rags from an East-end thoroughfare, and kept in the Home for two years, was among the party. His bright, merry face attracted attention; he was received into the household of a barrister-at-law, who is also a member of the Dominion Parliament. After a little while he was adopted as a member of the family, and is now in a fair way to attain a superior education and opportunities in life which could never have been dreamt of on this side. A few of the other lads have had to change first places, but that was only to be expected, considering that we were inexperienced, and that little boys are not made by the process of emigration all at once into wise men; but, as I have written, these difficulties have been overcome, and I have only a favourable report to send of each young emigrant.

We are hoping to send out a larger party this year. We have secured independent premises, favourably situated, not far from the city of Hamilton, in the province of Ontario. These at least we hope to retain for a little while, although it is possible that another position more advantageous may open up to us later on. We are earnestly desirous to send 150 more boys and at least 50 girls this year,—the boys to go in the last week in May, the girls in the last week in June. The demands all over the country for our children have been very great and encouraging. Already every one of these 200 children are allotted; that is to say, we have been during the earlier part of this year receiving applications from farmers and others, who have been visited or written to, all circumstances connected with them carefully examined by our agents, so as to make quite sure that it will be safe and wise to entrust a child to their keeping, and, as the result, about two hundred of the most advantageous applications have been entertained.

In every instance we endeavour to get the clergyman or nearest minister of the district to become acquainted with our children settled near, to visit them and to assume towards them those helpful spiritual relations which will be the surest guarantees of good. Besides this, our own agents, a young Christian man and his wife, are on the spot. They place the children out, and occupy the time between the arrival of the parties in visiting from farmhouse to farmhouse throughout the villages and townships where they are scattered.

Ten pounds per child is needful in order to do the work well, and for 200 children this will mean £2000. We are hoping and praying that our Father may incline the hearts of many of his people to trust us with half this sum very speedily, so that our minds may be at rest as to what we shall be able to do. The remainder will not be required for at least another month. Meanwhile, many kind fingers have been long at work, and garments, urgently required, are in process of preparation. I earnestly ask the prayerful interest and sympathy of all who love the Lord Jesus.

Friends interested in the subject of child emigration are invited to remember our party in prayer, if possible, on Saturday evenings, between half-past seven and nine. Those who can find their way at this hour to the Edinboro' Castle could join a large party of friends, who will for the next two months meet for this object.

THOS. J. BARNARDO.

MISS MITTENDORFF'S HOME.

MONDAY, April 23, with a smart snow shower falling at the hour fixed for opening the meeting, was certainly not an inviting evening for the anniversary of the Home for Destitute and Deserted Children at Clayton House, Epsom. Nevertheless, a number of ladies bravely faced the weather, and they were amply repaid by the interesting proceedings at 17, Old Cavendish-street. Mr. JOSEPH WEATHERLEY presided, and among those present were Miss Mittendorff, Rev. J. Denham Smith, Dr. Smith, Mr. A. J. Woodhouse, Dr. Picard. Mr. Denham Smith offered the opening prayer, marked by deep thankfulness for the tender mercy shown to the children of the Home during a time of severe illness. After some remarks by Mr. Weatherley,

Mr. J. DENHAM SMITH said though he did not believe in "interviewing," he thought it would make the proceedings of the evening less formal if, instead of standing up to address them, Miss Mittendorff were allowed to keep her seat, and answer a few questions which, in the name of the meeting, he would venture to put to her. This plan succeeded so well that Miss Mittendorff was able in a pleasant way to give a great deal of information respecting the progress of the work. Briefly put, her replies to the questions amounted to the following:—

The root of this happy work in her soul she said was of the Lord. He had brought her to England and had led her to Himself. She was praying and waiting for nine years before she saw clearly what she had to do. A question asked in The Revival had seemed to point out the way to her in which she could work. The question was, "Is there not a woman to be found to take up these children?" In looking at the question, she continued, I asked the Lord, can I be this woman? And at length the Lord answered me. A doctor to whom I spoke said, "Your health is so far restored that you may be able to undertake it." For a whole fortnight I waited, until at length the way was made plain after a conversation I had with a Christian lady. I had no means, so if the thing were to be done, it must be done entirely by the Lord. It was the Lord who began it, and He it is who has entirely sustained me. I was what you call an "old maid;" I had never seen a little baby younger than three weeks; but the good doctor encouraged me by saying, "Just as the Lord can teach the mother how to take care of her first child, so He can, and will, teach you."

In proceeding she gave an account of the growth of the Home, of the miraculous way in which the Sunday dinners came, of the trouble in connection with the outbreak of the fever, and the strength she had received to hold on, although some after the sickness were not inclined to look with an eye of favour upon the Home.

The remainder of the evening was spent in listening to brief but very hearty addresses from friends present. Mr. Woodhouse remarked that the lesson they ought to learn from such a story as that to which they had listened was to trust the Lord more fully.

Dr. Picard said he had visited the Home two or three weeks ago, and had found everything in admirable order, and the best attention was paid to sanitary matters.

Miss Mittendorff stated that the "quarantine" Home had cost £25, but it was an expense she was obliged to incur. The meeting was also addressed by Dr. T. Gilbart Smith.

THE addresses of the abstaining Mayors delivered at the Guildhall on March 14, 1883, are now published in pamphlet form, and may be had at 337, Strand, London, W.C., price 1d.

WE have received from Messrs. Marcus Ward & Co. a number of packets of illuminated Text Cards. Packet No. 135 is entitled, "Solace for the Sorrowful," and has twelve Floral Designs, with Verses by Frances Ridley Havergal. No. 41A is called "Memorable Words," and contains twelve Floral Cards, arranged by Hesba Stretton. No. 16 contains sixteen cards on the Lord's Day, also selected and arranged by Miss Stretton. Then we have Reward Cards, and others in great variety, all of them beautiful, and at remarkably low prices.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE WORK.

GOOLE.

A VIGOROUS Blue Ribbon Mision in this Yorkshire town has resulted in more than 2000 new pledges.

BRAMPTON.

The Temperance work initiated a few months ago by the Hon. Mrs. Howard, of Naworth Castle, has been attended with great success, the number of pledges now reached being 1680.

OXFORD.

A very successful Gospel Temperance Mission having been held here, a series of periodical meetings has been arranged. The first was addressed by Mr. J. Hilton, of London.

BOURNEMOUTH.

At the Baptist Chapel, Westbourne, last week, Rev. W. Stott, of Notting-hill, gave a very interesting lecture on the wines of the Bible, illustrated by models and implements, and specimens of different kinds of unfermented wines. Continual allusion was made to Scripture, and the parable of new wine in old bottles received an interpretation new to some, but which is, we doubt not, the true explanation.

BELFAST.

The Gospel Temperance Mission which has been conducted by the Irish Temperance League in Belfast was closed on Sunday week, when Mr. T. E. Murphy, who has been the principal speaker throughout the Mission, delivered his farewell address to an audience which crowded the vast building in every part. During the Mission 31,775 have signed the pledge and put on the blue ribbon. Of these 14,240 have signed in shops and offices in the town. It is computed that there are now in Belfast, out of a population of 220,000, upwards of 46,000 wearing the blue ribbon, and that there are in all 62,000 persons abstainers.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY AT MANCHESTER.

The Gospel Temperance Mission which Mr. Francis Murphy conducted here for fifteen nights was brought to a most successful termination on Sunday week. The circus in Chepstow-street was crowded in every part, hundreds of people being unable to get admission to the service. The Sacred Song Association contributed some tender music in solos and choruses.

Mr. Murphy was in his best vein, and proceeded in a powerful address to gather up the threads of the work in which he had been engaged during the fortnight of his stay. He could not, he said, remain longer, notwithstanding that the associations of that city had made a deep impression on him. He would carry with him the most agreeable recollections of a place in which he had spent many happy days. His heart went out to the numbers who had been induced to give up a life of selfishness and dissipation for a life of sober godliness. What could he say to keep them in the path they ought to go? What else should he say than ask them to be men, and to remain faithful to their pledge. "Be brave and fearless in your endeavour to maintain your integrity. Remember what a curse follows the giving way to temptation. Be sober. Be good. Be generous, be kind. Be merciful to the women you have about you. Remember that while you are at work they are thinking of you—sorrowing for you, and sympathising with you. Use no harsh words to them, but give them the gentleness of your inmost soul. It may be that some in this vast building to-night have been rescued from the cursed drink. It may be that in your headlong career of dissipation that wife whom years ago you led in innocence to the altar, has been dragged down with you. If you are strong in the pledge be still merciful to her. Do not speak cruel words that blight the soul and call up all the revengeful desires in the breast. Go to your work, and come home on the Saturday like a man; give up to her your earnings; have faith still in her, and maybe that while you are away toiling she, poor soul, will go into her room and ask herself in silence whether her conduct is right, and maybe that the tears will gush forth as they did in the old pure days, and she will come forth a new creature. Love is all powerful. You know not what it can do. Give it a chance. Let it beautify your soul, and breathe upon your spirit, and if ever there was a nobleness in this world it will be yours. The chains of the demon drink are powerful, but the gentleness of a strong man's love is stronger than all the links forged on the anvil of hell."

The total number of pledges given amounted to 7000. The number of ribbons distributed was 21,000. As Mr. Murphy left the building he was beseiged on all sides to shake hands with the multitude of persons that crowded round the place.

MESSRS. MURPHY AT HASLINGDEN.

On Tuesday evening, 24th inst., was held the anniversary of the Blue Ribbon Club at Haslingden. Both the Messrs. Murphy were present, and the meeting was such as did our heart good to see. The large Public Hall was crowded with a genuine working-class audience, many of whom are now reaping the substantial and happy fruits of Gospel Temperance.

It was in this town where Mr. T. E. Murphy commenced alone his work in our country, and the reception which he now met, accompanied as he was by his honoured father, showed that the good he has been instrumental in effecting in this community still lives in the grateful memories of those who were blessed.

The history of the work here is most interesting. It was on November 13, 1881, when Mr. Murphy, jun., began operations, and as the result of his labours, over 6000 signed the pledge for the first time and donned the ribbon. Some time afterwards he paid a second visit, when about 1500 more signatures were secured. A Gospel Temperance Union was organised, and by means of this agency the work has been kept going. On January 9, 1882, a meeting was convened in the Coffee-house by four ladies deeply interested in the cause, and which was attended by a number of men who had received benefit. The outcome was the establishment of a Working Men's Club, which has done much to foster an interest in the movement, and keep the pledged faithful. For some time the members met in the Coffee-house, but a year ago a large roomy house was secured, and which was opened as a club house by Mr. T. E. Murphy. The expenses of the place are met by the members themselves, who last quarter numbered 260. The house contains a convenient suite of rooms, and the society has cricket and football clubs, a gymnasium, and holds a mutual improvement class, as, also, what is far more important, a Sunday Bible-class. The work is in good Christian hands; it has been of great and blessed service, and we bespeak for it a prosperous future.

The anniversary meeting was successful in every respect. Both the Messrs. Murphy spoke well, though the work in Manchester and Belfast must have been a great strain upon their energies. The choir was exclusively composed of men belonging to the Club, many of whom will have reason to thank God all through eternity for the blessings of Gospel Temperance.

Some of the things we have heard regarding several who took the pledge under Mr. Murphy, jun., are most touching. Lives that were in ruin through the drink have been thoroughly changed; homes once dark are now bright; and children in misery are now happy. The story of one dear fellow, which we had from his own lips, is of tearful interest. He was once as far down as the drink can bring a man, and God knows how far that is—but now he sits at the feet of Jesus clothed, and in his right mind; and he owes all, under God, as he says, to his "good friend, Mr. Edward Murphy."

We were glad to see several clergymen and ministers at the front at the anniversary meeting; and we are happy to say that the indefatigable labours of the Rev. Francis Standfast, Wesleyan minister, now of Grantham, are not forgotten. For enthusiasm we never had a better audience than this which we addressed; and though the meeting was almost entirely composed of Blue Ribbonites, we are glad to say that forty new pledges were signed at the close. May the occasion act as a powerful stimulus in the good work, and while we wish the publicans personally nothing but the sincerest good-will, may the cause sweep along, until they feel its influence yet more and more in their returns, which we understand have been seriously affected.

Adam Scott,
Congregational Minister, Lancaster.

The Church of England Temperance Chronicle of April 28 contains short reports of many of the sermons preached in London on Temperance Sunday.

The little town of Holmfirth has had a Gospel Temperance Mission, the results of which have been most encouraging. 1342 persons have taken the pledge, and over 2000 the blue ribbon. The good work is still going on, pledges being taken daily.

ZENANA MEDICAL MISSIONS.

ON Wednesday, last week, the Dean of Westminster presided in the Council-room, Exeter Hall, at the third annual meeting of the Zenana and Medical Mission Home and Training School for Ladies. In the course of his remarks he said all Christians should be ready to co-operate in aiding a society which is endeavouring to carry out the Master's command, "Heal the sick and preach the Gospel." By means of this institution Christian ladies who devote themselves to this work receive adequate training, enabling them to go forth not as medical practitioners only, but as followers of Him who came to alleviate human suffering and to seek and save the lost.

Sir Richard Temple (late Lieut.-Governor of Bengal) said he felt it incumbent upon him to attend and give his testimony to the necessity for and value of such a society. Lady medical missionaries are particularly required by the women of the upper and middle-classes of India, on account of their strict seclusion. At a rough estimate there are at least fifty millions of women and children who are thus precluded from receiving scientific medical aid in the physical ills to which they are liable. Assistance in sickness can only be rendered by Christian ladies trained at home for the work; hence the importance of such an institution as this. If India is to be evangelised we must begin with the women, for their influence is very great, and in no way can this be more easily and effectually accomplished than by means of lady medical missionaries, who, winning their gratitude and confidence, become ambassadresses of the Gospel in the darkest corners of the Zenanas.

Dr. G. de G. Griffith (hon. sec.) read the annual statement, which was full of encouraging facts. Copies of it may be had from the Secretary, 34, St. George's-square, S.W.

Rev. Trevor Fielder spoke of the missionary character of the work. Dr. Heywood Smith emphasised the fact that the preaching of the Gospel is the primary object, although the secondary object, that of healing the sick, is also important. Being in constant communication with Miss Hewlett at Umritsur he was enabled to say that Miss Sharp, the first fully trained pupil sent out from the institution, is already proving herself of immense service in the work.

Rev. J. H. Rigg, D.D., read extracts from the letters of a lady missionary of great experience, pointing out the great importance of lady missionaries receiving their training in distinctively Christian institutions. He remarked that a larger house has been taken, the committee having felt compelled to take this step owing to the want of accommodation for the increased number of pupils. For this purpose, as well as for presentation pupils, he earnestly desired the increased aid of the Christian public.

Brief addresses followed by Rev. W. M. Sinclair, Dr. Lazeron, Rev. F. Cole (ten years a Church Missionary Society missionary in India), Dr. Griffith, Rev. Percy W. Bunting, and Dr. Newsholme.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending May 12:—May 6, Heb. iv 1-16; May 7, Heb. v. 1-14; May 8, Heb. vi. 1-10; May 9, Heb vi. 11-20; May 10, Heb. vii. 1-14; May 11, Heb. vii. 15-28; May 12, Heb. viii. 1-13.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

BLACKBURN.

THE Rev. T. Champness visited Blackburn lately, and conducted services in Clayton-street Chapel from Monday to Thursday. Altogether, during the five days no fewer than 120 persons gave in their names as inquirers.

PORTSMOUTH.

Rev. Thomas Cook writes in a Methodist contemporary: "This has been the most glorious fortnight of my life. We took the names of 666 inquirers. I never before witnessed such a work among middle-aged men."

GWERSYLLT, NEAR WREXHAM.

Three weeks' evangelistic services have been conducted here by Mr. W. J. Taylor, of the Evangelisation Society. Each evening the chapel was well filled, and Mr. Taylor's addresses were listened to with fixed attention. The Lord has blessed Mr. Taylor's visit to Gwersyllt by the conversion of not a few.

BROOKLYN, U.S.

Rev. E. P. Hammond has entered upon a course of revival services in the Brooklyn Tabernacle. He is turning his attention largely to the children. The Sunday-school of the Tabernacle now fills the whole of the lower floor of the building, and is enjoying a high degree of prosperity. Its superintendent, Mr. Hall, and his large corps of teachers, are in hearty sympathy with Mr. Hammond's revival efforts.

THE DROME, FRANCE.

Pastor Remond writes: "Since the kind notice appeared in your issue of April 12, the Lord has granted me the privilege of making known the Word of his Grace at Bruis, another village of the High Alps. I am also invited to Ribergret, a village wholly Catholic. The harvest is truly great, but the reapers are wanting. May our English friends support us by their sympathy and their prayers!"

DR. SOMERVILLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The latest news of Dr. Somerville comes from Kimberley. There the Doctor has had the unique experience of having his sermons, while preaching, translated into Dutch, Zulu, and Bechuana. On the first Sabbath evening the attendance was so great that, for the first time in Africa, it was necessary to hold an overflow-meeting. Mr. Cumming, who was suffering from two illnesses, is again able to be in his chair at the organ.

RAILWAY NAVVIES IN BANFFSHIRE.

The Free and U.P. Presbyteries of Banffshire have appointed Mr. Marr as missionary to labour amongst the navvies who are engaged in the construction of the Keith and Buckie Railway. The Banffshire Railway Workers' Gospel Temperance Society is the name of a new organisation of which Mr. Maclean, Free Church Minister of Fordyce, is the President, and Mr. Simmers, U.P. Minister of Portsoy, is the Vice-President.

THE BLACK COUNTRY.

In Dudley there has been a deep religious awakening among working-men. Special Mission Services have been held for three weeks in the Presbyterian church, with most cheering results. The minister and his congregation have been assisted by Rev. John More, of Cheltenham; by Mr. John B. Bain, Evangelist; and by Rev. G. Main Smith, of Gloucester. From the half-hour open air services the men have walked quietly in crowds to the house of God. There, under a sense of sin, many have sat still to be directed to the Saviour, and have left praising and thanking God for his salvation. On the fourth night of the services three brothers were found in one seat in deep anxiety. All three got into liberty ere they left, and since then their father has also been led to accept the Saviour. This is a sample of what the Lord has done and is doing among us.

ALEXR. HARDIE, Minister.

BOREHAM, CHELMSFORD.

A good work has been going on at the Mission Chapel here for the last three months. Mrs. Yeoland's addresses have been listened to with the greatest attention by crowded congregations. Manifest signs of the work of the Holy Spirit have been witnessed by several Christian workers who have been engaged in the after-meetings. Two Cottage meetings, a Young Men's Bible-class, and a youth has twelve lads at his cottage for the reading of "The Word." Many praise God for Mrs. Yeoland's visit to Boreham.

MIDLAND RAILWAY MEN.

On Thursday evening, April 26, over 300 of the men employed by the Midland Railway Company were invited to tea by Mr. and Mrs. Coxeter, of Bathurst House, Highgate-road. The invitation was very fully responded to, and the large Lecture Hall of the Highgate-road Baptist Chapel was crowded. After a substantial repast, Mr. Badenoch, of Mildmay Hall, and others addressed earnest words of exhortation to the men. After those who had to go on duty left, about fifty remained to a short devotional meeting in which the railway men only took part; at its close several professed to have derived great blessing.

WINDERMERE.

Mr. George Norrish, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a week of meetings in this place. It was felt to be advisable to follow up the very successful Gospel Temperance Mission which Mr. T. E. Murphy conducted last month, by some meetings of a more thoroughly evangelistic character; and we have great cause for thankfulness to God for the visit of Mr. Norrish.

It is impossible to estimate all the good that has been done; but the Christian people who have taken part in the work have received much blessing, and several who were living without Christ have been brought to know Him as their Saviour. Mr. Norrish addressed a large meeting of children on Sunday afternoon, April 22, and those present listened with deep interest to his very excellent address on the words, "Thou God seest me."

CLIFTON SOMERVELL.

Requests for Prayer.

PLACES.—Mr. and Mrs. Catlin, itinerating in South Wales during the month of May, ask for prayer that God would give much blessing on open-air work in the villages, and at special services to be held around Abergavenny, Monmouth, Brynmawr, &c.——For a Mission at Cadbury, Devon, May 6 to 27, by Mr. W. H. Gorham.——For a blessing on an effort being made to reach the souls of the men now lying in Kilmainham Gaol, under sentence, or awaiting their trial, for complicity in the murders at Phœnix Park.——For a Mission to be held at St. Paul's Church, Balham, 29th inst. to 8th May.——For a series of Bible-readings during May, at the Camden Town Branch of the Y.M.C.A., upon the Holy Spirit, by Mr. T. Shuldham Henry.——Miss Child, of the "Welcome Home," writes: We are having prayer in our Fo'csle meetings with two Danish sailors, who are leaving us for Denmark and Norway, to tell among their own countrymen of what the Lord has done for them. Their desire is to go forth at their own expense. Will the readers of THE CHRISTIAN unite with us in fervent prayer for them and this effort.——For blessing upon the weekly meeting of the Swansea Young Men's Christian Association.

PAUPER CHILDREN.—The St. George's, Hanover-square, Guardians, and the Guardians of Whitechapel Union, have both voted a considerable number of children (girls) to be offered to Miss Rye for her next voyage to Canada, subject to the approval of the Local Government Board.

CABMEN IN NORTH LONDON.—If your correspondent "W." will favour me with a call, I can put her in the way of helping the cabmen. We have a distinct Mission for this class, and two Cabmen's Shelters in good working order, one at Highbury, the other at Canonbury Station.

Notices of Books, &c.

JACK'S HEROISM: A STORY OF SCHOOL BOY LIFE. By EDITH C. KENYON. Partridge & Co. A good story, well told, and calculated to imprint lessons of highest importance upon the youthful mind. It is sure to take with the class for whom it is intended, and may safely be placed in the hands of juveniles at home or at school. Its attractiveness is increased by illustrations of its contents, both pictorial and poetical.

OUR HOPE, the organ of the "Blessed Hope Union," is a quarterly publication edited by the Rev. W. J. CHRISTIE, of Gortin, co. Tyrone, fro whom it may be had direct. Among other articles of interest, it contains a brief paper on "Why we are Pre-Millenarians," by Mr. J. T. Duffield; another, entitled "Bishop Ryle's Prophetic Creed," both of which are adapted for circulation as guides to inquiry on a theme of deepest moment.

ILLUSTRATED SABBATH TRACTS. Compiled by the Editor of the "British Workman." Second series. Partridge & Co. A useful little volume, full of incidents and suggestions helpful to those who are engaged in promoting the maintenance of the Lord's Day as a day of rest and sacred service. It is also adapted to lead any who are careless and indifferent on the matter to thoughtfulness and concern. It should have a wide circulation.

THE VOICE OF WISDOM. W. P. Nimmo & Co., Edinburgh. This is a treasury of moral truths, selected from various sources, and contains a choice collection of illustrations on a great variety of themes. There are in all 1820 quotations, from 330 authors. The work is alphabetically arranged, and covers a wide field of thought. It is a very handy book of reference for preachers and teachers, indeed, Christian workers generally will find it of much service in suggesting ideas, and unfolding truth to the mind.

THE LAST DAYS: ARE THEY NOW NIGH AT HAND? By the Rev. W. J. CHRISTIE, of Gortin, Co. Tyrone. The author gives a résumé of the history of the Great Pyramid, and of the scientific and religious theories which have been based upon it. He further gives Scripture evidence as to the character of the days which will immediately precede the Lord's coming, and indicates the signs of the times which appear to urge the conclusion that we are nearing that long-looked-for and glorious event. It is published by the author, and may be had direct from him, price sixpence.

A POPULAR INTRODUCTION TO THE NEW TESTAMENT. By J. RAWSON LUMBY, D.D. Hodder & Stoughton. The contents of this volume were originally published as a series of Essays in the "Clergyman's Magazine." The author has somewhat enlarged upon the plan adopted in their serial form, having made additions both to the text and by means of notes printed at the foot of the pages. The Essays were well worthy of republication, and, in their revised form, present a volume which deserves to take high rank among books of its own class. The author furnishes the reader with a mass of useful information upon the sacred writers of the New Testament, as well as upon those to whom their writings were originally addressed. His paraphrase of the Epistles is exceedingly well done, and will be read with interest and profit by those who seek to understand and enter into the scope and meaning of the Sacred Word. To leaders of Bible-classes the book will be found of special service and value.

JUAN DE VALDES' COMMENTARY ON ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS. Trubner & Co., Ludgate-hill. Juan de Valdés was one of a small band of Spanish Reformers, who lived in the early part of the 16th century. He was of noble birth, and held high rank in the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. He was led to adopt Protestant views of truth, and to avoid the Inquisition fled to Naples, where he dwelt in retirement with several friends like-minded with himself, among whom were Peter Martyr, Vittoria Colonna, and Guilia Gonzaga. This commentary is one of the fruits of their earnest and prayerful study of the Scriptures. His works have been almost lost sight of, until recent years, when, through the efforts of Dr. Boehmer, Mr. B. G. Wiffen, and others, they have been brought out of their obscurity. The present volume is a translation from the Spanish, by Mr. John T. Betts, who appends to the Commentary Dr. Boehmer's Lives of Juan and his twin-brother Alfonso de Valdés. As the original title-page says, the Exposition is "very wholesome for every Christian," and should have a place in the library of every lover of thoughtful and deeply spiritual literature. The volume possesses, from every point of view, a more than common amount of interest.

Letters to the Editor.

EMIGRATION—A GOOD IDEA.

Sir,—I am glad to see you encourage emigration in every form. This must be carried out much further than at present. Cannot Penny Emigration Savings Banks be started in all our large centres of commerce and manufacture? I feel sure there are thousands whom it would be a vast boon to settle in our colonies, at the same time it would be a great relief to our country and poor-rates, &c.—Yours truly, W. Ouston.

THE AFFIRMATION BILL.

Sir,—May I be allowed to correct an error in my last letter? I said the time had passed in which further to petition the House of Commons against the Bill now before the House. But this I find is not the case. Petitions are still of the greatest use and importance, as should the debate close on Thursday it will take some further time in Committee before going to the House of Lords. May fervent and continued prayer meanwhile be graciously answered. Frank H. White.

PARLIAMENT AND THE LORD'S DAY.

Dear Sir,—Permit me to plead with your readers that they will make every effort to strengthen the hands of Lord Shaftesbury in his amendment to Lord Dunraven's motion for opening museums and picture-galleries on the Lord's Day. The motion is down for Tuesday, May 8. The friends of the Sabbath should use earnestly the forms of petition which have been supplied to them; those who have not received them should send to us for copies. It will also be very helpful if influential friends will write to any members of the Upper House whom they may be able to influence. John Gritton.

UNANSWERED PRAYER.

Sir,—In connection with an article on Unanswered Prayer in a recent Christian, may I beg for space to draw attention to a prayer not quoted, wrung in agony from the lips of our Saviour himself. Does not the cry, "Let this cup pass," three times uttered in vain, remind us forcibly that the most sinless and earnest prayer may not be granted? If Christ, the Son of God, who is one with his Father, qualified his cry for help with "Thy will be done," are we not distinctly taught that all our petitions ought clearly to be made with the reservation—if it be the will of God?

Why may not physical infirmity be to the glory of God? It would be easy to bring forward cases where much work has been accomplished for the Lord which might not have been done but for a bed of sickness. Let us pray without ceasing, and expect great things; remembering the while that the essence and spirit of prayer is nearness to the Father, and, consequently, oneness with his will.

Doubtless our Saviour, while on earth, healed all cases of sickness which were brought before his notice, but so also he fed the multitudes, calmed the raging storm, brought the dead to life again, and worked other miracles. Why should not we claim for the prayer of faith answers also to such as these? The miracle of raising a dead body to life would be no more miraculous, so to speak, than curing one fatally smitten. Are sorrows, anxieties, persecutions for the Word's sake, crosses not far heavier to bear even than ill-health? Christ tells us, "In the world ye shall have tribulation," but adds, "In Me ye may have peace." Peace—not from the world's trials, be they of the soul or body, but peace in and under them; so that, bending to the Divine will, we may be able to say, "All things work together for good to them that love God;" and to feel that "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

WHITE SLAVES IN LONDON.

Sir,—The letter in your issue of April 19, under this heading, is deserving of the deepest consideration, and I trust will arouse the indignant remonstrances of Christians everywhere. I cannot read it without a blush of shame for the ignorance, thoughtlessness, and unholy greed that lies at its root. That English girls and women, many of whom have been brought up in well ordered English homes, some even delicately nurtured, and not a few well educated, should by dire necessity, and in thousands, be compelled to sacrifice health, life, and liberty, to late shopping, is a problem that needs solving without any unnecessary delay.

The shop-walker was quite right when he said, "Ladies and gentlemen can prevent it: the masters won't." It is too much to expect of poor human nature that masters will give up their chance of making money whilst the general public are indifferent to the price at which it is done. You may no more expect it from them, than you could get it from the manufacturers before Lord Shaftesbury's Factory Acts came into operation, and stopped them passing thousands of helpless children through the fire to the same Moloch of Gain.

Not only in London, but in all our large towns, and in countless smaller ones too, the health and happiness, present and eternal, of thousand of innocent girls and women are being sacrificed every year to the long hours and compulsory standing; in shops often badly ventilated, and rendered noxious by many breaths and blazing gas. But it is said the better establishments provide seats for their female assistants. A highly intelligent young lady remarked the other day, "Yes, they do! but if we happen through sheer weariness to take a seat for a moment, the look of surprise from the powers that be, and the sneering taunt, 'What! nothing better to do than sit down, Miss,' will explain how that works."

Early closing has been tried and found wanting. It has done much good; all honour to those who have so persistently advocated it. But the fact is patent, the greed of one man will often neutralise a whole district. It is humiliating to confess it, but we firmly believe that no voluntary action in this matter will work the cure. Never, till the law steps in with its power and authority, and says, "Thou shalt not kill," and attaches a penalty to the "killing process," will our helpless, weaker sex be saved from this terrible slavery.

But some indignant Briton may say, "You will interfere with freedom of contract and the liberty of the subject." Not a bit of it! An Act to protect our women and girls from the tyranny of selfish greed and thoughtlessness, would interfere with no right or liberty of the subject, save that of the right and liberty of the white slave-driver to "larrup his own nigger."

Are the ladies of Christian England so lost to a sense of duty as to dwell in ease and comfort whilst the cry of their oppressed sisters is rising up to God? Is there no possibility of forming a Red, White, and Blue Army, to take up this holy crusade for their deliverance? We believe that a simple law passed for closing all retail establishments where women and girls are employed, at six o'clock, and bringing all warehouses and wholesale establishments under the Factories Act, would inflict no great hardship upon any, and would be the means of untold blessing to thousands. Trusting that your columns, ever open to the cry of the oppressed, will never be closed against this subject till the White Slave is freed,—I remain, yours, &c., Lex.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

From the "Christian Herald."

CASE OF BRONCHO-PHTHISIS—Mr. J. L. GRIERSON, of KIRKCUDBRIGHT.

On the 28th February this gentleman wrote to Mr. Congreve as follows:—

"It is with the deepest sense of gratitude I tell you that I now enjoy perfect health. When I look back it seems incredible, so wonderful has been the cure effected by your medicine.

"Sixteen months ago I was compelled to leave London, and returned to Scotland in 'hopeless condition,' very much reduced in strength, cough most severe, frequent hæmorrhage, profuse night sweats (described in the book as occurring in advanced cases), and sleeplessness. I have been often told I was at death's door.

"I was at once urged to try your treatment; yet did not until I had tried my own doctor first. It was not long before there was the dawning of good hope. The cough became less troublesome, the night sweats gradually ceased, sleep returned, and appetite improved. I gained in flesh and strength, and steady progress continued until I was told that complete recovery was effected, and now I enjoy better health than I have for many years past. I am a wonder to all who saw me.

"It is a great satisfaction to me to bear testimony to others of the efficacy of your remedy for Consumption. I have highly recommended it in Dumfries, Moffat, and Kirkcudbright, where I reside. I am now reporter for the Dumfries Standard."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

An Extract from an Address.

By HUGH M. MATHESON, Esq.

Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN.

"I have to mingle with a very large number of young men in connection with Young Men's Christian Associations and other movements; and it is exceedingly important to be able to lead on right lines, of which they will never be ashamed, the younger members of the community who are to take our places when we are gone. And while we cannot guarantee the stability of any one, there is a very clear and distinct plan to avoid falling into habits of intemperance; and that is—to take NO ALCOHOLIC DRINK."—Extract.

WORKS BY D. L. MOODY.

POWER FROM ON HIGH; or, The Secret of Success in Christian Life and Christian Work. By D. L. MOODY. 17th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"This series of earnest and solemn Addresses bear throughout that stamp of honest, eager earnestness, which is so striking a characteristic of the writer's labours as a preacher."—Clerical World.

"Every page is full of stimulating thought for Christian Workers."—Commonwealth.

ADDRESSES by D. L. MOODY. Revised. 104th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted, and now that they are written they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made. The book is clearly printed, on good paper, is handy in form, and is sure of a wide circulation."—Primitive Methodist.

"The volume will be found of great use to Christian workers, for reading, and for distribution among the 'ignorant and them that are out of the way.'"—Methodist.

THE FAITHFUL SAYING. A Series of Addresses. By D. L. MOODY. 10th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Full of the Gospel, well illustrated, thoroughly alive."—Sword and Trowel.

"They are the fresh and earnest utterances of one who longs to honour Christ and to do good to men."—Evangelical Magazine.

"Thoroughly practical and earnestly evangelical."—Wes. Meth. Mag.

HEAVEN; Its Hopes, its Inhabitants, its Riches, its Rewards. By D. L. MOODY. 36th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Practical, full of anecdotes and point."—Friend.

"It will be sufficient to say that the book contains Mr. MOODY'S vividness of expression, illustrative anecdotes, fulness of faith and hope in undiminished measure."—Edinburgh Daily Review.

"Simple, direct, anecdotal, and earnest."—Freeman.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. Boyd, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. Robert Boyd, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By Alexander Dickson. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. Moody. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration." The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. Daniel Baker. With Preface by D. L. Moody. Tinted Covers, 1s. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." Author's Preface.

BEING NOTES OF EXPOSITION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

Obedience.

It is good to bear in mind that whatever our circumstances, it cannot be necessary to disobey God. Let us not wish for anything unless the means to obtain it be as much approved of by God as the end. (Page 140.)

Salvation, Justification, Pardon.

"How can I be pardoned?" says the poor self-condemned sinner. "How can I not pardon?" says God. The sinner looks at his sins; but God looks at his Son's atoning blood. Sinner, do thou likewise. (Page 136.)

Life of George Whitefield.

BY J. R. ANDREWS,

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"Among those in the higher ranks of life who statedly attended his ministry at the Tabernacle was Lady Chesterfield. One day, when she was at Court, the King (George II.), noticing the dress she wore, which was not such as was usual, said to her, 'I know who chose that gown for you, Mr. Whitefield; and I hear you have attended on him this year and a half.' To which she replied, 'Yes, your majesty, and like him very well.' Whitefield was pleased with her boldness, and when relating the circumstances to Lady Huntingdon, observed: 'Oh, that she, and all that have heard the Gospel, may have grace given them to speak of their dear Redeemer, even before kings!'"

PAPERS ON

CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE, LIFE, AND WORK.

BY R. C. MORGAN.

"It is a book addressed to believers, and cannot be read without much spiritual profit." Christian Progress.

"A book for quiet hours, suggestive of good and wise lessons."—Sunday-School Teacher.

"The writer shows a large acquaintance with Scripture, and though by no means perfect in its composition, the book has much in it that is calculated to enforce the truths of the Word."—The Freeman.

"We find many traces of earnest and devout study. Many will prize the work as a valuable stimulus to the inner life."—Literary World.

Calls to Christ.

A SERIES OF ADDRESSES BY REV. R. W. NICOLL, M.A.

"It is admirably fitted as a gift-book to older scholars; but to Sabbath-school teachers also we would heartily recommend it."—Children's Record.

"Force and freshness are eminently the characteristics of these 'Calls to Christ'; they are also brief to a proverb, and hence they may be of great service to an earnest evangelist who knows how to use another man's thoughts."—Kelso Courier.

"A choice book. Sweet-scented throughout with the name of Christ, it sets forth the 'old, old story' in eleven simple but explicit lines of Gospel teaching. Though on a familiar theme, it has an unobtrusive originality, and many touches of beautiful thought, which remove it far from commonplace."—Children's Record.

Institutions.

URGENT APPEAL.

"Bis dát qui cito dat."

The Parish of Eston W. Normanby, including South Bank and Grangetown, in the district of Cleveland, has a population of 18,000, consisting of Miners, Iron-workers, and small Shop-keepers. The only Church is the old Parish Church of Eston, which seats 180 people. A new Church is in course of building, towards which £3,000 has been subscribed; £1,000 is absolutely needed to complete the same. At South Bank the site for a new Church is given: the plans are passed, and tenders conditionally accepted. £2,000 has been promised towards the Building Fund, but an additional £800 is required at once to enable the Committee to commence the work. Who will come to our help in this great emergency? Cheques can be paid into the National Provincial Bank of England, Middlesbrough, to the credit of the "Eston and Normanby" or the "South Bank" Church Building Fund account; or addressed to the Rev. C. Byron Wilcox, Eston Vicarage Normanby, near Middlesbrough.

WEST BARNET CONVALESCENT HOME.—This house is opened to receive persons requiring change of air and rest, either upon their discharge from Hospital, or after any serious illness—all infectious cases excepted. Visitors may remain four weeks in the Home, and will be required to pay 5s. per week and their washing—also their own Railway fares; the return fare being deposited with the Matron, on arrival. The address of the Home is Alston-road, West Barnet, from which the High Barnet Station is about half a mile. Visitors are required to make their own beds and keep their rooms tidy. They are also expected to be present at prayers and all meals, unless by permission of the Matron—whose authority is to be unquestioned, and whose wishes are to be conformed to in every way possible. The Home is open daily (Tuesday and Saturday excepted) for Friends of Visitors to call between the hours of 11 and 4. All applications for admission must be accompanied with the name and address of some responsible person, as a guarantee of respectability, and one who would be willing to undertake all charges in case of illness or death; the application to be addressed to Mrs. Wilbraham Taylor, Hadley Hurst, Barnet.

KONIGSHEIM, WESTON-SUPER-MARE.—A temporary residence for Lady Christian workers, or those engaged in tuition, who wish to make a short stay in a quiet Christian home, at a pleasant watering-place.—Further particulars to be obtained from the Lady Superintendent.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. Bevan, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of The Christian; or to the Secretary, James Atkinson, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N. (52)

Nevile Sherbrooke; Major Owen Hay, R.A.; Lieut.-Colonel Ward, R.A.; and Rev. J. Smith, of Delhi. A Supplementary Meeting will be held in the evening, at half-past six.

INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DAUGHTERS OF MISSIONARIES. Walthamstow Hall, Sevenoaks.—The Annual Meeting and Breakfast will be held on Saturday, May 12, at the Cannon-street Hotel, at 10 a.m; when George F. White, Esq., will preside, and the venerable Dr. Moffat, with others, will be present.

SYRIAN COLONIZATION FUND.

President:—

THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

The object of this Society is the relief of Suffering Jews, in token of Christian sympathy. Nearly 200 Jews have been sent out to the East, and a settlement is being formed in Cyprus, where some of these Jews may await the removal of the difficulties which impede their settlement in Syria.

Contributions received at Messrs. Drummond's, Bankers, Charing-cross; at the Bank of England; the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Provincial Bank of Ireland; and at the Society's office, 41, Parliament-street.

E. A. Finn, Secretary.

THE COMMITTEE of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for Contributions in aid of the poorer patients and their families. The smallest Contributions in money and clothing will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee. Old coats and trousers are much needed.

FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED to carry on Mission work in connection with the Sailors' Home, Teignmouth. Further particulars will be sent, and contributions thankfully received, by Miss C. Fry, Teignmouth.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, Shaftesbury.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

MRS. WILKES proposes to be at home every Wednesday from Two till Five o'clock, for the purpose of seeing friends of Rescue Work. Trains from Liverpool-street to St. James-street Station, Walthamstow, every half-hour. "The Elms" is within five minutes' walk of the station. The Elms, Coppermill-lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

For Delicate or Backward Youths

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninteresting Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

DECISION OF CHARACTER

BOATING, BATHING, CRICKETING, NATURALISING, &c.,

Principal—Dr. Cranage, M.A., Author of "Mental Education," "Three Lectures on the Tabernacle in the Wilderness," "The Mark of the Beast," &c., &c.

Vice-Principal—Robert Weston, Esq., T.C.D.

Head Master—Mathematics: T. Woodcock, Esq., B.A., Wrangler, and late Scholar and Exhibitioner, Christ's College, Cambridge. Second Master—Classics: H. May, Esq., B.A., late Scholar of Brasenose College, Oxford; with other Masters.

Dr. Cranage's underlining aim is to train the boys committed to his care, not only in mental acquisitions, but in their whole moral and physical being; believing that as much pains and unremitting attention are required for the latter as the former. His main object in the intellectual culture is, to teach the boy to think; without omitting the positive work and hard study necessary to brace "the nerves of the mind," for the making of a scholar. Above all, Dr. Cranage desires to bring his pupils to Christ as their Saviour, and to help them to walk like Christ as their example. The boys attend with Dr. Cranage, on Sunday mornings the evangelical ministry at Christ Church, Wellington, Rev. T. L. Butler, M.A., Vicar, and in the evening the services at his Mission Hall, in the town, conducted by himself. Exhibitions, dependent on entrance examinations, are offered each April, July, and December; two of the value of Ten Guineas per annum, for seven years for boys under ten years of age; two of the value of Twenty Guineas per annum for five years, for boys under fifteen; and one of the value of Fifty Guineas per annum for boys under sixteen, for three years. GARRATTONIAN PHILOSOPHY: WHAT IS IT?

"He is not the discoverer who first utters a truth, but he who says it again and again until he compels mankind to hear him!" So said Sydney Smith.

IT is perhaps unnecessary to say that modern Therapeutic Science tends to establish the fact, that it is impossible for local symptoms and organic weakness of a chronic character to exist without a proportionate derangement or deficiency of nervous energy in the system. Our own experience is daily showing the soundness of this conclusion.

All reformed methods of healing demonstrate the folly of supposing that any class of ailments can be brought successfully under treatment without the patients' compliance with the general laws of health. Knowing, therefore, that our ailments and weaknesses subside with a conformity to natural influences, is it not logical to conclude that our first care in search of health should be to comply with such simple and easy natural conditions a invariably tend to counteract disease? Th most fruitful sources of disease approach us imperceptibly, so our recovery often follows the use of means as subtle and intangible as those by which we became ill. There are mystified ideas associated with disease as being some infectious disorder. The word literally and simply means unrest, discomfort—dis-ease; often induced by excessive mental or physical exercise, slightly deranging the healthy action of the organism as a whole; scarcely realised in its beginnings, and only recognised when the deranged condition has become fixed in some organ or portion of the body. The indications or symptoms are only the outcome of the general disturbance. For instance, coldness of feet often arises from or accompanies congestive headaches, and these unbalanced conditions are present in many constitutional ailments.

There are, however, affections which no ordinary medical compounds can cure, because their operation is limited to the alleviation or palliation of an ailment; by holding the symptoms in abeyance they modify the severity of an attack or help through a crisis, while they do not reach, and consequently cannot remove, the actual cause or causes of an ailment, simply because medicinal means are powerless to increase the vitality of the system, or heighten its recuperative power, so as to overcome the tendency to a recurrence of the attacks. In Magneto-Electricity we have, on the contrary, a natural influence which affects the cause of the symptoms, and, while gradually removing the ailment itself, eradicates a tendency to its return by rectifying the conditions under which it exists. And it is because we have at our disposal a remedy, the success of which has been chiefly among cases despaired of in ordinary medical practice, that we hold firmly by this principle, that all treatments which would be final and effective must be constitutional. This is the basis of treatment, and, to us, its soundness is very apparent in that large variety of chronic affections for which Magnetism is undoubtedly the specific. It is often an easy task to treat symptoms only, but in doing this we should do no more for a patient than the ordinary medical treatment is supposed to do. It follows of necessity that unless we restore the true balance of the vital forces by simultaneously energising the whole organism, we are not only dealing with the symptoms of disease, but with their cause.

(To be resumed.)

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. MAY MEETING NOTES.

WESLEYAN MISSIONS.

THE anniversaries of the Wesleyan Missionary Society appear to have been marked by a degree of earnestness and enthusiasm which augurs well for its further operations and prospects. Although among the latest formed of similar institutions, it has outstripped all other societies in the extent of the field it covers, the number of its members, and, with the exception of the Church Missionary Society, the revenue it expends. The total receipts for the year, as reported at the Annual Meeting in Exeter Hall the other day, amounted to £169,361, while the expenditure had been £169,446.

The chair was taken by Mr. Isaac Holden, the well known M.P. for the West Riding, who, in referring to the great success which had followed their work, said :—

Wesley found work for all his disciples. As they turned up with warm hearts, and fervent spirits, and resolute minds, he invented work for them. He had local preachers, and exhorters, and class-leaders, and prayer-leaders, and teachers, and visitors, and circuit stewards, and collectors, and all kinds of officers, so that they were like a hive of bees, all working that could work, and that could find a possible sphere of work. To that he attributed the great success of the Methodist Church, which was itself a missionary Church.

Speaking of himself and his connection with the work, he gave utterance to a sentiment worthy of regard by all members of Christ's Church :—

He had very narrowly escaped being a travelling preacher, but he had not escaped being a local preacher, and he did not understand how a youth, or an old person either, whose heart was fully under the influence of Christian feeling and principle, could refuse to give all his leisure time and a proper proportion of his property for the promotion of the Christianity which had blessed him so much.

There can be no doubt that an immense amount of power is lost on all sides by the failure of numbers of professing Christians to recognise and act upon this principle.

MANY REGIMENTS, BUT ONE ARMY.

The President of the Conference, the Rev. Charles Garrett, spoke with all his wonted energy and fire, reviewing the various departments of the Society's efforts. He touched on a point of much practical importance when he said—

It is on this platform, as well as upon our knees, that we understand and realise that we belong to an army as well as to a regiment. There is a constant danger of our forgetting that there is an army, and of imagining that our regiment is the army. When we do that, we make a great mistake, injurious to ourselves, injurious to our brother, and dishonouring to God. I rejoice in the spirit, in the advance and triumphs of the regiment. I rejoice yet more in the advance and triumphs of the army. Sir, I am satisfied that many members of the Christian Church lose a vast amount of blessing by the narrowness of their views. How many of us there are who overlook the fact that we are only one amongst many: we overlook the fact that there are a hundred Protestant missionary organisations in existence, of which we only form one. We look at the one, and forget the work of the ninety-nine. The result is often discouragement, when there should be enthusiasm and joy.

NATIVE CHURCHES.

A beautiful illustration of native devotion to the claims of Christ and his cause was furnished by Rev. S. Langdon, of Ceylon. Speaking of Morotto, in that island, as a grand old battle-ground of Christianity, he narrated the fact that the converts there had themselves erected a beautiful place of worship, and given it freely to the Lord :—

They did it themselves, without a farthing from this country. They were poor people, but they wanted the chapel, and there never was in this world any cathedral more truly consecrated to God's service by stately ceremonial and by Episcopal benediction than was that little village chapel at Morotto by the self-sacrifice and devotion of those very villagers. They were poor people. The lime-burners said, "We will burn the coral and we will bring the lime." The masons said, "We will provide the bricks and lay them in the building." The carpenters said, "We will make the woodwork;" and then there were none but the women and children, and they, God bless them! said, "We will sing." Every day was a dedication day, every brick was consecrated, and every stroke of the hammer was an act of worship; and that building rose to the music of pious Christian hymns sung by the mothers and children of that Singalese village.

The progress made among native churches toward self-supporting agencies, and the increase of native preachers and workers of various kinds, is a most pleasing and hopeful feature of missionary enterprise at the present time. This is testified to by all the societies, and indicates the deep hold which Christian truth has gained upon the hearts and minds of men in the centres it has entered and occupied. If only the Gospel of the grace of God be believed and understood in all its fulness and greatness by the natives, so that they are filled with its power, more may be expected from their labours among their own people than can possibly result from foreign agents, however earnest and well qualified they may be. Our Lord's order of things everywhere is, each convert a power for the conversion of others.

DR. PARKER'S SERMON.

One of the Annual Sermons on behalf of the Wesleyan Society was preached this year by the Rev. Dr Parker, who chose as his text the words of Christ in Luke xiii. 32. The sermon, which was an eminently characteristic one, dwelt on "Christ's view of the future." We extract two or three paragraphs specially worthy of note :—

There are two futures—the little future over which anxiety presides, the little future which sometimes the oldest will persist in paying attention to as if it were worthy of notice, notwithstanding the Lord's sharp, clear word, "Take no thought for to-morrow." Then there is the great future, over which imagination reigns. The apocalyptic future, with its four-square city, its one-pearl gates, shut neither by day nor by night, its crystal river, its cloudless heavens, its ineffable rest—by that future will the Lord of all duration constrain us, as by a gracious compulsion, to prosecute our work, bear our burdens, and sustain our injuries, as if they were the roots of our best blessings.

We all need to think more of what is set before us, and less in some respects of what is immediately present with us. "The things that are seen are temporal," and faith furnishes impulse to action by surveying with confident expectation the "things not seen as yet." The following words are very suggestive as to this :—

Christ spoke rarely and briefly of that little future; but he spoke much of the great and complete future. "Hereafter shall ye see heaven open and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of Man." He lived in the hereafter; He had his house in the beyond; "to-day" and "to-morrow" were the fields in which he toiled; the "third day" was always within his purview, and it warmed him like heaven. He shall come in his own glory and in his Father's, and that of the holy angels. "Fear not, little flock; it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

To an enlightened mind taught of God to understand the greatness of the prophetic vision referred to, the prospect set forth in the last extract for which we can find space is very inspiring and glorious to contemplate :—

Among the riches of the Christian Church are not only things present, but things to come. A nation is to be born in a day; the enemy of man is to be encoiled in chains which cannot be broken; the dead are to be raised incorruptible; death itself shall die; the grave-scars are to be smoothed out of the green earth; sorrow and sighing are to flee away, and the whole creation, forgetting its grievous overthrow and its sharp pain, is yet to stand fast on eternal pillars, and to be beautiful as a city built for God. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

THE NEGLECT OF HOME MISSIONS.

The remarks made by Mr. J. H. Crossfield at the Meeting of the United Methodist Free Churches' Annual Missionary Anniversary on Home Missions and the Home Churches strike us as being of a very truthful and timely character. They are bold and outspoken, but none too much so :—

I wish to say a word or two in reference to our suffering millions at home. I say advisedly the suffering millions. I wonder how it is that Christians cannot get at these people. They have a notion that their human sympathies are about as dead as a three thousand year-old mummy; but they are not, they are no more dead than the Egyptian wheat in the mummy coffin; and I believe it only requires the sympathy of Christians to excite in these people those sentiments which will draw them to Christ as their salvation. The great problem of the present day, it seems to me, is how to accomplish this work; and I must confess I do not thank some of you London people for sending us down to the provinces from time to time a lot of acrobats with tom-toms and fandangoes, and all the old heathenish exercises and practices, except the swinging of the hook in one's vertebræ. Jesus I know, Paul I know; I know Luther, and Wesley, and Spurgeon, and such people who preach the Gospel; but these strange men who come to us—I do not think they are working in the spirit of our Lord and Saviour.

But I need not dwell upon that point; what I wish to say is this: I think there is a great mistake abroad and spreading amongst our Christian churches, that the Church may leave this kind of work to a special organisation. I think myself, if that is not an invention of the devil, it is an invention of lazy parsons and sleepy churches. And I say, from the moment that the Christian Church neglects its Home Missions, its highest and most solemn duty to the poorest classes of the people—from that moment the Christian Church will go down. They may take great care of their kid gloves and cushions in their pews, but if they do not care for the souls of men, they have done their work, and God will sweep them away.

THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society was held last week, a number of leading men of various Church denominations assembling on the platform to join in the thankful gladness which the cheering report given by the secretaries could not fail to produce. The work accomplished by this God-honoured and honouring institution is truly marvellous. The issues for the past year from the Bible House in London have been 1,542,413 copies, and from depôts abroad 1,422,223, making a total of 2,964,636 copies, 26,091 more than in the previous year. The issues of the Society from its commencement have now reached a total of 96,917,629 copies, figures we can only state, and very slightly realising their vast significance. The total income of the Society for the year was reported to be £210,000.

The Archbishop of Canterbury was among the speakers at the meeting. His speech contained not a little worthy of remark, as indicating the catholic lines upon which he seems inclined to work in his position as Primate of the English Church. His reference to the resolve of the Committee to concede a marginal rendering of the word "baptize" in versions issued by them was clear indication of this. He said "he was glad that they had decided to insert the word 'immerse' in the margin of their Bibles as an alternative rendering of the original word. He thought they were justified in taking this step, and this conciliation, based upon the real root meaning of the word, would, he doubted not, have a good effect."

The Times of Saturday, commenting on this meeting, calls special attention to the Archbishop's eulogium on the Society's concessions to other agencies, and speaks of it in connection with the Rev. Chas. Garrett's catholic utterances at the meeting of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, as an instance of "the general tendency among the mighty religious institutions which rendezvous at Exeter Hall to efface artificial boundaries, and to interpret their mandate by the spirit rather than the letter." So long as this tendency is conservative of the doctrine of Christ, the increasing development of it is a cause for sincerest joy. The one great need for caution is found in the danger lest the spirit of concession should be allowed to override the claims of truth.

THE BIBLE IN EGYPT.

One item of the Report calls for special notice, and all lovers of liberty will think of high commendation. The work in Egypt had been somewhat disturbed and hindered by the recent war, and the depôt at Alexandria was damaged in the bombardment to the extent of £900. A claim was filed for compensation, but when the Committee found that the indemnity would have to be paid out of taxes levied upon the very people they sought to benefit, they immediately withdrew their claim. It is no marvel that Lord Dufferin should have expressed his appreciation of this act of Christian principle and high-toned sense of justice. It cannot fail to strengthen the confidence of the Christian public in the executive of the Society.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Archbishop presided at the meeting of the Church Missionary Society held the day before, Earl Cairns and the Earl of Chichester being among the speakers. General Sir George Hutchinson, K.C.B., the lay secretary of the society, read the financial report, which showed an income for the year of £225,231. A gift of £72,000 from Mr. W. C. Jones, of Warrington, was also reported, to be expended on China and Japan. These countries claim a larger share of missionary thought and endeavour than they have yet received. No part of the world offers larger or more promising fields for rich ingathering of souls than these, while the marvellous spread of knowledge and development of modern civilisation, in the latter country especially, is being so diligently employed by the great adversary for the dissemination of error, that it behoves the heralds of the Cross to be wide awake to the imperative claims of the present opportunity for sowing broadcast the seed of the kingdom. Earl Cairns spoke of the income as large, but at the same time not much for a nation which could afford to spend £120,000,000 and more in the purchase of intoxicating drinks. The Bishop of Calcutta and others spoke most hopefully of the various stations occupied by the Society in Asia and Africa.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY.

This is among our most useful and valuable institutions for spreading the influence of the Gospel, and gathering souls to the fold of Christ. Its annual meeting was held on the 30th ult., at the Mansion House, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor. The attendance was by no means so large as the merits of the Society demanded it should be. Rev. Dr. Wright, of the British and Foreign Bible Society, said that the Society he represented regarded this as one of its most useful auxiliaries, and urged that it was only right that the merchants of London and the provinces, who profited so much by the labours of sailors, should pay back something for their benefit in return. Dr. White, of the Religious Tract Society, also testified to the good effected by this agency both in our own country and abroad, large numbers of the publications issued by his own Society being distributed by its means. Mr. J. Herbert Tritton said that he had visited many of its stations, and could personally testify to their efficiency and value:—

> Every ship which left our shores must necessarily be a missionary ship either for good or for evil. One of the greatest obstacles to the spread not only of civilisation but of religion in past times had been the conduct of the occupants of the vessels which traded to foreign lands. In too many instances these men had been missionaries for evil. It was the desire of the society and of its well-wishers that every ship which left this country should be an agency for good, and that its influence should be exerted on the right side, so that when the preacher of the good news of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ followed in the wake of the sailor he might not find that an impression had been created against him.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS.

Our friend, Mr. George Holland, read his twenty-ninth report at the annual meeting held a few days ago, Lord Shaftesbury in the chair. During the year 293,000 attendances of persons of all classes had been registered, the Institution having been opened 1974 times. £1362 had been received as income, and £1320 spent on the various good works carried on. Such work as this agency performs cannot be too highly commended; it reaches quarters where no other instrumentality can be employed, and produces results which but for its efforts would be altogether lost.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST MISSIONS.

The members and friends of that hard-working and useful denomination known as the Primitive Methodists have just held their annual missionary services, which have been distinguished, to quote from their own journal, "by a goodly amount of interest, enthusiasm, and success." Their yearly breakfast meeting was held in the City Temple, under the chairmanship of Mr. Josiah Goodman, a member of the Congregational body. It appears, from statistics given by the secretary, the Rev. W. Cutts, that the Society is now 40 years old, has 56 Home stations, 178 Colonial, and 4 Foreign. The whole amount of missionary money raised in the past year was £20,105 5s. 11d. The missions themselves had raised, in addition to this, £16,760, for their own maintenance, an advance of £1640 having been made on the previous year.

At the annual Missionary meeting held in the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Mr. Arthur Pease, M.P., presided, and said that there were some respects in which the Society of Friends and the Primitive Methodists were remarkably alike:—

> They both believed that the call to the ministry and the qualification for the ministry were direct from God; and whilst they did not despise learning, they regarded the spiritual call and equipment as the most essential thing. Then they were united in believing that the ministry of the Gospel was not confined to one class or sex, but that now, as in olden times, God poured out his Spirit upon the handmaidens, and that the daughters as well as the sons were called upon to "prophesy."

Rev. W. H. Allen maintained that the cause of Christian Missions was born in the heart of God, manifested in the life of Christ, and lived in the hearts of men. It was at once the solemn charge of the Church and the spiritual weal of the world. The Rev. J. Guinness Rogers, who was among the speakers, said he honestly believed no better or more valuable work for Christ was being done in this country than the Primitive Methodists were doing. They believed with all their heart and soul in the old Gospel, and so did he.

For the Young.

LITTLE ELLEN.

THE early violets bloomed and shed
Their fragrance on the air,
And merry sunbeams, as they danced,
Brought gladness everywhere.

The birds—God's happy minstrels—sang
Among the budding trees,
And children's merry shouts were borne
Upon the gentle breeze.

But little Ellen could not share
Their laughter or their play;
Within a silent, darkened room
The little sufferer lay.

Oft had she wandered through the woods
In search of early flowers,
And found a shelter 'neath the trees
From April's sunny showers.

But now the merry sunbeams danced
And violets bloomed in vain,
For she was laid upon a bed
Of languishing and pain.

"And did not Ellen grieve," you ask,
"To leave this pleasant scene?"
No; for she sang of fairer flowers,
And fields of living green.

"Mother," she said, "I'm not afraid,
My sins are all forgiven,
And I shall see my Saviour soon,
And dwell with Him in heaven.

"I loved to sing at Sabbath-school,
But now 'twill not be long
Before I tune my heavenly harp
And sing the heavenly song.

"Mother, the flowers my teacher brought,
From her own favourite tree,
I want to take them up to heaven,
Please bury them with me.

"And, mother, you will meet me there;
Nay, mother, do not weep;
But sing my little hymn again
Before I go to sleep.

"Hark! mother, hark! I hear the sound
Of music sweet and clear,
It sounds just like the heavenly harps,
Hark! mother, do you hear?

"Look, mother, look, do you not see
The angels? they are come
To take me to the Saviour's arms;
Good-bye, I'm going home."

She ceased, and on her face was seen
A look of glad surprise;
One sigh, and she was safe at home
Above the sunny skies.

And now she roams through heavenly fields
Where flowers unfading grow,
And by the Lamb Himself is led
Where living waters flow.

She strikes her golden harp, and sings
The praises of her King,
And now for evermore enjoys
A bright, eternal Spring.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—7.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THE INNER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

"Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men to be seen of them, else ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven," &c. (MATTHEW vi.—Read to the end.)

WE come in this chapter to the Inner Life of Holiness. Here again the starting-point is in these words—YOUR FATHER. It is only as we know Him, and the deep reality of our relationship to Him, that this chapter will be opened up to us. Let us come again unto our gracious Master, who waits to declare Him unto us—sitting at His feet let us ask Him to teach us—Lord, show us the Father and it sufficeth us.

Running through this chapter are two lines of thought that become one in the deep underlying truth.

(1) The Father's Claim.

(2) The Soul's Supply.

The two rise up sharply side by side in the Lord's Prayer—"Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is done in Heaven"—thus far the Father's claim. Then comes the child's supply. "Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts as we also forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Then we reach the point at which the two unite: "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen."

These two make up the inner life of holiness. We will take them in order, asking the blessed Spirit to lead us by his light.

I. THE FATHER'S CLAIM.

Born of God, we are bound to Him, as we have seen, in the deepest, closest, most abiding relationship. This great love of our Father has its claims upon us. He appeals to us, the authority of the commandment hidden in the tenderness of the love: "My son, my purpose concerning you is that you should be holy, perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. Yield yourself to Me for the fulfilment of My purpose. Give yourself over to Me in your innermost aim and desire that in ME you may find the whole end of your being." His love claims that we seek to please Him in everything, with no side-glances at others; in all the round of our "righteousness," in our giving, and praying, and fasting, having a single eye to the glory and pleasure of our Father in heaven (vs. 1—6; 16—19).

His love would have us come close to Him, not as suppliants who knock at the outer door, not as strangers who tarry in the hall and stately courts of the king, but as his children who come right into the inner chamber of the Father's presence (v. 6).

His love claims from us that we shall not come to Him with vain repetitions, as if we doubted his love or thought we had to wring our blessings from an unwilling hand. "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him" (vs. 7, 8).

He claims from us that we honour Him as our Father, and set in the forefront of everything the glory of his name, the coming of his kingdom, the doing of his will (v. 9, 10).

His love demands that we who are called and entitled to such a lofty rank and high nobility are not to have our hearts snared and tangled here as if this were our abiding home (vs. 19, 20).

His love demands from us further, that we are not to be anxious, worried, fretting. If we are his children, and if He is our Father, we are bound to trust Him, quite sure that all these things will be added unto us. "Therefore, I say unto you, be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on, . . . Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things" (vs. 24—34).

He claims from us that in all the round of the daily life and in the midst of these commonest things—eating, drinking, being clothed, we are ever to seek first his kingdom—most eager for its treasure, most ambitious of its honours, and ever most jealous of the dignity and greatness of our King (v. 33).

This is the inner life of holiness—the whole-hearted surrender of ourselves to the claims of our Heavenly Father. He is my Father; I am his child. In all things I am to obey Him, to trust Him, to make Him glad with my love.

Let us dwell upon these claims until we come to see them in their depth and breadth, claiming every power we have and reaching to everything we do. Let us seek to feel them in the full force of their authority, and yet in all let them come to us as the tender appeal of his great love.

By these claims let us test ourselves and all the conditions of our life. We are the sons of God, and we have no business anywhere or in anything that conflicts with the will of our Heavenly Father. The student lays out his life plans for study: his place of residence; his day's arrangements; the people he mixes with; the books he reads; the money getting and the money spending—all are controlled and directed by this. All this may involve him in many inconveniences; but he makes light of them and allows himself no choice in the matter. The merchant plans his life in relation to his business: his home, his hours, his work, his very pleasures—all are made subject to the claims of the business. There are many worries and annoyances, but he takes them as a matter of course, and does not think of giving up the prosperous business on that account.

Now we are, first of all, sons of God. That is our calling and profession. We are in the world first of all to be like God. And because we are sons of God, we are to find, in this relationship, a power strong enough to order all our life's plans for the service and pleasure of our Father. Surely it is not too much to demand that such a relationship, with all its glorious possibilities, should be able to inspire us with a purpose as steady and resolute as that which the student finds in learning or the merchant in money-making.

Our Lord teaches us further that these claims of our Heavenly Father can only be met by a right waiting upon God. "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret."

The life of holiness finds its strength and beauty in the vision of God. To know God is life eternal. By faith in Christ and by the grace of the Holy Ghost we have received that spiritual life which sees God, and hears his voice, and loves Him, and speaks to Him with trustful boldness as our Father. To know more of God is to grow in holiness. And hidden heart-communion with God is the royal road to this knowledge. It is only when we have entered into the secret place of the Most High, and dwell under the shadow of the Almighty, that we learn to say aright the simplest petitions of the Lord's Prayer. It is when we see the Father in his infinite holiness, that we learn to bow before Him in true reverence, and to say, Hallowed be thy name. It is when we see Him in his supreme majesty as King of kings and Lord of lords that we pray, Thy kingdom come. It is when we prove the deep, full blessedness that there is in Him, the infinite love, the perfect wisdom, the tender pity, that we long for the whole world to love and trust and rest in Him: "Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

And to set God aright before us is to set ourselves right before God. To see his holiness is to renew within ourselves the springs of a gracious penitence; to have kindled within us an utter abhorrence of that which is evil, and a passionate longing for likeness to Him. To see his majesty is to lose ourselves in lowliness and meekness at his feet; and yet to be lifted up into the dignity of the sons of God, assured and triumphant in his greatness. To see his love is to be amazed and hurt that we could ever doubt or fear or murmur. It is to surrender ourselves a living sacrifice to Him; to find ourselves filled and fired with such a steadfast love that we hold all things for his service, and do all things for his pleasure.

God calls us up into the clefts of the rock away on the mountain top that He may make all his goodness pass before us, and we are transformed by beholding. Great swelling thoughts of ourselves come only from low and unworthy thoughts of God. Light estimate of duty cannot go hand in hand with the right estimate of God's authority. Self-seeking is cured by the clear sight of his claims. Harshness and covetousness and all uncharities are stricken for want of very breath in that Divine atmosphere of his presence.

Then out of this dependence of ours as children, and the revelation of his power and wisdom and love as our Father, comes the further prayer for bread, and for forgiveness, and for the guidance of his gracious hand. Here is at once the foundation strength and the crowning beauty of holiness—REVERENT LOVE and CHILD-LIKE TRUST. And they live and move and have their being only in the true vision of God. The observance of this precept is the very root and spring of holiness. "Enter into thine inner chamber and pray to thy Father which is in secret."

And finding God thus we take Him with us. We come down from the mount, but not alone. The eye is anointed, and we see Him; and the ear hath He opened. We come forth from the secret place, but we abide under the shadow of the Almighty. Difficulties suggest his present help. Temptation tightens our hold upon his hand. In every mercy we see his love and thank Him; in the worries and cares that meet us we come to find the opportunities for victory; in fear we shrink at his side; and communion with Him is as easy and as natural as it is blessed. There is begotten within us a spiritual sensitiveness which is quick to understand the Father's will, and delights to do it.

Does there rise before you a dreadful contrast? Selfishness and unfaithfulness having dominion over us; the scene of a wayward, foolish, stubborn child who lets go the Hand and stumbles on alone? Look up. It is to fulfil in us these very claims of our Father that Christ is come. For this, for nothing less than this, we believe in Him. "As many as received Him, to them gave He the right to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." Let us daily receive Jesus into our hearts for this power, and then daily surrender ourselves to the Father for the service and life of the sons of God.

MR. JOHN HARRIS, of the Evangelisation Society, London, has just concluded a very successful Mission at Piddington and neighbourhood.

"THE BLOOD."—1.

By the Author of "The Gospel and its Ministry."

REDEEMED by blood. Justified by blood. Sanctified by blood. Cleansed by blood. Made nigh to God by blood. Let the doctrine of the blood be eliminated, and Christianity is destroyed. Teaching which honours the blood is not philosophical. It is an outrage on human nature, and, therefore, on human wisdom and human goodness. But Christianity assumes the ruin and rejection of human nature, and, therefore, the blood is the foundation-truth on which it rests.

"The religion of the shambles," men call it. The religion of the shambles! What meaning has the taunt? The religion of Calvary must surely be, indeed, the religion of the shambles. Worse than that, even, for the shambles are for the slaughter of harmless beasts, but Calvary was the death-place of wicked men whose crimes unfitted them to live. Christianity points to a crucified Jew hanging between two nameless criminals, and, telling us that that is the Lord of Life and Glory, bids us turn from all wisdom, goodness, purity, and worth of man, and bow there for mercy and pardon through that death. The religion of the shambles, truly!

And yet this taunt needs further looking into. Is God appeased by the sight of blood? or is there any power in blood to fit men for his presence? It is impossible to hear the way the blood is spoken of on many sides without an uneasy feeling that some such thought is common. The death of Christ is intelligible: "He died for our sins, according to the Scriptures:" this all can understand. Why, then, should we speak of blood at all? Most true it is that the blood is preached and hymned too commonly in language more befitting the worship of Baal than of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ; and further, that, within the limits of propriety and truth, "blood" is often spoken of where "death" is the word which scriptural accuracy would demand. But "blood" has a meaning of its own, and by no means must it be given up.

The types of the Mosaic law are a mine of truth, inexhaustible and of priceless value, but sadly neglected; and the neglect of them is a cause of endless confusion and error. The study of these types would teach us the doctrine of the blood, and save us from all such excesses and mistakes. The general thought of blood-shedding in the Old Testament is life given up; but when we come to the special teaching of the types, the blood represented death in its application to he persons or things in respect of which the sacrifice was offered. In every sacrifice something was done with the blood after the death of the victim. In the Passover, it was sprinkled on the houses of the Israelites. Death thus passed upon all within, and thus they were redeemed from Egypt's judgment. The blood of the burnt-offering of the covenant (Ex. xxiv.) was sprinkled on the people, and thus they were sanctified. And so with every sacrifice; the blood was put sometimes on the offerer, sometimes on the altar, sometimes before the vail, sometimes on and before the mercy-seat.

But it was real material blood which flowed in the sacrifices of the Law. The question remains, what is the spiritual reality it typified? The darkening blood-stain was the shadow; what, then, is the substance?

Plain words are needed here: Witness the language too often heard upon this theme. First of all, then, let this axiom of interpretation be clearly apprehended and firmly held, that whenever the Blood of Christ is spoken of the words are figurative, and they are to be interpreted by reference to the types. To speak of the blood of Christ in any other sense, as bringing blessing to sinners, is either error or folly; and on such a theme error is vital and folly is profane. If we speak of the real material blood which flowed on Calvary, it is to mark the reality of that death as the great fact on which our redemption rests, or else to measure the cruelty and hate of men in presence of deepest love and grace displayed through sufferings that transcend all human thought. But that blood, though it cries for vengeance on a guilty world, has no power to bless or sanctify. Were it otherwise, the Roman soldiers, who tore with cruel nails those sacred hands and feet, would have become the holiest and most blessed of mankind. Material blood! This is to confound the substance with the shadow, and to degrade it to the level of the shadow. It is to use the types, not to throw light upon the glorious realities of the New Covenant, but to obscure those realities by dragging them back into the darkness of the Old.

The use of the blood in the sacrifices of the Law had a twofold significance and purpose. By it the persons or things on which it was put became identified with a death already accomplished; and further, that death, from being a bygone fact, became a present reality, in virtue of the memorial of it which remained—the sprinkled blood. For example, on the night of the Passover in Egypt, the blood-stain on the doors was the pledge and proof that judgment was already past for Israel's firstborn; and it was this just because it was at once the memorial of the appointed sacrifice, and the means of the Israelites' identification therewith. And so in every type. The blood meant this, and nothing else. The recognition of this will make havoc of some of the blood-theology of our hymn-books, but it will increase our intelligence and deepen our confidence in the truth.

True reverence will show itself in sobriety, if not reserve and delicacy, of language on this subject. But yet in these days of mingled scepticism and extravagance in religion, plain speaking is desirable. The idea of bathing in a fountain of blood is as opposed to Scripture as it is repulsive to our innate sense of what is worthy of God. It is due in some measure, perhaps, to the erroneous, and now discarded, reading of the anthem of the first chapter of Revelation, but mainly to Cowper's hymn, which is based on putting a wholly false meaning on the words of the prophet, "There shall be a fountain opened for sin and for uncleanness." Zechariah's prophecy refers to the great sin-offering of Numb. xix., where running water which had passed over the ashes of the sacrifice availed to cleanse. But this fountain is for the "house of David" and "the inhabitants of Jerusalem." It is for the covenant people, the redeemed. Access to that fountain is for those who already have redemption, and redemption is "through his blood."

Not that the "real material blood" which flowed on Calvary has touched us. This is to go back to the darkness of the shadow, instead of grasping the spiritual reality it prefigured. The death of Christ on Calvary, though infinitely precious to God, and the foundation of every blessing to man, will bring no blessing save to those who become identified therewith. No faith of man can add to the efficacy of that death, nor can unbelief detract from it. But unbelief can separate the sinner from it, and faith avails to identify him with it. The sinner who believes in Christ becomes united to Him in his death. In the Law this identification of the sinner with the sacrifice was taught by the sprinkling of the blood; and the Gospel has adopted the language of the type, so perfect in its simplicity and yet so pregnant with the deepest meaning.

HYMN OF PRAISE.

(Suggested by a Sermon of Rev. James Spurgeon.)

WHAT shall I render to my King
For love that passeth thought,
For bounty that made haste to bring
The succour I besought?
For special grace by God bestowed,
For marvels of his care,
For mercy that was on the road
When rose the voice of prayer?

What shall I render unto Him,
The tested and the true,
My sunlight when the world grew dim,
My fount of comfort new?
What shall I render for his sake
Who folds the clouds away,
And bids me into singing break
At dawning of the day?

O Lord! Thou knowest I have nought;
I gave myself of old,
Yet if the life thine own hath bought
Some secret fetters hold,
If of the price some hidden part
Be covered from thy sway,
Now, Master! search my yearning heart,
And claim Thou all this day.

I have no offering meet for Thee,
But hand and heart rise up
To take thy royal guerdon free,
The King's salvation-cup;
I dare not only praise afar,
I come, my God! to prove
How tender thy compassions are,
How wonderful thy love.

What shall I render, Lord of Heaven?
Only a prayer made strong
In memory of the blessings given
To helpless faith so long:
I call anew upon thy Name,
I ask yet more and more,
Thy depths all-infinite I claim,
Oh, love that hast no shore!

DESTITUTE CHILDREN IN LIVERPOOL.

AS was stated at the Liverpool Convention on April 26, the Committee of Miss Birt's Sheltering Homes wish to add a wing to the house given them by Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., in order that it may accommodate 100 boys for training previous to emigration. They also find it necessary to enlarge and repair the old premises for girls. The estimated cost altogether is £3000. The treasurer, Mr. Joseph Thorburn, 13, Rumford-street, Liverpool, will most gratefully receive any donations for this purpose.

The work done by this little Institution has so increased in favour that applications on behalf of destitute and orphan children from, not only Liverpool, but all parts of the country, cause the Committee to feel that if the necessary support can be obtained to extend the work, and enable them to benefit more children, they are manifestly called to "go forward" and "enlarge their tents." As so much depends on the thoroughness of the short training given to the children before emigration, the Committee feel that they will have the sympathy of all in their endeavours to provide suitable homes in which this training may be carried on.

BANFF, SCOTLAND.—A three weeks' Mission was conducted in this town, in the latter end of April, by Mr. Joseph Cleworth, of the London Evangelisation Society. Crowded meetings were addressed—the first week in the Free Church and the second and third weeks in the Parish Church, the audiences latterly increasing to 1700. Close on 300 anxious inquirers came into the Church Hall to be spoken to, and many of them now profess to have entered into the joy of believing.

MR. AITKEN IN BAYSWATER.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

THE Mission at St. Matthew's Church is just drawing to its close, and it is with much thankfulness to God that we look back upon this season of great and real blessing. Mr. Aitken and his helpers have not been allowed to labour in vain; but we have all rejoiced together in a happy harvest time.

The attendance from the first has been satisfactory, especially in the evenings. On the Sundays the church has been crowded to its utmost capacity, and many have been unable to obtain admission. At every service one could not help noticing the deep interest, the fixed and reverent attention, the moment the preacher began. Often there were times of breathless expectation as some great argument was approaching its climax, then a thrill of real emotion as the Gospel went home to many hearts with a power never felt before. The intense realisation by the speaker of the tremendous importance of his subject seemed to render any outward demonstration impossible. The very scoffers seemed to be subdued by a strange power which they confessed they felt and wondered at, not knowing, as we know, that it was none other than the presence of the Holy Ghost.

Speaking as one who never heard Mr. Aitken before, I should say the chief characteristics of his preaching are close, keen reasoning, an intellectual grasp (which one can only call magnificent) of every detail of the plan of salvation, added to a deep conviction of the truth of every word he utters, and the unspeakable importance of its acceptance by his hearers. In almost every sermon his plan has been first to convince the reason, to show by history, human experience, and the soundest philosophy, that these things must be so; by a deep examination of Scripture and a close adherence to Scripture language, to prove what is really revealed by God; and then by setting forth God's great love in Jesus, to break down the pride of opposition and win an entrance for his message into the heart. Few who attended the services will forget the power with which Mr. Aitken spoke of the great doctrines of Christianity: the Atonement, Justification, Faith, Repentance, Sanctification. Each was made the subject of a sermon, and was presented in an aspect so clear, so reasonable, so majestic, that by the inherent force of their own truth and beauty they seemed to compel assent. The difficulties, too, which so often are a stumbling-block to the educated, received powerful but loving treatment. Mr. Aitken seemed to have known and felt all the difficulties that the most tried of his hearers had experienced.

Perhaps at no service was the power of God's Spirit more visibly present than at the afternoon service for men only on Sunday week. Some nine hundred men listened for an hour with deep attention while Mr. Aitken spoke to them from Rom. vi. 21. With a power which seemed an inspiration he set before them the dignity of life in Christ, and all the glorious possibilities of our nature. He showed what a failure a godless life must be, false to God, to society, to ourselves. With an insight into modern ways which was almost fierce in its scathing intensity, he showed the unutterable meanness of a life of sin. It was wonderful to watch the congregation. Curiosity deepened into interest, interest into conviction, till, as the preacher told of the consequences of the two lives, the glories of heaven, the unspeakable woe of the lost, and then of God's great gift of eternal life, a wave of emotion passed through the congregation, and a great half-smothered sob seemed to rise from the whole church. Many remained behind seeking help, and many went away rejoicing.

What are the results of the Mission? It is not for us to catalogue conversions; God knows. But if evidence goes for anything at all, and changed lives may testify to changed hearts, then are we sure that many entries have been made in the great catalogue of heaven, even the Lamb's Book of Life.

On Thursday evening last (Ascension Day) Mr. Aitken preached on "The Exaltation of Christ," taking for his text Phil. ii. 9—11. It was one of the grandest and most inspiring utterances to which we have ever listened. Nothing less than a verbatim report could give any adequate impression of its force and beauty. All that our limited space permits is a skeleton outline, written while the discourse proceeded.

The preacher began by pointing out that this exaltation of Christ was not merely a return to his former glory, but was the assumption of a position that belonged to Him solely by virtue of the life He lived and the death He died upon the earth. The Apostle dwells on the various descending steps by which He divested Himself of the Divine glory, humbling Himself to the lowest point. There are two things that we must bear in mind in order to understand the Atonement of Christ, and have an intelligent as well as a hearty faith with respect to it. In the first place, we must never forget that Christ was as truly God when He hung upon the cross as when He sat on the throne. If He were less than God, where would be the justice of God in permitting the sins of one human being to be laid upon another? The ordinary idea of substitution, as of one school-boy receiving the punishment of an offence in another's stead, or of an innocent man in the army taking the place of a condemned culprit, entirely fails to bring out the truth. Such a thing, instead of being an illustration of justice, would seem, in the latter case, to be simple murder. Our moral sense of equity would be grievously offended if we could see any parallel to this in the sacrifice of our Lord. But when we understand that He who bears the penalty of the broken law is Himself divine, this objection loses all its force. God has surely a right to do with Himself as He pleases, and wrongs no one in this wondrous plan for the expiation of human guilt. Much of the unbelief of the period arises, no doubt, from a misunderstanding of the Atonement. This view of it is well fitted to remove such misapprehensions.

Again, we must bear in mind that just as He was truly Divine so He was truly human; it was in his proper manhood that He suffered and died beneath the overwhelming load of human guilt. Do you ask if there was not something due to his perfect and sinless manhood? It may seem at the first glance as if God cared more for sinful mankind than for his own beloved and only Son. The devil has from the beginning tried to convince men that there is some incompatibility between perfect obedience to the will of God and the highest happiness of his children. How is it that the very One who showed a unique obedience to that will was made to undergo such unique sufferings? Is it possible that Satan shall find an argument in the very facts of the Atonement? In the most critical test case that could be imagined it has been demonstrated to all intelligences that the will of God, whatever it may seem, is in reality the good and perfect and acceptable will that his Word says it is. We are asked in this text to view the Son as He sits on the throne of glory by virtue of his earthly life and death. So that Satan's master lie has met with its master refutation. No obedience to the will of God on our part could entail such sacrifice as in the case of Jesus, and yet who can say that He has not gained in every way, even as far as He is Himself concerned?

What, then, shall be his reward for all that He submitted to and endured in the days of his flesh? What shall be his reward for his steadfast march to the cross, and for the drinking of the full cup of sorrow to its utmost dregs? In the splendour of his devotion He moves forward till He could say, "I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do." What shall the Eternal Father give to the Son that was not his by right from all eternity? Shall He be set on the throne of the universe? Nay, but that was his from the very beginning. What peculiar gratification can be thrown into the scale for all those untold agonies He suffered on our behalf?

Some of us know something of the delights of true benevolence to others. To lead a soul into the enjoyment of peace is ample reward to us for any trouble we could expend. What, then, must have been the unspeakable joy in the heart of Christ when He found that He had procured the redemption of the world! Now, as the result of his cross and passion, all power in heaven and earth is given unto Him, and He can say to his followers, "Go ye therefore and preach the Gospel to every creature." The salvation of the poor malefactor, even in the very article of death, was but the first fruits of what the Son of God has been reaping from that day to this. Oh, how one loves to think of it! He sits on his mediatorial throne that He may save every poor sinner who comes to Him and puts their case into his hands. That is his reward, and will continue to be, on through the ages of the future. Who are these on the throne, side by side with Him? Ransomed men, once sunk in the depths of hell, but now sharing the glories of the Deity on his throne. As the Bridegroom looks on his ransomed Bride surely He has his full reward. He shall one day see of the travail of his soul, and be satisfied—SATISFIED! Then will He say, "Not in vain did I sow in tears, and pass through Gethsemane. Now the harvest time has come, and the ripe ears of earth are gathered into the granary of the Lord."

Will you rob Him of his reward? Are you going to deny Him this well-earned interest for all his pains and tears? How shall we reward Him? Are we to give Him no recompense for all He endured on our behalf? We are gathered round his feet on this memorial of his Coronation Day. Oh, sinner, is there no return that you can make to Him? He did all this that He might have the joy of saving thee—the deepest joy that could fill his heart. Is it not a shame to rob Him of his rights? Think of the tenfold deep damnation of our guilt, if after all that waste of love we render it necessary for Him to say: "If thou, for whom my blood was shed, hadst but known the things that belong to thy peace! But now they are hid from thine eyes." That means hell to you; think of what it means to Him. He invested his very life that He might reap the interest of the joy of saving you. Will you not say to Him, "I have given Thee pain and sorrow long enough. If it can give Thee joy to save a wretch like me,

> "Take my poor heart, and let it be
> For ever closed to all but Thee;
> Seal Thou my breast, and let me wear
> The pledge of love for ever there."

THE OPEN-AIR MISSION.

THE quarterly meeting of the Open-air Mission was held on Monday week, at the Mission Hall, Queen Anne's-gate, under the presidency of Mr. George Williams. Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, founder and director of the China Inland Mission, who has just returned from a four years' visit to China, delivered an address, entitled "Personal Testimony to God's Faithfulness, as seen in the Rise and Progress of the China Inland Mission." Mr. Hudson Taylor commenced by saying that before he first went to China he studied medicine, so as to be fitted for the work; soon after his arrival he found his knowledge in that respect very useful. He became the chief of a hospital, where he worked both for the soul and the body, and, he was thankful to think, did much good. He had several times been in China, and had succeeded, after much hard work and severe trials, in organising quite a large band of missionaries. In every province but one throughout the land there was one or more resident missionary. The early workers trusted in the Lord, and He had blessed their efforts and provided the means to carry out the work.

After seeing his colleagues at work he returned to England, but four years ago once more repaired to China, and to his great satisfaction found the work had spread enormously. The Christian converts might now be counted by hundreds in the different provinces, and these converts took every opportunity to convert their associates. As the result of their work, they now had a great many schools, churches, and other institutions throughout the country, and the work was still progressing.

OVERCOMING FAITH.

By Mr. D. L. MOODY.

FAREWELL ADDRESS TO CONVERTS AT LIVERPOOL.

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—1 JOHN v. 4.

WHEN a man is converted, the warfare begins. When I was first converted, I made this mistake: I thought the battle was won, and the crown of victory was already in my possession. It was not long before I found out that there was a difference between being saved and getting the crown. Salvation is the free gift of God, but the reward must be worked for. If a man has no desire to work for God, it is a pretty good sign that he has not been born again. The first impulse of a young convert is to work; he wants to bring someone else to Christ.

Many young Christians think that when they are converted their old nature is taken away, and they get a new nature instead; they fancy they are never going to be troubled again with their old sins and temptations. Let me warn you seriously on this point. Do not suppose for a moment that there is to be no conflict in the Christian life; let no man deceive you here. The Christian life is not like laying down the oars in the bottom of a boat and floating into heaven on the current. You have to go right against the stream of an ungodly world.

I very often have had people come to me a few weeks after they were converted and say they were so disappointed. They tell me they never had an impure or a blasphemous thought until they were converted; now they were afraid they had never been truly converted because such thoughts came flashing into their minds. But that is no sign they have not been converted; indeed, it is a pretty good sign that they have really been born of God. If you have been taken out of Satan's kingdom he will do all he can to get you back again. He will dart these thoughts into your mind, and try to make you believe you are not saved. But it is the unsaved man who has no conflict with himself; he has a very good opinion of himself. The Pharisee went up to the Temple, as some one has said, to brag and not to pray. He struck a balance once a week and the Lord was in his debt every time. He looked with scorn on the poor publican. He was not at war with himself. The publican was an altogether different man. He had got a view of himself in God's looking-glass, and, like Job, he loathed himself and cried out: "God be merciful to me a sinner."

A MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

When the new life begins then conflicts begin between the flesh and the spirit, the lower and the higher nature, that which is carnal and that which is spiritual. Every man who is born of God has got two natures. I do not know of anything that helped me more than the discovery of this fact. For the first five years of my Christian experience I was a mystery to myself. But I afterwards made this discovery, that when I was converted God gave me a new nature. I became a partaker of God's nature, and the one being contrary to the other the warfare began. Then I understood myself. I believe many young converts get discouraged when they find the old temper or some old besetting sin coming back after they thought it was dead. As I have already said, do not let Satan make you believe that you have never been converted. What you want is to judge yourself and confess your sin. "If any man sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." That was spoken to believers. Justification is one immediate act of God, but sanctification is a life work. Many people think they can jump right into a perfect Christian character at once; I do not understand that it is so taught in the Scripture. People, I think, make a woful mistake when they expect perfection from young converts. If a young disciple makes a slip or does some un-Christian act, they say: "I told you so; he professed to be converted three months ago, and now see what he has done." So they discourage the young believer. If we would only do as the Master would have us do—cover up the fault instead of proclaiming it abroad, and try to restore the erring one and encourage him, not in his sins, but in confessing his wrong doing, we should be doing God's work; many who get discouraged and go back to the world would become a great blessing to the Church of God. If a man goes wilfully into sin, and does not repent of it, but lives in sin, that is a good sign he has not been a partaker of the Divine nature; but if he protests against it, and confesses it, that is a sign he has truly been born of God.

"Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is He that is with you than he that is in the world" (1 John iv. 4). If I have got Christ in me I am going to overcome the world. He was the only Man who could say at the end of life's journey, "I have conquered the world." Death and the grave tried to conquer Him; the law tried it; the world, the flesh, and the devil, all tried it; but He stood there as the victor over them all. If I have got Christ in me I am going to overcome. I must either conquer the flesh or it will conquer me. How can I overcome it? By having Christ formed in me the hope of glory.

By faith we live upon the Son of God day by day (1 Gal. ii. 20). If you young converts get an idea that you are strong enough to walk without Christ you will soon go back into the world. It takes the same grace to keep us every day as it did to save us. We do not get grace enough to last all through life; we must draw upon this Bank of Grace as we need it day by day; so we live by faith.

EXAMPLES AND WARNINGS.

"Because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith" (Rom. ii. 20). The only way that we can stand in the Christian life is by faith. I have noticed that if a man becomes unsound in his doctrine, he will soon be unsound in his practice. Let us hold right on by simple faith in the living, risen, personal Christ, who is our Righteousness. If we stand in Him, is He not able to keep us? He made Joseph to stand in a darker day than that in which we live; He made the three Hebrew princes to stand in Babylon, and He is able to make us stand. But, if any man thinks he can stand without the grace of God, he is on slippery ground. I am told that Edinburgh Castle was only once captured in all the history of Scotland. They thought that on one side of the castle it was so steep that it could not be scaled, so they did not put sentinels to watch there, and thus the enemy climbed up and took the castle. When a man thinks he is strong in one particular point of his character, he is sure to fall right there. I was wonderfully impressed with this thought some years ago. I went right through the Scriptures, and found it was true. Abraham was noted for his faith, yet this was the very point at which he fell. His faith failed him when he went down into Egypt and he lied to Pharaoh about his wife. Moses was noted for his meekness, yet he was kept out of the promised land because he lost his temper. Elijah was the boldest man of his day. He stood like a giant on Mount Carmel and defied the prophets of Baal. But when Jezebel said his life should be like the life of these prophets, away he went like a coward and struck for the wilderness, lay under a juniper-tree and wished himself dead. It was a good thing the Lord did not let him die there; but this incident in his life is a warning to us. Peter was the most forward of the twelve Apostles, and yet one day he followed Jesus afar off, and a maid frightened him out of his loyalty to his Lord. I would like to have stood next to that maid on the Day of Pentecost; she must have been greatly amazed at the change that had come over him. "Why, this man declared to me, with an oath, that he did not know Jesus, and now he stands there charging the Jews with having murdered Him." He had got his eye off the Master, and down he went. I used at one time to think that if I had stood twenty years there would be no danger of my falling. I have got over that idea long ago. Our only safety is in fixing our eye on the Master, and keeping close to Him. If you think you are strong enough to stand alone you will soon have a tumble. May God help us to realise that in ourselves we can do nothing.

Another thing: "We walk by faith, not by sight" (2 Cor. v. 7.) My experience is that the most unhappy Christians are those who are all the time walking by sight instead of by faith. We find two good illustrations of this in Joseph and Jacob. Jacob was one of those who could only trust God as far as he could see Him. In Egypt he said to Pharaoh, "Few and evil have the days of the years of my life been." What a testimony to give to a heathen king! If Jacob had gone through a prison as Joseph had done, what an amount of whining there would have been. What a grandson he had in Joseph! They put him in prison, but it is said "the Lord was with him." They had to shut up the Almighty with him in the prison. Joseph would rather be in the prison with God, than out of the prison without Him. It is a good deal better to know that you are right with God; even if you have to suffer for it a little while down here. So we live and stand and walk by faith.

There is another passage I want you to notice. "Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked" (Eph. vi. 16). The devil may fire a good many darts at us, full of poison and burning hot, but God is able to quench them all. No weapon that is formed against us shall prosper. What we need is to be able at all times to look up and say, "Lord, I stand in the faith of thy dear Son."

OUR THREE GREAT ENEMIES.

Now let us look at our enemies. It is well to know who they are, and how strong they are. Let us not make the mistake of under-estimating the strength of our enemies. We must sit down and count the cost. We read in the Word that our three great enemies are "the world, the flesh, and the devil." I used to think the devil was my worst enemy, but the more I got acquainted with the flesh the more I saw that it was the worst foe I had. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you;" but as someone has said, if you resist the flesh it cleaves to you. A good many Christians are troubled about other people, but I have more trouble with D. L. Moody than with anyone else. Those who are all the time living on the failings of other Christians will have enough to do at home if they will only take a good look at themselves. We are to "put off the old man with his deeds"—all his deeds, not a part of them. That means a good deal. I know more of God's heart than I do of my own. "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; who can know it?"

Then there is "the world"—fashion, pleasure, and many other things that could be mentioned. Nearly everything we see around us has a tendency to draw us away from God. We often excuse ourselves in doing certain things by saying, "Well, you know it is the custom." A man said the other day, thinking he was quoting from Scripture, "When you are in Rome you must do as the Romans do." That was not the way Daniel acted in Babylon. He "purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat nor with the wine which he drank." He went right against the current of the ungodly world. If you young converts would live a godly life, you will often be called upon to go against the customs of those who are round about you. I find that in some parts of the country it is the custom to drink a good deal of whiskey at funerals. I believe a good many start out in their wedded life by getting drunk. I would advise you not to touch the cursed stuff that causes other men to stumble. "Oh but," they say, "you must not interfere with people's liberty." A man told me that some time ago, and I was ashamed to see a preacher of the Gospel sitting at his table who, I think, had a little too much. I was protesting against it, when he said that some men had to take the drink as medicine. I said, "Why don't you put pills on the table? Why not go to the drug store, and provide your guests with a whole assortment of medicines?" We have heard quite enough of this plea of "medicine." It will be a grand day for England when the stuff is swept out of the country. Let us dare to be peculiar. Christ died that He might make us a peculiar people. We want more peculiar people who will go against the evil customs of the day.

Let me call your attention to some of the

with which we have to contend. There is appetite; if a man has been addicted to strong drink, he has got to overcome that. It is written that Christ came to destroy the works of the devil. I believe that this appetite for strong drink is the work of the devil, and we need supernatural power to destroy it. I am so thankful that men are waking up to the fact that Christ can destroy it, root and branch; many are getting a mplete victory over this foe. Then "the lust of the flesh" is another inward enemy that has to be overcome. Many a young man is being ruined by this accursed sin; he has not got complete victory over it. I would say to you: Keep as far as you can out of the way of temptation. Flee youthful lusts, as you would flee from burning coals. The way of the strange woman is the shortest pathway to hell. If any young convert has been in bondage to this sin, and is unwittingly brought into temptation, let him cry to God for help and deliverance, right there on the street.

Temper is another form of the flesh that has to be fought. Many need help here; they are irritable, and lose patience. Paul urges the believer to be sound in patience as well as in faith and in charity. I see many who are wearing the blue-ribbon badge. Did you ever think of the badge that Christ gave his disciples to wear? It was the badge of love one towards another. By this badge men were to know that they were his disciples. You may make a great outward profession, but if you have not got love for your fellow men that is a sign that you are declining in the Christian life. I have known many people who would have had a noble Christian character, except for this "fly in the ointment," that spoilt it all; they were so apt to lose their temper. It wonderfully crippled their influence for good. We are to be sound in patience, otherwise the world will not believe we are really the children of God.

Then there is covetousness. I have known of men who became so covetous in their declining years that they could hardly let a penny go out of their hands. The love of money was eating out their very manhood. They look down on the drunkard with scorn, but I believe in the sight of God covetousness is as great an evil as drunkenness. Let us be on our guard against it. Another enemy is deceit. We need to be delivered from all guile, and to grow in all the graces of the spirit. What a terrible enemy is jealousy. This Spirit of "who shall be the greatest?" has wrecked nearly every good cause in the world. One of the strongest proofs that the Church of God is divine, is that it has not been wrecked long ago by this cursed spirit of jealousy among those who profess to be the followers of Jesus Christ. May God root it out of all our hearts, so that we are willing to be accounted as nothing. Let us have the spirit of John the Baptist, who said, "He must increase but I must decrease." When the Jews sent an influential committee to ask him who he was he did not say he was the greatest born of woman, the mighty forerunner of the Messiah. He just said he was Mr. Nobody, only a voice crying in the wilderness. And as the morning star disappears with the rising of the sun, so John the Baptist faded out of view when the Sun of Righteousness was revealed,

SELF CONTROL.

Every temptation that we overcome will help us to overcome another; on the other hand, every temptation that overcomes us leaves us weaker than before. Let us look to God for strength, that we may get self-control. One of the greatest victories we can achieve is the control of self. He that cannot control himself cannot control other people. I believe God has placed us here that we may rule, and if we can rule our own spirits He will give us greater work to do. He that is faithful in few things shall be made ruler over many things. God's reward for work is more work.

I do not know what He is going to do with us hereafter. If we are to be kings and priests unto God we must have kingdoms to reign over. We must be here at school and in training for something higher. It may be that the other planets are inhabited, and perhaps God is going to send his people to rule over them. However that may be, we are here on probation; God is training us for future usefulness.

BE NOT EASILY OVERCOME.

It is one of the saddest things to see how little it takes to overcome some people. A man told me some years ago that he had given up Christian work. I asked what he had given it up for. He said he joined the church and went to work, but he had only been at it a little while when a deacon in the church "threw cold water" on all he had done. So he stopped work. "Shame on you," I replied, "cold water never hurt any one yet. Why, they used to throw Christians into the fire in the olden days." Oh, may God help us to stand; we can afford to be ridiculed and persecuted for a little while. Shall the servant be above his Master? They slandered Him, and misjudged Him, and lied about Him, and called Him by every conceivable name; shall we not be content to have the same treatment as He received? "If any man will live godly in Christ Jesus, he must suffer persecution." If the world has nothing to say against us, Jesus Christ will have little to say for us. Do not let us seek the world's popularity. I suppose Lot was a very popular man down in Sodom, but he did not get a single convert there for twenty years. If we are going to overcome the world we must get to work for God. Let us see that we work from a right motive. The fire shall reveal every man's work, of what sort it is. If any man's work abide, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved so as by fire" (1 Cor. iii. 13—15). I firmly believe that many Christians will get into heaven so as by fire, the way that Lot got out of Sodom; there will be no reward whatever for them.

After a recital of the eight "Overcomes" mentioned in the Book of Revelation, Mr. Moody said, in concluding his stirring address: "Let us reconsecrate ourselves to God to-night; then, let us go out and work for Him. Everything done for Christ shall be as lasting as eternity."

EMIGRATION.—The Secretary of the Manchester Y.M.C.A., Mr. W. H. Newett, being on a visit to the United States and Canada, purposes to make inquiries in the western towns with respect to openings for young men and young women from this country. If any of our readers who are specially interested in this subject wish to communicate with Mr. Newett, he may be addressed, care of the Secretary Y.M.C.A., Milwaukie, Wisconsin, U.S.

LADY MISSIONARY PHYSICIANS to the women of India and other heathen lands are now in great demand. Women only can gain access to the women of these lands. There are hundreds of young ladies in our own land that are longing for "something to do." Here is an open door. But this is no field for sentimental, make-believe work. There must be first a whole-hearted, self-denying consecration of the whole being to the Lord; secondly, a natural aptness for, and love to the work itself; and thirdly, a period of special education and training, which costs time and money. Are Christian parents prepared to give their daughters to this service?—"House of Rest" Monthly Paper.

AMONG THE EAST-END MASSES.

WRITING to The Record, Rev. Thos. Richardson, of Stepney, says:—

"We have recently commenced a Church Army, which is the outcome of the continuous evangelistic efforts of past years, merely a step downward towards the masses by those already working for God. Bands were used twenty-five years ago to win the masses to parochial gatherings, and they were successful. It is only of recent date that it has been found out that we can just as easily get the masses to strictly spiritual gatherings if we use the same means. On Easter Monday afternoon, our little Church Army of soul-loving, Christ-loving men and women, including my own wife, and three daughters, walked through a portion of our parish with banner, a few instruments, and drum. A drunken man heard the drum, woke up, came to the meeting. God spoke to his conscience; he came again at night, and was spoken to by myself, and, if I know anything of the working of the human heart, hat man was at changed man from that day. He continued to attend, and on the Sunday night he brought his wife, who, with her babe in her arms, bowed before God to seek that blessing, as she added, "which my husband has got." Both had been soaked in drink; both ascribe their waking up to the drum.

"We began by holding Gospel Temperance meetings on Sunday evenings; these were so blessed we easily fell into Salvation meetings. One Sunday night, as the Army were singing at the hall door, a careless young woman was arrested by the tambourines. She listened, and heard a short address at the door on "Behold I stand at the door and knock." She entered, was arrested, and she herself came out of the midst of the meeting and presented herself an unhappy sinner, anxious to be spoken to about Jesus. My wife spoke to her. This young woman, having been taught the Scriptures as a child, is now a most useful member of our Army, and ready to go out to bring other souls in. Take another case, a young man, who evidently wished to disturb the meeting. Let him tell his own tale:—'I have been an infidel, and attended many of the meetings at the Infidels'-hall; I have gone into the Salvation Army meetings to disturb them, and was taken before a magistrate and fined. I came to this meeting for the same purpose. I was spoken to, and I said I did not believe in a God, but I was fond of this kind of music, and then I heard the soldiers testify; and I was walking with a man down —— Road and he dropped down dead, and I asked myself, if I was ready; so now I stand up to confess that God has changed my heart, and I want to live for Jesus.' I merely mention these as samples out of not less than sixty in two months, all of whose names and addresses I have."

CIVIL SERVICE PRAYER UNION.—The first meeting of the Dublin branch of this union was held on the last day of April in the parlour of the Christian Union Buildings, simultaneously with the London gathering. There was a good attendance, under the presidency of Captain Lefroy, of the High Court of Justice, several departments being well represented; the proceedings were characterised by much earnestness and evident enjoyment. The Dublin branch promises to be very helpful to the service in that city.

THE HOUSE OF REST, both at its central house at Kilburn and its seaside branch at Eastbourne, is for the exclusive benefit of Christian workers, missionaries, and all well-accredited labourers in the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The work is supported by the freewill offerings of the Lord's people; and all subscriptions should be sent to Miss Mason, House of Rest, Kilburn, N.W. Continue to pray for this work. There are many Missions which, in the nature of things, necessarily make a greater stir in the world than this, but there are none that have received more manifest tokens of the loving favour of the Lord. All who desire the spread of the Gospel throughout our Home and Foreign Mission fields, and who cannot themselves enter upon this service, can do something to cheer the hearts and strengthen the hands of those whose lives are devoted to the work of the Lord.—Monthly Paper.

Notes and Comments.

THE many friends in this country of Messrs. Moody and Sankey will be glad to learn, from the telegraphic announcements in Monday's papers, that the Alaska arrived at New York early on the morning of Sunday, "all well."

Dr. Edmond, in his address, last week, as Moderator of the Presbyterian Synod, expressed a truth, often lost sight of, when he said, "Next to faithful preaching in the pulpit (if next in this regard) is the sound teaching of our code of praise. Happy the church whose pulpit and pew, in sermon and in song, are in harmonious evangelical accord." Very often the hymnology of the church is far from being clear and pure in its teaching, and great care needs to be exercised in the choice of hymns to be adopted for general use. The principle involved in the well-known utterance, "Let me make the ballads of the nation, and I care not who makes its laws," has a force of application here.

The death of Dr. Connor, Dean of Windsor, adds another to the long list of bereavements which Her Majesty the Queen has of late been called to mourn in connection with her household and immediate circle of devoted servants and friends. He had only been a few months in the office he held, having succeeded the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley last autumn; and he was, we believe, specially chosen for the post in accordance with the Queen's desire. The late Dean was a warm friend and advocate of the temperance cause, and has left behind him that precious heritage, the memory of a good name; he will be remembered with regret for his loss, and esteem for his character and work, by all who knew him.

An important meeting was held at the house of Lord Mount-Temple the other day in connection with the Victoria-street Society for Protection of Animals from Vivisection. Among the speakers was the Bishop of Oxford, who urged the evil effects of the absorbing interest upon the operator, from whose mind, he quoted a vivisectionist to show, compassion must be banished. Lord Coleridge spoke strongly on the matter, and said—

> He came there because he wished to say that if it was manly to torture unresisting animals it was a manliness he had no desire to share. If it was childish and sentimental to stand up for those who could not protect themselves, and who were given us to have dominion over by God, it was a childishness and sentimentalism for which he was content to bear the scorn of men of science.

A meeting, in the interests of the same question, has just been held at Exeter Hall in connection with the London Anti-Vivisection Society. Surgeon-General C. A. Gordon, M.D., C.B., declared that—

> He found a larger number of medical men in opposition to vivisection than perhaps the public were aware. After reading the literature on the subject pro and con. extending over a number of centuries to the present day, he had come to the conclusion to oppose the practice, because he had observed that whatever in favour of it had been written by medical men had been more than controverted by other writers, and also because he found that so-called discoveries made by vivisection could be obtained by other means.

Dr. Sinclair Paterson's assertion that "the morale of the human race stands before the knowledge of the race," is one worthy of universal acceptance, and goes to the root of the whole matter.

We would remind our London readers of the great demonstration to be held in Hyde-park on Monday next, in favour of the Sunday closing of public-houses in England. We hope the occasion will serve as a rallying-point for the forces that are being arrayed against this deadly and prevalent evil.

A circular letter addressed to the friends of the Repeal of the Acts bearing on the question of social purity has been issued by Mrs. Josephine Butler. It sounds a note of praise for the evidence of answered prayer, which has been furnished by the recent vote on the subject in the House of Commons. Its principal object, however, is to urge the necessity of following this up by bringing all possible pressure to bear upon Parliament to carry into legal effect the resolution passed. Efforts in this direction must not be relaxed; success in the present must only stimulate zeal to work on until the desired end is secured. Petitions to this effect should at once be sent in.

Orders have been issued by the Government to discontinue the police supervision hitherto exercised under the above Acts in the garrison towns of Plymouth, Chatham, and Portsmouth, so that it appears to be their intention to carry out the spirit of the resolution lately passed. Their action, however, is severely criticised and questioned by some opponents of the resolution, so that Mrs. Butler's suggestions are by no means uncalled for.

Prince Bismarck has been credited with a scheme for inducing the great European powers to reduce their armaments, and retrench their war expenditure and lessen all round their military preparations. Such a step would indeed be a welcome fact in the history of our times could it be brought about. But we fear such a scheme, desirable as it is on every ground, belongs more to the realm of vision than to that of practical politics. The spirit of aggression in some quarters, and of thirst for revenge in others, mingled with the mutual suspicion and jealousy one of another which widely prevails, makes any such prospect one of remotest contingency, so far as it can be the result of human statescraft and earthly policy. "The Prince of Peace" alone can effect the radical change in the world which a general disarmament of forces would require in order to its accomplishment. Before his presence "wars shall cease unto the ends of the earth," and nations shall "beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks."

The Millennium is to come, perhaps it is nearer than many think, but Prince Bismarck is not likely to prove its herald, or human legislation its means. At the same time, the subject is one well worth looking at, and a discussion of its possibilities by all means to be encouraged. Much might be done to soften asperities, and to prevent needless bloodshed, if a better understanding could be produced among the nations as to each other's purposes and motives.

In connection with this subject, we may draw attention to the forthcoming Prophetical Conference at Wimbledon, May 30 to June 1 inclusive. It is now some years since a large Conference has been held in the metropolis on the Second Coming of our Lord. The gathering at Wimbledon will serve to reawaken public interest on a topic that should ever be present to the Christian mind and heart.

The study of prophecy has been cast into the shade very much by the extravagant and foolish assumptions which some of its exponents have made. The meeting convened at the Cannon-street Hotel last week by a person named Frederic Boyce, calling himself an authorised servant of Christ, furnishes another illustration of the danger there is of letting loose the reins of imagination, and of going beyond the plain statements of the Word of God. The meeting was poorly attended, and after listening to the address of the convener, a resolution was carried to the effect that Mr. Boyce was under a delusion, and that the meeting had no reason to regard him as being in any way specially qualified to speak on the subject. It is needful to remember that it is to the "sure word of prophecy" itself, and not to any human expositors of it, "we do well to take heed as unto a light shining in a dark place."

The annual invitation to the Mildmay-park Conference appears in our columns this week. The subject chosen for contemplation is of vital and all-absorbing interest and importance — "Union with Christ." This is, as the divisions made for the three days' meetings, indicate, the Ground of Security, the Secret of Power, and the Source of Fruitfulness. A change of programme is announced for this year's proceedings, inasmuch as the afternoon meetings on behalf of various societies are to be discontinued, with the exception of two general assemblies in the large hall on behalf of Jewish Missions, and of those to the Heathen world.

Probably the gain in concentration of thought upon the topics for conference, and in more time being allowed for meditation and prayer, will compensate for what many will feel to be a loss, in reference to the awakening and deepening of sympathy and interest in the many branches of Christian service usually advocated, and brought before the notice of the visitors. Anyway, we devoutly trust that large measures of Divine influence and blessing will rest upon the arrangements made, that as heretofore, and in yet larger degree, the week may be one of hallowed joy and power for good.

While some of the existing hospitals are standing in urgent need of funds for carrying on their work, there is talk of erecting yet another for the large district covered by North London. The desirableness of this can hardly be questioned, and, considering that the cost is only estimated at about £40,000, there ought to be very little difficulty in providing for this, and also for the necessities of all similar institutions. The enormous wealth of our Metropolis is fully equal to any such demands, without the slightest sense of burden, if only the vein of benevolent sympathy with suffering and sorrow could be effectually struck. The concurrence with the movement of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, Lord George Hamilton, and other well-known members of various circles of social and religious influence, will, doubtless, ensure its success; and tens of thousands of those resident in the district who feel the need will rejoice at the relief thus afforded to the 100,000 sick persons said to be always present within their borders.

Her Majesty the Queen has issued a Royal Proclamation instituting an order of special honour to be conferred on those who have been distinguished for kindness and self-denying toil in nursing the sick and wounded of our Army and Navy.

A decoration styled the Royal Red Cross, consisting of a cross enamelled crimson, having an effigy of the Queen in the centre, and the words Faith, Hope, Charity, emblazoned upon the arms thereof, and attached to a dark blue riband, edged red, tied in a bow, and worn on the left shoulder, is to be conferred on all ladies, whether subjects or foreign persons, who are recommended for such distinction by the Secretary of State for War. It is expressly provided that if any wearers of this badge should by their conduct become unworthy of it, their names should be erased from the register of those thus honoured, and that by the order of the sign-manual of the Sovereign.

Names at once rise to the memory belonging to some who richly deserve such recognition at the hands of their country and Queen, and, doubtless, this well deserved mark of honour will help still more widely to develop the spirit of womanly compassion for suffering, and devoted ministry to sufferers in times of need.

We may well turn our thoughts for a moment to consider the gracious and condescending Lord, who, though King of kings, deigns to regard with acceptance and delight any acts of service and love rendered to his disciples for his name's sake. Higher distinction far is that conferred by Him upon every faithful minister of kindness and compassion to his tried ones, though not so conspicuous to the eye of sense. Let us be reminded of his loving words, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me," and again, "Whosoever shall give to one of these little ones a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward."

We have been asked to say that a weekly meeting for prayer is held in Dublin to seek for Divine blessing on the Medical Mission work there. The promoters earnestly desire all Christians who see this notice of the fact to join them in prayer that God would increasingly bless them in their efforts to reclaim inebriates from both the upper and lower classes of society, and that He would graciously direct and prosper the remedies employed for restoring the health of dispensary, hospital, and private patients, for whom special prayer may be requested from time to time.

It is a good sign when the enemies of truth begin to express alarm at the efforts made by its friends to establish and advance its power. From letters which have recently appeared in The Freeman's Journal, the Roman Catholic organ in Ireland, the work of the Irish Church Missions there would seem to be telling with good effect. Referring to the results by which those agencies have been followed, a priest of the Romish Church says: "The evil has assumed such gigantic proportions that our entire strength will have to be put forth for its suppression. It is silently sapping the foundations of faith in this city, and in many parts of the country. Its sleepless activity, and our supine sluggishness, have already reduced nearly every Catholic interest in the city to a state of critical peril." It is a deep cause for thankfulness that such words should have a foundation in fact, and we trust that the agents of these Missions will take heart from such statements made by their opponents, and labour all the more devotedly to pull down the strongholds of error, and to exalt the Saviour's name in the land.

It is to be feared that these Missions, in common with other institutions, find the condition of Ireland, conducing as it does to impoverish many who were formerly able to contribute to such objects, adverse to the maintenance of their stations and agencies. It can only need to be known what kind of work they are doing, and how successfully they are doing it, for those who have means at their disposal to come to their aid and help them to extend rather than diminish their operations. Ireland's one great hope and chiefest need is, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Popery has much to do with the poverty, crime, and disorder, which prevail in our unhappy sister isle.

It is a clear evidence of a genuine work of grace, when a convert, under the influence of his new experience, is led to make restitution where he has wronged any before his conversion to God. A pleasing and commendable instance of this has just come under our notice. In our list of donations to various objects in last week's issue appeared, under the heading, "Conscience Money," three sums of ten shillings each. The donor some years ago was sent by his master to change a £5 note when the shopkeeper by mistake handed him £1 too much. On his way back he hesitated what to do with this amount, and at last yielded to the temptation to keep it. Since his conversion he has repeatedly tried to find the owner, but without success, and now has given 30s. to the Lord's work, as an act of restitution and acknowledgment of his fault. It is worthy of note as a lesson to others not to yield to similar temptations.

The British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews recently sent an address of fraternal greeting and congratulation to the venerable Dr. Franz Delitzsch, of Leipzig. The following extract from his reply, which is published in this month's Jewish Herald, is singularly touching and expressive, as coming from a scholar of such eminence, and a man of such wide renown in the Christian world:—

> The address with which you favoured me on February 23 has deeply moved my heart. The address begins with a eulogistic review of my life and work, but not without giving more glory and honour to God than to his unworthy servant and instrument. If I have achieved anything that is good, it was God who did it through me. I am fully conscious that all I have been permitted to do has been marred in his holy sight by the corruption and weakness of my sinful nature, and has required the sprinkling of the blood in order that it might please God. Therefore, all honour and glory be ascribed to Him alone.

Truly the man of God is never so great as when he is little in his own eyes, and never more exalted than when he sits lowly at his Master's feet.

Once more, in answer to earnest and united prayer, the Lord has appeared in our midst as a nation, and caused his name to be magnified in connection with endeavours to prevent legislation on the side of error. The defeat of the efforts made to pass the Affirmation Bill is a cause in itself for devout thankfulness. As a party triumph it is worthless; indeed, it cannot obviously be regarded as a party triumph at all. The majority was composed of not a few who, on any other question than this, would have been found voting on the other side. But as a moral victory, it is to be hailed with gratitude to Him who once more appeals to the nation, and indicates his readiness to be its Guide and Benefactor still. As a rebuke to Atheism and its pretensions, we can but rejoice in the defeat of the measure, which all along we have striven to show was opposed to righteous rule and the Divine glory. Right glad should we be to see an Affirmation Bill brought in which shall be free from any possibility of complicity with atheistic sentiment, or aid to atheistic influence. The oath would be better removed than preserved, but an affirmation may as well be based on a principle of avowed acknowledgment of the Divine Being as an oath. And it is this we strenuously maintain that our legislative assembly should continue to assert: that, in spite of all its defects, it proceeds on the principle of belief in the grand fact that "The Lord reigneth."

MAJOR POOLE AT KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.

THE Mission conducted by Major and Mrs. Evered Poole was brought to a close on Monday, April 30. It has aroused the town and neighbourhood in a way that many people considered impossible. The enthusiasm which attended the meetings from the first became so earnest and intense that the crowds who thronged to the drill-hall could not be accommodated. An ever-increasing number had to be turned away nightly.

The number of those who signed the pledge and donned the blue is considerably over four thousand, three-fourths of the number being entirely new pledges. Amongst these many are known to be cases which had been given up as almost hopeless before the Blue Ribbon Mission came. For some weeks previous to the Mission prayer-meetings were held every week, and after it began two prayer-meetings were held daily. The marvellous blessing vouchsafed was therefore the natural result of earnest waiting upon the Lord.

The most enjoyable portion of the meetings were the after-meetings, when more prominence was given to the glorious Gospel of the blessed God. That the "old, old story" has not lost its power over men's hearts, when simply and faithfully declared, was proved by the ever-increasing number who stayed to these meetings. On the last Sunday of the Mission some 600 or 700 must have stayed behind to hear Mrs. Poole's short address. Many of the Christians in Kingston who have for years been praying for the outpouring of the Spirit upon the neighbourhood rejoiced in this answer to their prayers, and thanked God that He had begun to glorify Himself in their midst.

Major and Mrs. Evered Poole are now in Frome conducting a similar ten days' Mission there; they are followed by many an earnest prayer that God will richly bless "their work of faith and labour of love."

A LETTER TO NURSES.—Miss Skinner, of Bath, has written a "Friendly Letter" to nurses of the sick (Jarrold & Sons).

CHILDREN'S FRESH AIR MISSION.—Its objects are very simple, and commend themselves to all who desire to better the condition of the poor children in our great city. The president, Rev. E. Canney, Vicar of Saffron Hill, and others similarly interested in the condition of the poor, carefully select sickly children who are pining for the fresh air which they are unable to obtain. By the co-operation of residents in the country we then arrange with cottagers to take these children for a three weeks' visit, at a charge of 5s. a week per head; last year by this simple organisation 269 children were sent to various country villages. The good thus done to these little ones, both in body and mind, can hardly be exaggerated. We are making great efforts this year to extend our operations, and the supply of sickly children is unfortunately unlimited. Our operations are limited solely by the contributions we obtain. I am sure the response to this appeal will be encouraging to those who are working this effort in the poor districts of London. A report has been prepared, and I shall be happy to forward it to any who may desire further particulars.—Yours faithfully, WALTER HAZELL, Treasurer.

MILDMAY PARK CONFERENCE, 1883.

JUNE 27, 28, 29.

BELOVED Christian Friends, — Another Mildmay Conference is at hand. Again, if it be the Lord's will, it will be our privilege to meet together as children of the living God, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, to worship, and, in the power of the Holy Ghost, to wait on Him from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, and who still says as of old, "Gather the people together, and I will give them water."

We have indeed proved in the past how faithful our gracious God has been to his promises. Great as have been our failures, numerous as have been our mistakes, He has not failed us. Whenever we have come together, owning the blessed name of his well-beloved Son as our one bond of union, He has met with us. We thankfully remember how wonderfully the unity of the Spirit has been preserved in our gatherings. We have proved by happy experience how true it is that when brethren thus dwell together, there the Lord commands the blessing. "The Lord hath been mindful of us, He will bless us."

The subject proposed for consideration at our next Conference is one which we trust will be found to intensify this brotherly unity, since it is that of "Union with Christ." It is only as we realise how intimate, how vital, how eternal is union with Him, who is the Head, that union with the members of Christ—the unity of his body, the Church—becomes to us an equally glorious reality. The closer we draw to the Centre, the closer do we draw to each other.

It is as "The Ground of Security," "The Secret of Power," and "The Source of Fruitfulness," that we propose to meditate upon this wondrous theme, wondrous indeed since it was the purpose of the all-wise God before the foundation of the world, and is to be manifested in a coming eternity to his praise. We ask your earnest and believing prayers that the Holy Ghost may prepare our hearts to enter into these deep things of God with reverence, faith, and understanding, and that He may Himself take of the things of Christ, and show them to us in mighty power.

You have, perhaps, already heard that it has been judged advisable to discontinue this year the side meetings connected with various Christian enterprises, which have of late been held in the smaller rooms and in the gardens. The multiplication of these meetings, although bringing many phases of work for Christ before those who attend the Conference, and thus no doubt productive of good, has, it is felt, tended rather to distraction than to that concentration of thought, which is so desirable when gathering together to wait upon the Lord for a definite purpose; and as it would have evidently been impossible to make a selection between the numerous equally important societies which apply for time and space, it became necessary to decide that no such side meetings should be permitted.

We are sure that you will believe that this step has been taken, not from any want of sympathy with the efforts of the Christian friends interested in any or all of the special objects which have been advocated, but from the conviction that the main object of the Conference—worship and edification in the truth—will be better attained by restricting the proposed engagements of the three days to these purposes. The gardens and smaller rooms will therefore be devoted in the afternoons to Bible-readings and prayer meetings, and thus opportunity will be afforded for more real conference than is possible with the numbers assembling in the large Hall in the mornings and evenings. Meetings in connection with the Jewish question and the claims of the heathen world will be held in the Conference Hall in the afternoons of the first two days.

To this our annual gathering—the 14th Mildmay Conference, the 27th from the commencement at Barnet—a gathering recalling hallowed memories to many hearts, and destined, we trust, to be the scene of rich spiritual blessing to us all, we now invite you.

Oh! that we may come together to meet with God. He loves that his people should seek his face, sit at his feet, and partake of the provision of his house. Our necessities, the necessities of the Church, are indeed great, greater perhaps now than ever, as the perilous times of the last days close in upon us, while at the same time the opportunities of Christian enterprise call for greater separation and more thorough sacrifice. But He is nigh unto all that call upon Him, and still says, "Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it." May He grant us all prepared hearts, and then we shall not come together in vain. May our Conference of 1883 be more to the praise of his glory than any that have preceded it. May it be a "time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord."—We remain,

Yours affectionately in Christ Jesus,

S. A. Blackwood, Cavan,
Jas. E. Mathieson, H. C. Nisbet,
Trustees of the Conference Hall.

SUBJECTS OF CONFERENCE.

Wednesday, June 27.—Union with Christ—The Ground of Security.

Eph. i. 4; 2 Cor. v. 14; Gal. ii. 20; Rom. vi. 8, vi. 4; Eph. ii. 5; 2 Cor. v. 21; Col. iii. 3; Rom. viii. 1; Eph. v. 30; John xiv. 19; Rom. viii. 30.

Thursday, June 28.—Union with Christ—The Secret of Power.

Col. i. 18; Col. ii. 10; Eph. iv. 8; Matt. xxviii. 18, 19; Luke x. 19; Luke xxiv. 49; 1 Chron. xxvi. 8; 2 Tim. ii. 1; Eph. vi. 10; Eph. iii. 16; Micah iii. 8; Phil. iv. 13.

Friday, June 29.—Union with Christ—The Source of Fruitfulness.

Rom. vii. 4; John xv. 5; John xv. 4; Rom. xi. 18; Hos. xiv. 8; Gen. xlix. 22; John xv. 5; Phil. i. 11; Gal. v. 22; Col. i. 10.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Tickets are not needed except for reserved seats. These may be secured both for the morning and evening meetings, on payment of 2s. 6d. for each day. Postal orders to be sent to Mr. James E. Mathieson, Conference-hall, Mildmay-park, N.; these may be sent as received without being made payable at any particular office. Ministers desiring to be present can have a ticket for a reserved seat (NOT TRANSFERABLE) on application. Application for tickets to be made to Mr. Mathieson, and a STAMPED and fully addressed envelope to accompany each application. Envelopes should be about 5 inches long, by 3½ wide, in order to cover tickets, with lithographed plan of hall and seat marked.

MACCLESFIELD.—A nine days' Gospel Mission has been held here by Mr. Henry Thorne. Taken altogether, the mission has been highly successful; besides an encouraging number who have professed to find the Lord, it is felt that many have been deeply impressed. A "Service of Praise" held on Monday evening formed a fitting conclusion to the services, and was the most interesting, as well as profitable of the series. It is hoped that the Mission will lead to the reorganisation of the local Y.M.C.A., which has for some time been languishing beneath a heavy debt; already a large portion of this burden has been removed.

LINCOLN APRIL FAIR.—Efforts to spread the Gospel amongst the thousands of people who annually attend this fair were energetically put forth by the local branch of the Y.M.C.A. Some 15,000 tracts were distributed, and open-air meetings held nightly, large and attentive crowds gathering on each occasion. The earnest preaching of Mr. Peter Wallis—sent down by the Open-air Mission, London—was very effective; Gospel solos were sung by the secretary. On Fair Sunday, a free tea was given to the showmen and their families, under the auspices of the Temperance Society, and three Gospel Temperance meetings held in the Circus. Upwards of 100 persons "donned the Blue," many of them being showmen.

THE LAFORCE ASYLUMS.—Sir,—As I am now in this country pleading on behalf of the John Bost Institutions at La Force, permit me to ask you to rectify a statement respecting them in your valued paper published on April 12. The legacy referred to is likely to be much less than there stated, and will not come into possession till the death of the testator's widow. Unfortunately the will is contested, and we may never receive anything after all. We are in special need of help just now, as we have important works of enlargement and repair proceeding, which have still to be provided for, and the needs of our orphans, invalids, and incurables are always pressing.—Yours faithfully,

Pastor Rayroux,
Successor to John Bost.

UNTIL THE END.

By MARGARET J. PRESTON.

TO do God's will—that's all
That need concern us: not to carp or ask
The meaning of it; but to ply our task
Whatever may befall;
Accepting good or ill as He shall send,
And wait until the end.

What if a spire of grass
Should dare assert itself against his power,
And question wherefore He withheld the shower
Or let the tempest pass
To shred its stem and pour its juices out,
Or shrivel it with drought?

Each atom God hath made
Yields to his primal law obedience true,
Whether it be a star, or drop of dew,
Forest or fern blade.
Should one resist, the world would feel the spell:
"Behold! a miracle!"

If Nature thus can bow,
With acquiescence absolute, profound,
Before the mysteries that gird her round,
Nor ever disallow
The pressure of the Hand above her, why Should not this conscious I?

Wherefore is man so loth,
Without presumptuous quest into the cause
Of this or that, in God's inviolate laws,
To trust, as Nature doth,
Content, although he may not comprehend,
To wait until the end!

SYRIAN COLONISATION SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the friends of the above society, instituted some fifteen months ago for the relief of the persecuted Jews from Russia, was held at the residence of the Earl of Shaftesbury in Grosvenor-square, on Saturday, April 28, being the anniversary of his eighty-second birthday. There was a good and influential attendance.

Mrs. Finn, the secretary, gave many interesting, though harrowing, details of the sufferings of the afflicted Jews. Some 20,000 of these poor people have lately passed through Hamburg alone on their way to America, where and in London the society did all in its power to help them. Many of them were sent to Latakia, in Syria, but as difficulties from the Turkish Government have arisen, the society now proposes to locate many in the island of Cyprus, where a suitable tract of land can be obtained.

At the close of the meeting his Lordship made a few short but very interesting remarks. One was that since the time of Antiochus Epiphanes he did not remember having heard or read of such extended calamities as those they were suffering under Russia. He added that help tendered to them at present in their deep sorrow would, he believed, do more than anything else that could be conceived to touch their hearts, which might cause them to turn to Him they had so long rejected. Such a turning of the Jewish people towards Christ and his Gospel would probably be more effectual in advancing that cause so dear to all true Christians than all other missionary activities combined.

SOLDIERS IN SINGAPORE.—Our Lord and Master is "establishing a good work in us" in drawing souls to Himself by means of a Soldiers' Bible-class, held at Miss Cooke's (of the Chinese Mission), and Bible-classes held in the schoolroom at Tanglin Barracks. Some thirty to forty attend, the majority being converted men, many through the instrumentality of these meetings. Would your readers kindly assist by gifts of illustrated tracts, British Workman, and like publications. They may be addressed to the undersigned, who will undertake their distribution. Commending this work to the prayers of your readers,—I am, yours obediently, A. I. Bridges, Schoolmaster,

MR. McALL'S MISSION IN FRANCE.*

IT was a great pleasure to welcome Mr. McAll at Mildmay at the meeting held for his Mission on April 4th, and to hear him speak again in his own simple but telling way of his most interesting and important work in Paris and the provinces of France.

MR. DONALD MATHESON, who presided, said that sympathy in preaching the Gospel, and not controversy, was one of the characteristics of this Mission. He remarked also on the simplicity of the work. It had been begun and was carried out in a simple, natural way, adapting itself to circumstances, and going down to the people. A shop was taken, the goods and furniture turned out, a few chairs put in, and a man sent to preach the Gospel in the plainest possible manner. This was their manner of proceeding.

Mr. McALL began by saying that when he last stood in that room, just a year ago, he had by his side his colleague, Mr. Dodds. Little did he think how soon his beloved fellow-labourer would be taken from him. He had scarcely known him more than a few hours before perceiving how his heart was given to the cause of Christ. During the last few weeks of his life, it had especially seemed as if his one desire was to fulfil the work of his Master.

Though the standard-bearers might fail, the Lord was guardian of his own work; and of this they had had many proofs during the past years. Never in times past were there more in Paris and the provinces disposed at least to listen to the Gospel. Indeed, the calls to work were more urgent than ever. There had been an unparalleled effort to cry down religion; and thus people may have imagined that the work was hopeless. There was much to deplore; but there was much cause for encouragement also.

The following incident would exemplify what he had said. It was their custom to hire occasionally large ball-rooms, where atheists were in the habit of meeting, and they had done so again this year. One hall had been hired for three, another for six nights. One evening the speaker was addressing an audience of 700 people, chiefly men, on the existence of God, when the wife of a shoemaker, who had his shop under the hall, came to the man at the door, and said, "I thought there was a meeting to-night." "Yes, there is." "Then the hall is empty?" "No, indeed!" "I don't believe it: whenever there is a meeting, there is such a noise that we have to stop business and shut up the shop." "Will you walk up and see?" There, when she came to the door, she saw a large gathering of people listening in silent attention to the Gospel.

A year ago there were seventy stations: there are now eighty, those at Marseilles and Corsica, under Mr. McAll's former helper, and now his coadjutor—M. Sailliens, having been added. There have been no other additions, simply because there has not been the means. The only way in which new ground has been broken up during the past year is this: French pastors have said, "We want to help. If you can give us a Mission Hall, we will do the rest." This had been done, and so the work had been extended. Their Mission rooms seat between 1300 and 1400 people. This year the attendances have amounted to half a million, 40,000 more than last year.

Mr. McAll then took us on an imaginary visit to one of the stations. It was in a demoralised district, in the neighbourhood of Champ de Mars. It had been at first a discouraging station, but was now most encouraging. There are two public Evangelistic services on Thursday and Sunday evenings (and on Sunday evening, at the close of the ordinary service, an after-meeting); a Bible-class, conducted by a Lutheran pastor, attended by from 60 to 100 people (with respect to which the pastor had said it was the most encouraging part of his work); a meeting for working women; a free Dispensary and Medical Mission twice a week; a system of visitation; a free library; a Sunday-school; and a weekly meeting for children.

A short time ago Mr. McAll was at this very station, and after the meeting was shaking hands with the people at the door, when a workman and his wife referred to Mr. Dodds. "I owe everything to that dear friend who has left us," said the man; "he was my father in Christ." His wife chimed in; "I owe everything to Lord Radstock, when he was taking meetings in the Wesleyan Chapel."

In connection with the same station, a poor man died not long ago—an itinerant knife-grinder. He came to the Dispensary in great darkness, but soon manifested anxiety about his state before God, seeing there was something in Christianity which he did not possess. He was missed after a time; and it was found that he had been taken to one of the hospitals. Here he was urged to see the priest, which he steadily refused to do, asking, instead, to have "the gentleman from the Dispensary" sent for. For this he was turned out; but in that hospital, away from anyone to teach him, with no aid except his Bible, he had found Christ. He died soon after, the very last word on his lips being "Jesus."

In the Mission at St. Etienne there are three stations. When Dr. Burrowes was about to leave for Marseilles to take charge of the Medical Mission there, at the meeting which was held to bid him farewell 250 stood up to attest their resolve to live for Christ. Eighty of these have joined the Free Church of that place.

Dr. NEWELL, an American gentleman residing in Paris, who has joined the Board of Directors recently established in connection with Mr. McAll's Mission, dwelt upon two or three characteristics of the work.

(1) It was natural; it had started in a natural way, and had advanced step by step. The extent to which it was still to be developed must depend very largely upon the Christian people of England and America.

(2) It was in harmony with the existing churches, having the support and sympathy of the French pastors, and in turn assisting their work. Dr. Newell gave an instance of this which had just come under his notice, and which he said even Mr. McAll had not heard of. A lady living at Orleans attended Pastor Wheatcroft's ministry, but after a time absented herself from the services. On inquiry it was found that her daughter, only eighteen years of age, so persecuted and ridiculed her for her religion that she had been able to bear it no longer, and to avoid annoyance had given up attending public worship. This daughter happened soon afterwards to be on a visit to Marseilles, and there, while passing by the room where one of the services was being held, she was attracted by the music and singing and went in. So impressed was she that she went again, and soon was rejoicing in the knowledge of Christ. On her return home, she told her mother she had become a Christian; and now both mother and daughter are attending the ministry which had once been despised.

(3) Its influence upon the French nation. A quiet work was being done in many directions. A gentleman met some people in a railway carriage, and began to talk to them on the subject of religion. The reply was, "We don't know whether we are Protestants; but we are Christians, for we have received Christ." It appears that they had bought a Bible from a pedlar, and thus had learnt the way of life.

The people had elegant churches. What they wanted, and what this Mission supplied, were Mission Halls.

* During Mr. McAll's recent visit to London we were unable to give any lengthened account of the various meetings he held; we are therefore all the more glad to transfer to our columns this interesting notice that appears in the current number of Service for the King (2d. Shaw & Co.)

HOMES FOR WORKING GIRLS IN LONDON.—The Countess of Aberdeen's annual tea-party to the residents of the various Homes was held on Thursday evening (over 260 were present) at Gordon House, 8, Endsleigh-gardens, N.W. The Earl of Aberdeen presided at a social meeting afterwards, and addresses were given by the Rev. Dr. M'Ewan, Mr. John Shrimpton, Rev. Canon Spence, and the Hon. A. F. Kinnaird.

EVANGELISATION IN BADEN.

IT cannot be denied that the sad picture drawn by the Berlin correspondent of The Times on the occasion of the national day of fasting and humiliation is but too true. There are, on the other hand, cheering indications that better days are dawning upon our Fatherland. While, on one side, wickedness of every kind is assuming alarming proportions, there is also among the well-disposed a growing desire for, and longing after, a better state of things. Many are beginning to open their eyes to the fact that, after all, the only remedy against the growing evil might be a return to the pure religion of Jesus Christ.

When it was first proposed that we should have a Mission here, few understood what was meant. However, the increasing interest manifested as the work progressed, and the various testimonies of thankfulness to those who conducted it, amply proved how much it was appreciated. As Dr. Ziemann, together with Pastor Stockmayer, proclaimed during the space of three weeks, night after night, the truth as it is in Jesus, many were led to accept Him for their Saviour, and to surrender their hearts and lives to Him as their King. The Town Council kindly placed a fine hall at the disposal of the Evangelists, free of charge; and though, as a rule, it was the "common people" that came and heard gladly, yet not a few of the aristocracy were seen, night after night, some of them professing to have found peace through the blood of Jesus.

One evening especially will ever be memorable in this blessed work. Dr. Ziemann had invited those who were really anxious about the salvation of their souls, and willing to make a full surrender of themselves, to a Bible-reading in a smaller hall. At the close of a very clear exposition of the way of salvation, a leading citizen of the town arose and bore testimony to blessing received. He was quickly followed by others, till at last, as by one mighty impulse, almost all present moved to the front, and then and there solemnly dedicated themselves to their Lord and King. The sight was almost overwhelming, especially to those who feel and realise every day how hard the Germans are to be moved. That the surrender in most cases was true and real has since been fully proved, by the sacrifices which have been made in support of the "Mission," or otherwise. One baker has begun to close his shop on Sunday—a thing almost unheard of in Germany. It is a matter of great thankfulness that so many men, and young men, came out for the Lord. Towards the close of the "Mission," a good number responded to the call of the Evangelists to stand up and bear witness to blessing received.

There is life springing up all around. Numbers have been added to the Church; while the Christians have received a fresh impulse to go forth and work in the Lord's vineyard. Bible readings, and other work, are being organised, and we hope especially to continue the work among children which Dr. Ziemann began. We are much indebted to the Children's Special Service Mission for a liberal grant of picture leaflets in German, which are a great attraction, as well as for pecuniary help to hire halls for children's meetings. On the whole we have met with much encouragement.

Freiburg in Baden. M. RÖMMELE.

A NEW HALL.—An interesting meeting was ately held on the occasion of the opening of Bliss Hall, in Leighton-crescent, Kentish Town, N.W., in connection with the London Sacred Song Association. A sale of fancy and useful articles was held in support of the work; and in the evening a public meeting was held of friends interested in the new undertaking. We understand part of the building—an old-fashioned and roomy house standing behind Leighton-crescent—is shortly to be opened as a Christian Home for young men in business, many of whom will be glad to reside in a place where they may enjoy the privilege of Christian society and the opportunity of Christian work. The Hon. Sec. is Herbert A. Farley, 48, Paternoster-row, E.C.

SUPPRESSION OF THE OPIUM TRADE.

THE annual meeting of this society was held on Wednesday week at Exeter Hall, under the presidency of Sir Joseph Pease, M.P. There was a large attendance.

Rev. Storrs Turner, the secretary, presented the report, which stated that they could not report any decided progress in their long controversy with the Government. The immediate work of the society had been steadily prosecuted during the past twelve months. About seventy-five thousand publications had been issued. The society had to thank Mr. Broomhall, of the China Inland Mission, for the publication, independently of the society, of two editions of "The Truth about Opium Smoking." Several fresh auxiliaries had been formed during the year, including those at Gloucester, Bristol, Norwich, Eastbourne, Falmouth, and Hastings.

Rev. J. Hudson Taylor moved: "That this meeting deeply regrets that Her Majesty's Government, by moving the previous question on April 3 last, declined to accept the principle of Sir Joseph Pease's resolution, which asserted the right of China to the entire control of the opium trade on her own territory." The speaker, who was very cordially received, said he was thankful to see so large a meeting to consider this important matter. He was satisfied that it was only necessary for the public of England to be more fully acquainted with the merits of this question to stir within the hearts of the people of this country such an interest as would compel them to bring powerful influences to bear upon the Government that would oblige them to face the question of the Indian revenue. Many persons were already deeply interested in the question, but after very close observation of the state of things in China, he was prepared to say that there were very few indeed who had any adequate idea of the great magnitude of the evil. Even the African slave trade, terrible though it was at last seen to be, was not so serious as that by which China was now being injured. They were all rejoiced to see Canon Wilberforce to-night, the grandson of one who fought so bravely against slavery. Very thankful would they all be if he would give them his assistance in putting down this evil. It was now thirty years ago since he went to China, and as a medical missionary he had come into close contact with the evils caused by opium. When he had a hospital into which some of the smokers were brought, the strength of the habit by which they were bound could be seen, and indeed it was beyond the power of language to describe. As the founder and director of the China Inland Mission, he had been brought into close contact with all the provinces of China proper, for they had missionaries in most of them. During his visits to these brethren, he had their opinions on the subject, and he was consequently in a position to speak with some authority upon it. It was not easy to exaggerate the malignant character of the evil. There were missionaries on the platform who had spent long years in China, and he believed their opinion would entirely coincide with his own as to the blunted and deadened consciences of those enslaved by this habit. The grave question to be considered was, What is England doing in this matter? The answer was that hitherto its action had been evil; but something at least had been done. In Shanghai, for example, the authorities had closed every shop. If China had the power that was used elsewhere, this question would soon be settled. In conclusion he told of a somewhat startling retort given to one who was telling of the progress of the Gospel in China, by a listener—"Ah, yes! but who brings us the opium?"

Canon Wilberforce, who was received with loud cheers, in seconding the resolution, said that if it were wrong, as Mr. Hudson Taylor had shown, to smoke a single grain of opium, was it not something savouring of a deadly national sin to pour hundreds of chests of this poison into a country unable to resist the mischief? When Mr. Taylor had referred to the struggle preceding the abolition of the slave trade, he could not help remembering a fact in connection with it. He was in a position to state that the leaders in that great movement never took a single step in it without earnest and constant communion with their Lord. On the very night when the leader of the movement went down to the House of Commons to plead with silver voice and tender eloquence for the abolition of the evil, on that very night in a little chamber there was gathered a band of praying men, and that night was the night of victory in the House of Commons.

Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., confessed that, although he had been a little discouraged at the cold reception this question met with in the House of Commons, this noble meeting had greatly encouraged him. He could not have heard the stirring speeches which had been delivered to-night without feeling that they had a cause committed to their trust on which they might earnestly ask the Divine blessing to rest. There was a time when, if this country had acted rightly, this evil might have been strangled in its infancy. It was said that the real difficulty was the money—the revenue of six or seven millions. The answer to an argument of that kind was that they would be prepared to bear the burden. They had gained a great triumph in the House of Commons on the side of temperance. They had obtained local option, and he contended that they should give China local option with regard to the use of opium.

Mr. S. Morley, M.P., moved the next Resolution: "That this meeting is of opinion that the Indian Government ought not to encourage the opium trade for the sake of revenue, but is morally bound to repress both the production and consumption of the pernicious drug to the utmost possible extent." He desired to place against the statement of the Home Government the declaration of the Malagasy Envoy within the last few weeks to a deputation waiting upon him respecting the drink traffic in Madagascar. "Better have a deficient revenue than a degraded people." He was of opinion that it was one of the gravest scandals of modern times that the Government of China should have been interfered with in this matter. If the English nation once understood the details of this question, he could not believe that it would be submitted to for a single hour. This evil ought not to remain any longer unchallenged by the English people.

Mr. David McLaren said that for many years he had taken a deep interest in this question. He thought one fact should be clearly known, that the opium manufactured by the Government was made with the express purpose of being sent to China.

Baboo Protab Chundra Mozoomdarr, in a telling speech which excited considerable interest, having supported the resolution, it was unanimously adopted.

Sir Joseph Pease said that it had been a great pleasure to him to preside over the proceedings of the evening. It seemed to him that the meeting plainly said the people of this country were about to awake to the magnitude of the evil of the opium traffic. He should long remember the occasion as giving a clear and emphatic utterance on this question.

NORMAL COLLEGE FOR THE BLIND.—The Royal Normal College, at Norwood, was founded in 1872, for the purpose of affording the youthful blind from all parts of the kingdom a thorough physical, general, and musical education, so as to qualify them to become self-supporting, useful members of society. Pupils of both sexes are instructed by experienced masters and teachers, and from 80 to 90 per cent. of the pupils who have received a thorough course of training have been enabled to fully maintain themselves by various pursuits. The Gardner Trustees have given a great impetus to the work by establishing a large number of scholarships. Scholarship committees have also been formed in many of the large towns. About 150 pupils are now under instruction. A mortgage debt of £12,000 has been incurred, the interest due being an annual burden upon the funds of the college. The committee appeal to the public for help to pay off this mortgage, so that it may be free to devote all its energies to the education and training of the young blind.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND ZENANA MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

THE annual meeting of this society was held last week, in the Lower Room, Exeter Hall, the Right Rev. the Bishop of Sodor and Man in the chair. The meeting was largely attended. The report, which was read by the Rev. G. Karney, secretary, was of a very encouraging character, and gave details of successful work in the various provinces in which the operations of the Mission have been carried on, particular reference being made to the work of the Normal School. The village missions and schools are steadily developing, and among the interesting facts to be noted in connection with them are the records of several conversions and an increased interest on the part of natives of every rank. The society has doubled its missionaries in three years, and in expressing the opinion that it would be a grief to see such a work curtailed, the committee feel that every effort should be made to bring the income for the coming year up to £22,000.

The Chairman said, when he listened to the report he felt full of thankfulness. God seemed to have prospered the work of the society in every way. He had attended many meetings at which he heard complaints of want of money and want of workers, but here there was thankfulness for everything. Another point in the report was Bishop French's testimony to the welcome given to English ladies in Zenanas. Was not that a distinct call to the ladies of England, to those who love the Saviour, and are ready to dedicate themselves to his work?

Archdeacon Richardson believed that many reflex blessings came to their own land from taking up those missionary enterprises, and they gained no small advantage from being able in this cause to test what woman's work could do, and what it ought to be in any one locality for Christ. It was a vast work they had to do, and with regard to the suitability of women for the work, he quoted his own experience in a country parish where they ventured with successful results on the then novel experiment of putting into the hands of ladies the teaching of the lowest and roughest class of men.

Rev. G. N. Hodges (Masulipatum) said that one of the great obstacles to many Hindoo men, who would otherwise accept the faith, was the state of their female relatives, and he believed the work of saving men and women must go on concurrently. He believed in the efficiency of native agents, and spoke in high terms of the value of the normal schools for the training of native teachers.

Rev. F. E. Wigram, in urging the extension of the work to China, said they need not fear any want of support. If they had hesitated on account of the vastness of the work already in hand, missionary work would not have extended as it had done to the East and West.

Mr. Henry Morris, late Indian Civil Service, hoped that English ladies would use every effort to carry into the homes of their Hindoo sisters the brightness springing from the love of Jesus that illumined their own.

IPSWICH Y.M.C.A.—A very pleasant gathering was held on Friday week in the Old Museum Rooms, in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association. There were more young men present than at any previous meeting of the association. Mr. E. Grimwade, J.P., the chairman, impressed upon his hearers the importance of taking a firm stand by what is right and true. Mr. W. H. Roberts, the secretary of the association, read a brief report of the winter work. Since November sixty young men had been added to the roll of members and associates. Mr. J. Venn stated that at the commencement of the session a prize of books to the value of £2 2s. was offered for the best essay on "The true source of a nation's greatness." This had been won by Mr. A. Adcock, who proceeded to read his essay, which was heartily received. A practical address was delivered by Rev. Canon Garratt, dealing with some of the dangers surrounding young men. This was followed by well-chosen and appropriate remarks from Dr. Roche. W. H. Roberts.

PASTOR CHINIQUY AND ROMANISM.

ALLOW me to ask your readers to join with me in blessing God for the manifestations of his infinite mercies towards many of those to whom it has been my privilege to preach the truth, these last three months. How can I tell you my joy, when, after my second address in Exeter Hall, three Roman Catholics came to shake hands with me in the presence of many, and said, with tears of joy: "Now we see the light, and we understand the errors of the Church of Rome. We give up those errors from this very hour. We will never invoke any name but the name of Jesus, and the Word of God will be our only guide."

The very next week my joy was not less, when one of the most venerable Episcopal ministers of London came to tell me, "Do you remember that old gentleman, with his white hair, who was just before you, when you were speaking in our huge hall? He is a wealthy and very influential man, enjoying the confidence of all by the stern honesty of his conduct. But, unfortunately, a couple of years ago, he fell into the hands of Ritualists, who very soon filled his mind with the subtle poison of their half-concealed Popish doctrines and practices; so much so, that he determined to give up his position in our Church in order to submit himself to the Pope. All my efforts to prevent him from making that unfortunate step were of no avail; and next week was chosen by him and the priests of Rome to make his public recantation. Then, he heard you were to give us a public course of lectures on Romanism, and he determined to come to hear you. The Lord evidently guided your thoughts and your words for the salvation of that honest and intelligent man. The first person I met, when I returned to my parsonage, after the lecture, was that dear old friend of mine. He threw himself into my arms, and with tears of joy he said, 'Help me to bless the Lord! I understand the mummeries and idolatries of Rome. By the grace of God, nothing will ever any more shake my faith in the glorious Gospel truths which our heroic ancestors have bought for us at the price of their blood.' The rest of the night was spent by him and me in blessing God for the admirable and so sudden change just wrought in his heart."

The other day one of the most pious and eloquent Baptist ministers of London told me, in a public meeting, "After your lecture in my church, a French lady came to tell me that though she had been till then a most devoted and sincere Roman Catholic, she felt that her duty towards God and herself, as well as towards her relations, was to break for ever the ties which had united her to the Church of Rome, in order to unite with one of our Evangelical Churches. Not only has she kept her resolution, but, full of joy for the great gift she has received, she has just gone back to France to persuade her friends and relations to give up the errors of Popery, in order to accept Christ as the only hope, light, and life of sinners."

Nine years ago one of the most respectable ladies of England was entrapped, as are so many others, by the glittering sophisms and novelties of the Ritualists. She made the acquaintance of Dr. Newman, who very soon entrapped her into the snares of Popery. For seven years she led the life of a sincere Roman Catholic, suffering humiliations and making sacrifices which would draw the tears of your readers were I allowed to reveal them. But the hour of light and deliverance was approaching. A year ago an unknown friend sent her, by the mail, my humble book, "The Priest, the Woman, and the Confessional," which she read with attention. A few days after my arrival in England a most admirable letter was handed me from that lady, telling me how her own personal experience of Auricular Confession was corroborating several of the things she found in my book, adding that her faith in the new religion was much shaken and modified from that day. She put to me several questions about the Church and the Real Presence. With prayers and ardent supplications to God, I answered her questions. And this very morning how many tears of joy have rolled on my cheeks, when I learned, from that dear daughter of Christ, how she had distressed and confounded the Jesuits, and bravely come back to the Church where Jesus alone is the joy, the strength, the light, the door and the life of poor sinners!

I would narrate you many other conversions which have made the angels of God sing their songs of eternal joys, were I not prevented by the fear of making my letter too long. But I will not finish without telling your readers that it has been my privilege these last three months to help two priests of Rome in breaking their fetters, and I hear of several others who want to follow their example.

I came to this country to try and awaken some of the precious souls whom the Jesuits and Ritualists have put to sleep in order to destroy them. It was my hope that many of the disciples of Christ would like to help me to prepare a Home for those priests who wish to break their fetters. I ask all those who love our Saviour Jesus Christ, and wish to see Him reigning over this world, to help me in that good work. My address is 38, Parliament-street, London, S.W.—Truly yours in Christ, C. Chiniquy.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY AT ORMSKIRK.

A MOST successful Gospel Temperance Mission has been conducted at Ormskirk during the last week by Mr. Francis Murphy. Crowded houses were filled with the utmost enthusiasm, and greeted the veteran advocate with much warmth. The Mission was arranged by a committee consisting of almost all sections of the Christian Church. The Secretary, Mr. Drummond, in his farewell statement, said they had tried many times in Ormskirk to get the various bodies to work together on some point of vital Christian work, but up to the coming of Mr. Murphy had failed. He was glad to be able to say that the present Mission had been one of harmonious feeling throughout. Mr. Murphy spoke his farewell words in a spirit of sympathy and gentleness, exhorting all to continue the great work in God's name.

The total number of pledges taken during the Mission was 1500, which is nearly one-third of the population of the little town. The principal industry here is the brewery industry, the place boasting of no fewer than six breweries to less than six thousand inhabitants. The drink interest has been rudely shaken, and it is the hope of the committee that these places will be compelled to give up.

THE LOYALTY ISLANDS.—Le Christianisme publishes an appeal for a young and active French pastor to take up the work of the London Missionary Society in the Loyalty Islands, now under a French protectorate. He is to reside in the island of Maré, where, last year, there was serious persecution. The Romish party commenced a series of assaults upon the Protestants, and the result was civil war, in which the Romanists were beaten. The French Government thereupon deported the principal Protestant chiefs as prisoners to Cochin China, and installed the Romish chiefs in their places. Notwithstanding these troubles the work has gone on.

GOOD NEWS FROM SPAIN.—I would like to thank those of your readers who have kindly sent Scripture text-cards, which are very useful for distribution. Simple large-type wall-texts, on good paper, are still needed. The Lord, on whom we cast our need of a local, did not disappoint us. He stirred up one of the chief tradesmen of the town to send and offer to let us a house in the same street, in which they threw down all the partitions and have made a far larger place capable of holding nearly double the number of people, better lighted and ventilated, ready as soon as our time was up in the other, at no more expense, and we have it for three years. We would ask continued prayer, particularly with regard to the day-school for boys and girls, which, short-handed as we are, we feel obliged to open. Our meetings still continue crowded with most attentive listeners.—Yours sincerely, Rosetta S. Blamire.

FRENCH FOREIGN MISSIONS.

THE Société des Missions Evangéliques has recently held its annual meeting in Paris, when encouraging reports were given of the work in Basutoland, where the venerable Mons. Casalis commenced to labour in the Gospel fifty years ago. Since then progress has been made through much opposition and difficulty, and now M. Jousse is able to tell of a church crowded with heathen eager to hear the Word of God.

In Tahiti, thirty years after the English missionaries had been expelled and vain efforts had been made to impose Romanism, a French officer informed the native Christians that there were Protestants in France, upon which they applied to the Government for French pastors, and obtained them. These Tahitian Churches purchased from the British and Foreign Bible Society in one year £1000 worth of books, and this is only one of many instances showing the vigour of religious life in the islands. A Chinese cook who was converted at once set himself to the task of finding out all his former employers, in order to refund the money he had cheated them out of. This man evangelises his countrymen in Tahiti, and out of 100 francs, his monthly wages, gives ninety to the work of God.—L'Evangéliste.

PORTSMOUTH AND GOSPORT SEAMEN'S MISSION.—After a very prosperous cruise, and several weeks of successful labour among the fishermen in the West of England, we have returned to follow up the work among the fishermen, who have also returned to Portsmouth, where they are now catching mackerel, and will remain here for another three weeks. Our vessel, lying close by the large fleet of boats constantly coming in, will serve, as heretofore, for evangelistic work. During the visit to Brixham our meetings were largely attended, and evidently much blessing was given. Will your readers kindly remember us for books and little bags, not only for our fishermen, but for our sailors in general? After our work is over here we shall hope, God willing, to sail about the end of May for work in Havre, Honfleur, Rouen, &c. French Bibles, Testaments, Gospel books, &c., will be much appreciated. Henry Cook.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.—From Bassignana there is a gratifying report of progress for last month in the work of this church. At conferences held at Bergamo a few weeks ago, such was the throng to hear the Word, that not being able to obtain admission to the hall, many trampled each other outside. On one occasion there were gentlemen present, besides tradesmen of the city, under-officials, soldiers, and one captain of the Besaglieri, who showed much interest, asking the prayers of the people, and declaring he would willingly continue to come. Such has been the hostility roused that the excellent minister, Signor Lorenz Mazzetti, deemed it prudent to suspend his weekly conference for a time, with the hope that men's excited passions might cool, and that their foolish and unreasonable prejudices might be removed, by their seeing his object in the quiet good work of the Gospel. Let us pray that this very temporary suspension of the conferences may secure real advancement in that city.

NEW TABERNACLE FOR SOUTH LONDON.—The memorial-stone of a new building to be called the South London Tabernacle was laid last week by Mr. George Williams, treasurer of the Young Men's Christian Association. The pastor-designate of the new temple is Mr. C. H. Marsack Day, who has formed a church numbering about 150 members, and united with the London Baptist Association. Mr. Day said that a spirit of love had pervaded this work from beginning to end. Mr. Williams, before proceeding to lay the memorial-stone, remarked that London was increasing at such a rate that to suppose that the Church of England could overtake the spiritual wants of the people was out of the question. What was wanted was co-operation among Christians. He was present as a Churchman, and heartily wished them God-speed. Rev. J. R. Wood (Upper Holloway) had seen a great many foundation-stones laid, but did not remember seeing before a memorial-stone of a Baptist chapel laid by a Churchman, and he was thankful for this catholicity of Christianity. Mr. Robert Paton, Mr. Robert Burn, and Mr. Chapman also addressed the meeting. Subsequently a public meeting was held, under the presidency of Mr. J. T. Olney, and addresses were delivered by leading members of the Baptist denomination.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

RUSSIA.

A RUSSSIAN Count and Countess, assisted by their friends, all zealous Evangelical Christians, carried on an interesting work during the late Industrial Exhibition at Moscow, by distributing tracts and Scripture portions to all comers. About a million and a half persons were thus reached, most of them receiving the gift with great eagerness.

GOOD FRIDAY IN SWITZERLAND.

For some years the young men of the Christian Union, or Y.M.C.A., of Sainte-Croix, Vaud, Switzerland, have been accustomed to devote the whole of Good Friday to special evangelistic efforts in the surrounding villages. This year a party of twenty-six went out, and found their message everywhere welcomed. They held open-air meetings in ten villages, and distributed 1800 tracts and 200 Scripture portions.

SPAIN.

A noble band of consecrated men and women are working for their Lord in the three provinces of Catalonia, Asturias, and Andalusia. At Gijon, a small seaport on the Bay of Biscay, a Church has been formed, all its members not only confessing the glorious name of Jesus, but showing by their daily life and conversation that the Gospel has saved them as well from the power of sin as from condemnation and the fear of death. The same consecrated spirit and singleness of heart is apparent in all the letters from different workers in different places.

PARIS.

According to French contemporaries, the materialistic propaganda is becoming more and more zealous and active. Paris has been divided into parishes for this purpose, each with its Free Thought Association, holding periodical meetings presided over by titled preachers, who occasionally celebrate marriages, and even baptisms, into the new faith. The mere mention of God's name throws them into a passion, and in their meetings its use, except for purposes of obloquy, is strictly interdicted.

In view of the complete secularisation of the common schools in France, many of our Evangelical brethren, not satisfied with the limited opportunities of the Sunday-school, have instituted in addition to these what are known as Thursday-schools, held on Thursday afternoons —the weekly half-holiday—and in which the Scriptures are systematically taught, and the children lovingly instructed in the truths of the Gospel. These Thursday-schools are generally well attended.

BERLIN.

On the Weddingplatz, in the north of the German metropolis, was situated a public-house of very low standing, called the "Prince Blucher," which exercised a most pernicious influence on the whole neighbourhood. On New Year's Day it was for the last time used for dancing and revelling, and on January 8 it was opened for its new Christian purposes. Besides being a centre for Christian work, this property opens a new field which has hitherto been almost entirely neglected in Germany. The itinerant workman finds a shelter in the "Wanderers' Home," but hardly anything has yet been done for the resident workman. The active sympathy awakened by the labours of the Rev. von Schlüembach in the north of Berlin has made this void still more apparent. Within a few weeks, Young Men's and Young Women's as well as other Christian Associations have enrolled upwards of 700 members, and the Blucher house is already used for their meetings as well as for Sunday-schools. There are now large rooms open at all hours of the day, where the working man can find rest, refreshment, and Christian literature. In two large halls more than 1000 people often meet to listen to the preaching of the Gospel.

FRENCH Y.M.C. ASSOCIATIONS.

In your issue of last week mention was made of the unrelenting determination of certain French authorities to erase the name of God from every school-book. Six months ago in the half-yearly meeting of the French Young Men's Christian Associations of Paris, M le Pasteur Recolin in burning words expressed his sorrow at seeing the powers of darkness so ably teaching the nation to forget God. He enjoined the French Y.M.C.A. to join the battle against unbelief and superstition, and to prove themselves sons of the Huguenots, Christians, and patriots. He proposed the fête de la Jeunesse Chrétienne as a means of extending the influence of the Associations among young people careless or ignorant of the Gospel, and of awakening the enthusiasm of those already Christians.

Six months have passed, and the half-yearly meeting of the Associations of Paris has been held again. The fête took place last week in the temple of the Oratoire, and only on one occasion (during the Mission of Messrs. Moody and Sankey) have we seen that fine old church so full. M. Recolin offered a very hearty welcome to all the young people present of both sexes, expressing with sincere emotion his joy at seeing the realisation of a cherished wish. Faithful and manly exhortations were addressed to their hearers by MM. les Pasteurs Picard, Lichtenberger, Bridel, Dumas, enjoining those who believe to keep at the feet of Jesus, to remain true men in a century of effeminacy and dissoluteness, and appealing to those who had not yet accepted for themselves the message of love to do so without delay. It is a bright ray of light in the midst of much darkness. God grant that the movement may spread to the provinces, rousing and encouraging Christians, young and old! H. D.

CHILDREN'S GOSPEL MISSION.—The annual meeting was held at the Fox and Knot School on Wednesday, April 18. Tea was provided for 150 of the parents and friends. The Chairman, Mr. Geo. Minto, sen., spoke of the necessity of parents yielding themselves to God for their children's sake. The report showed satisfactory progress during the past year. Admiral Fishbourne, Messrs. G. Hoon, Crust, Minto, and Wintersgill also gave short addresses. The Mission needs help to carry on the work. At Smithfield and Plumber's-place some 300 children of the poorer classes are gathered together and taught. The Hon. Sec. is Mr. H. W. Nunn, 48, Morton-road, London, N.

THE GOSPEL IN CHILI.—A Romanist priest at Sandy Point, Chili, having complained of the conduct of the Governor in giving countenance to Protestant Missions among the terribly degraded nations of Tierra del Fuego, the Governor writes to a Valparaiso newspaper: "Apart from the respect due to a man of Bishop Stirling's character, who can fail to admire the work he carries on with so much self-denial in these dreaded regions? Father Matulski does not understand courtesy being shown to a Protestant who has abandoned rank, fortune, home, and friends for a country universally regarded with horror, a man who calls the despised Fuegians brothers, and instructs them in the knowledge of God, who has transformed creatures hitherto regarded as the lowest type of the human race into intelligent and useful beings." —Témoin de la Vérité.

GAUBERT, EURE-ET-LOIRE, FRANCE.—In a very poor district of France, between Paris and Orleans, lies the small town of Gaubert, where two excellent Christian workers, Pastor Kruger and his wife, labour among the poor people, so poor that during winter, in order to save the cost of fuel, they use their stables as sitting-rooms. Gaubert is the only place in a wide circuit where the Gospel is preached, and as the old church is falling into ruins, these poor people—men, women, and children — have contributed £300 towards the building of a new one of a simple and inexpensive character. Having done their utmost, they now ask help from their fellow-Christians elsewhere. The Protestant community of Paris have given a portion, and Mrs. Kruger, leaving her husband to continue his pastoral duties, has crossed the Channel to appeal to those in this country who take an interest in the spiritual welfare of France. M. Gustave Monod, Pastor Theo. Monod, and Rev. R. McAll, testify to the goodness of the cause and the sterling character of Pastor and Mrs. Kruger.

AFRICANS FOR AFRICA.

A MOST interesting gathering took place on Wednesday week at Highbury-quadrant Hall (Dr. Bevan's). It was the annual meeting of the Freedmen's Mission Aid Society for sending coloured missionaries to Africa (18, Adam-street, Strand, W.) In the unavoidable absence of the President, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the chair was taken by Mr. R. Sinclair.

Rev. J. Gwynne Jones, secretary, read the Report, from which it appeared that the work of the society at its various stations on the West Coast of Africa had been carried on with marked success during the year. Arrangements have now been made for extending the work very greatly by aiding the United Brethren, who have already several large and successful Missions in the same neighbourhood. During the coming year the Gospel will be preached by the agents of the society in at least one hundred towns and villages on the West Coast, and that mostly to those who have never heard the name of Jesus. This work, it was said, had practically no limit. As contributions were received, new agents from among the educated Christian coloured people of the United States would be sent forth, and schools would be established, where the children would be taught, not only reading and writing, but the arts of Western civilization, habits of industry, and all that make the difference between civilised and barbarous nations.

The Arthington Mission in East Central Africa, towards the establishment of which Mr. Arthington, of Leeds, had given £3000, and other friends in England and Scotland about £4000 more, had been delayed on account of the rebellion of the False Prophet Achmet in the district that had been chosen. The hope was expressed, however, that as vigorous measures were now being adopted to restore peace and tranquillity, the door would soon be open, and a strong force of coloured missionaries would take possession of the land for Christ.

Rev. Dr. Bevan spoke of the importance of the work of the Society, and the Divine call to carry it on with energy, so that the millions of that land who lived in darkness and the shadow of death might soon rejoice in the glorious light and liberty of the children of God.

Rev. W. Justin Evans said he believed most thoroughly in the wisdom of employing in this work, to a very large extent, Africa's own sons and daughters, who could stand the climate so fatal to white men. Hence he most heartily approved of the plans adopted by this Society.

The next speaker was Professor Hugh M. Browne, M.A., a coloured gentleman, now on his way from America to the College at Monrovia, West Africa. Looking at the work of African Evangelisation from the African's point of view, he said that whilst ten years ago those of the coloured people in America who were educated felt it was their duty to remain in America and render all the help they could to lift up their own race, now the feeling was very general amongst the best class of the educated negroes of America that they should bear their full share in the work of evangelising Africa.

Professor T. McCants Stewart, B.A., LL.B. (coloured), in a very eloquent speech, which touched the hearts of all present, spoke of the debt the white races owe to the African race; now they have a grand opportunity of paying some of that debt, by helping in the work of uplifting the Dark Continent from heathenism, superstition, and slavery. The coloured people of America will furnish the men, and to some extent the means, but they need the sympathy, the prayers, and contributions of British Christians in this mighty work. If the Church of Christ was ready to enter heartily upon it, he believed that the next twenty years would yield such spiritual results in Africa as had never been known in the history of Christian Missions in any other country.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending May 19, 1883:—May 13, Heb. ix. 1-14; May 14, Heb. ix. 15-28; May 15, Heb. x. 1-14; May 16, Heb. x. 15-25; May 17, Heb. x. 26-39; May 18, Heb. xi. 1-16; May 19, Heb. xi. 17-29.

A WOMAN'S HOME IN WINNIPEG.

SIR,—A work has recently been begun in Winnipeg, which must, I think, commend itself very warmly to the sympathy and help of your readers. I refer to the Home for Women, lately established by the Winnipeg Christian Women's Union. This Union was formed for the purpose of making united Christian effort to stem the spread of vice by offering help and protection to the many unmarried women who have come here, and are still coming, to earn their livelihood, attracted by the very high remuneration offered to shop-girls, seamstresses, and domestic servants.

Some of your readers may be able to realise what fearful dangers these girls are exposed to, far from their homes, in a go-ahead Western city, where each man is striving to outdo his neighbour in quest of "filthy lucre." Many of them have suffered much discomfort and privation, for the dwelling accommodation, owing to the great influx of immigrants from Canada, the United States, and the British Isles, was until the last few months quite inadequate to the demand, and provisions, having hitherto been brought long distances, were all exceedingly dear. These facts the boarding-house keepers wrested to their own advantage, and the consequence was poor lodging and food for those who could not afford to pay exorbitantly for better.

To meet the needs of these unprotected women, and to be able to assist the numbers of girls expected during the summer from the Old Country, the Union has opened a Home, consisting of a boarding-house and an evening resort for those working out during the day. They have been stimulated to undertake this work by the promise of a Winnipeg gentleman to give them £1000 as soon as they can raise £500, and they hope that their fellow-Christians in the Old Country will contribute bountifully to help them in this work (whose importance cannot be too highly estimated). The expenses for bare necessaries will be very great, as your readers may judge from the prices for coal and wood being respectively £3 a ton and £2 a cord, and the rent for the house (an old wooden one, leased by the month) being £8 a month; a more modern one of the same size would rent for at least £20 a month.

It therefore seems advisable to the Union to start a Building Fund, that we may as soon as possible have premises rent-free, out of which they cannot be turned on short notice. Now, if each reader of your valued paper would contribute even a small sum there would be a total that would materially assist our object, to minister to spiritual needs while supplying temporal wants. Mr. Ch. Tinling, Church-road, Seaforth, Liverpool, has kindly consented to receive and forward all contributions.—Yours truly,

ANNIE MONK, Sec. C.W.U.

Bank of Ottawa, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.—A Gospel Temperance Service in connection with the Metropolitan Tabernacle Blue Ribbon Total Abstinence Society was held on Sunday afternoon at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. It was attended by a congregation that filled the spacious edifice, it having been announced that an address would be delivered by Mr. R. T. Booth, the American Evangelist. Mr. Booth expressed the pleasure it gave him to see so many persons at his second meeting after his return to England. Since he had been away he had seen many signs of the progress of the blue ribbon movement, and he was rejoiced to say that now Englishmen were carrying on the Continent, and wherever they went, the principles of total abstinence and the little badge of blue. He pleaded with his hearers for the sake of the unconscious influence which every man and woman wielded to take the blue ribbon. Subsequently he asked all who were total abstainers to hold up one hand, and about three-fourths of the vast assemblage responded to the invitation, Mr. Booth remarking that it was a grand sight. He then asked those who were not total abstainers to come forward and take the blue ribbon, and many came down the aisles to some desks, where pledges were administered and the blue ribbon given away.

Notices of Books, &c.

THE RED FLAG; OR, DANGER ON THE LINE. By ELYS. 337, Strand. A capital little Temperance book.

TRAPS. By the same Author. Sounds a salutary warning against taking cider, as the first step to indulgence in something stronger.

IS IT UTOPIAN? A Plea for the Evangelisation of the Masses by Voluntary Lay Help. By Rev. CHARLES BULLOCK. 1, Paternoster-buildings. This little but wise treatise on a great subject should be extensively read.

A DOG'S PROTEST AGAINST INTEMPERANCE. By Rev. J. MARSHALL MORRELL. 337, Strand. A truly wonderful dog, that growled at the approach of any drunkard. Boys and girls should get it and read it, which they may do for one penny.

MESSENGERS OF TRUTH. By FAITH CHILTERN. 337, Strand. The oft-repeated story of blighted prospects, desolated homes, wasted lives, and wretched adventures, all through the demon of drink, told in excellent style. The plain diction and language are beyond the ordinary run of Temperance allegories.

AFRICA (Sixpence, quarterly: Partridge & Co.) is full of deeply interesting news of missionary work in different parts of the Dark Continent. Those who are at all interested in Africa will find much in this well got-up quarterly to thank God for. A good map is inserted in this number with the Mission stations marked.

OUR MASTER'S FOOTSTEPS. By CHARLOTTE BICKERSTETH WHEELER. Elliot Stock. A volume of Bible-class notes on the four Gospels, designed for thoughtful girls. It meets a want that parents often feel, and may be safely and wisely placed in the hands of young people who are at all interested in the study of the Scriptures. The authoress says in her preface, "We who have the responsibility of training the mothers of the leading men of another generation, should seek, by God's help, to lay the foundation of their faith very deeply, where no assaults of infidelity can shake it, for these are dangerous times, and perhaps worse are coming." These words are weighty and well-spoken, and those who desire to act in accordance with their spirit, cannot do better than bring this thoughtful and suggestive book before all young readers whom they can influence and guide.

INTRODUCTION TO THE CRITICAL HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY. By Dr. ASA MAHAN. Elliot Stock. This is a book for close readers and clear thinkers; it is not one that will have much attraction for superficial minds. It is an introductory portion of a much larger work soon to be published by the learned author. Dr. Leonard Bacon says of it, it is "common sense analysing and defining itself," while the Dean of Canterbury, and other competent critics, bestow upon it high praise. As a guide to a right understanding of the real nature of some of those delusive and ensnaring theories, which under the shelter of great names, and with high pretensions to learning and depth of research, do so much to unsettle and beguile unwary souls, the work will prove of great service. Although issued as an introduction to a further treatment of the subject, it is really complete in itself, and may be read with great advantage by all who seek for aid in the formation of settled principles of belief.

THE THREE WITNESSES. By Rev. H. T. ARMFIELD. 3s. 6d. Bagster & Sons. This is a treatise on the disputed text in 1 John v. 7. The author speaks of its omission from the Revised Version of the New Testament as being "perhaps the most conspicuous and the most daring of the changes the Revisers have made." He justly complains that no intimation is given of the fact that its genuineness is still a disputed point. The book is valuable as a protest against the modern disposition to sneer at all the criticism of past days as unworthy of regard. It deals with the question as to what qualifications modern scholars have for settling such discussions beyond those of the past, and reviews, with a great amount of fairness and skill, the evidence on both sides. Happily, the doctrine of the Trinity in unity of the Godhead does not rest upon this one passage, and is not materially affected by its retention or rejection, being the manifest teaching of Scripture throughout. But the case is so far established by the author in this interesting contribution to the subject, that few readers, we imagine, would hesitate to admit that the passage ought to have been retained, or at least not dismissed without a word or note to indicate that it is, after all, a matter on which there is good ground for difference of opinion.

THE STORY OF A PILLOW. By A. C. LAMBERT. 1s. 66, Paternoster-row. Designed to train little readers in the art of self-forgetfulness in the desire to care for others, especially the sick and helpless. Attractively written, this little volume of a hundred pages will not fail to do good service.

THE EVANGELICAL SUCCESSION. Second Series. 5s. Macniven & Wallace. There can scarcely be a greater service to Evangelical truth than the presentation, in a form at once easily intelligible and scholarly, of the lives of those men who, in all ages and in different climes and circumstances have handed down the torch of the "Evangel," from the times of the Apostle of the Gentiles to our own day. The present series of lectures, beginning with Calvin and ending with Zinzendorf, embraces the "middle period;" it is to be followed by a third, and perhaps a fourth, which will bring the "Succession" down to modern times. These seven lectures vary in style and in ability, but each is animated by the same spirit of catholic Christianity. Viewed as sketches of the lives and achievements of Christian heroes, they combine lucidity with depth; having been originally addressed to large popular audiences, they are vivid and inspiring. Professor Candlish's lecture on Calvin is a temperate and judicious exposition of his peculiar service to Evangelical religion, which, he says, consists in his having given "positive form in doctrine and in practical church life to that vivid sense of the grace of God in Christ that is the Evangelical element in Christianity." The paper on "Knox" naturally follows. Rev. R. W. Barbour writes of Knox, in whose "frail and feeble bit of a body" the heavenly light burned, in a spirit akin to the great Reformer's own. There are glowing sentences and burning phrases which we should like to quote if we had space. "Samuel Rutherford," by Mr. Taylor-Innes, is incomparably the best piece of literary work in the book. It is studded with fine thoughts finely expressed, with striking pictures and graphic touches, in which the writer of the famous "Letters" again lives and speaks. This sketch alone would render the volume before us worth procuring. The other lectures are "Alexander Henderson," by the Rev. S. Webster Thomson; "Archbishop Leighton," by Professor Blaikie; "Baxter," by the Rev. J. Stalker; and "Zinzendorf," by Professor Binnie. Of all except "Rutherford," of whom no portrait has come down to us, we have excellent vignettes heading each lecture, and the volume is a good specimen of the printer's art.

ABBEY HALL, READING.—By the kindness of Messrs. Sutton, Evangelistic Services have been carried on during the winter, for several years past, at this Hall. God has given greater blessing on the past winter's work than in any previous year. The Evangelists, whom Captain Smith, Hon. Sec. of the Evangelisation Society, has kindly supplied, have proclaimed Salvation in simple words which all could understand, and many of the hearers have accepted the Saviour. The friends in charge of the work impress on the converts the great importance of joining themselves at once to some section of Christ's Church, where they may be built up and strengthened in their spiritual life.

SUNDAY CLOSING FOR ENGLAND.—DEAR SIR,—A memorial, asking the Government to give the needful facilities for discussing the Sunday Closing Bill for England, has been signed by 120 Members of Parliament, and was last week presented to Mr. Gladstone. During the Session, up to the 20th of April 5013 petitions, with 1,138,190 signatures, have been received by the House of Commons in support of the above measure. At this crisis it is most important that many more numerously signed petitions should be sent in. We ask for earnest prayer that all who work for the success of the movement may be guided aright.

52, Parliament-st., S.W. EDWARD WHITWELL.

MR. G. O. BARNES has been preaching in London for the last few weeks, labouring principally at Hoxton Hall. Last Sunday he took the principal part in the three meetings, morning, afternoon, and evening. On the previous Sunday evening he gave a Gospel address, at the close of which nearly sixty persons rose in token of their desire to accept of Christ as their Saviour. Mr. Barnes is accompanied by his wife, his son, and his two daughters. The latter are important helpers in the meetings, as they sing very sweetly and touchingly. Mr. Barnes' preaching is very striking and effective. The originality rivets the attention; whilst a word dropped now and again proves him to be a careful student of Scripture, and as having critical acquaintance with the text.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY.

THE annual report of this excellent Society, just issued, is full of interesting details of the year's work, ending March 30. In the face of wide-spread infidelity and scepticism, as well as a growing disregard of the Gospel message, it is not a little cheering to find that over three and a half millions of people have heard the Gospel from the lips of the evangelists of this Society. Those of our readers who are at all acquainted with the way these servants of God preach the glad tidings, will rejoice that their efforts have not been in vain, as will be seen from a few extracts from the report. Captain Smith says :—

"Through summer and winter alike, in all parts of the country, in towns and in villages, our evangelists are every night preaching the Word of Life in town-halls, theatres, coffee-palaces, school-rooms, skating-rinks, concert-rooms, and drill-sheds, choosing secular ground if possible, but where none such is to be had, accepting any building to which people will come and listen to God's message to the sinner."

About Liverpool we read:—"The Rev. R. Hobson invited two of our working-men evangelists to hold a Mission, and was much cheered to find how readily the working classes came to hear the Gospel from their lips. The hall, holding 750 people, was sometimes crowded out; even rain did not keep the people away, and as the Mission went on there was a noticeable increase of smock-frocks and poor. Very many appeared deeply impressed."

Coming to Oxfordshire, we are told:—"Last spring a week's mission was held in the village of Chadlington, but with little apparent result. At the beginning of this year the effort was renewed, and there was now a remarkable awakening among the people, and much blessing followed the preaching of the Gospel."

A report from Lower Norwood says:—"The Lord's Day Services are conducted exclusively by agents of the Evangelisation Society. The services are attended chiefly by the working classes. As the key fits the lock, so the agents of the Evangelisation Society are exactly suited to be useful to our congregations."

A report from Brighton says :—"The Evangelists supplied by you began under much discouragement, but by God's blessing on steady and prayerful perseverance, a number of converted men and women have been gathered in, and are labouring with earnestness and success to extend the work. On every side we see changed lives and homes, and hear most encouraging testimonies of blessing received. Our hall, which seats 400, is filled to overflowing every Sunday evening, and such numbers have to be sent away that we are only waiting for funds to enlarge the building."

The personal testimonies inserted are of no less value than those quoted. We note with pleasure that about five hundred "thank-offerings" appear among the contributions; this is an evidence that the people under whose auspices meetings are held, as well as those who receive blessing, are not shirking their responsibility towards the expenses, though the Society wisely makes no conditions respecting funds. The number of meetings held during the year were 17,986—1424 more than the previous year. The receipts have not increased proportionally, though we find £11,329 as the total.

In commending the work of this Society to our readers, we cannot do better than quote the closing remarks of Captain Smith's report :—

"A new financial year is now open before us, with new opportunities for tent missions, barn work, Gospel missions in halls and school-rooms all over the country, and we most cordially invite all who themselves know and love the Gospel, to strengthen our hands by their gifts, their services, and their prayers. All who are willing to assist in the work by donations, by preaching, or by promoting meetings in the places where they reside, are invited to apply to the Hon. Secretary, at the offices of the Society, 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

Work in Stornoway among Fishing Women—Dawlish, £1. Medical Mission in Florence—M. K. 5s.

PAU, BASSES PYRENEES.—During the five months from June to November, at Bordeaux Exhibition, I sold or gave away 34,176 books. And in and around Pau, at the markets and fairs from November 20 to April 15, I have sold 8055 books, of which 423 were Scriptures in whole or in part. Some friends have given me a little help towards purchasing a Bible carriage, and when I am able to get a suitable one it will be a great help towards my work. Yours sincerely,

THOMAS PH. SINEL.

FISHERS ON THE IRISH COAST.—SIR,—I desire to thank the many kind friends who have so freely responded to my appeal in your columns; the supply is so liberal that my wants are fully supplied for this season. Our friends will be glad to know that the attendance at our services, Bible-class, and prayer-meetings, have greatly improved. This I attribute partly to our being able to distribute periodicals, tracts, &c., after each meeting, these forming valuable reading during any leisure at sea.

Dingle, Kerry, Ireland. WILLIAM T. QUIGLEY.

STIRLING CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.—An all-day conference was held at Stirling on Tuesday, last week. The threefold subject set down for consideration was that embodied in Micah vi. 8, "Do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God." The speakers were Prof. Lindsay, Glasgow, Rev. W. R. Nicoll, Kelso, Dr. E. Elder Cumming, and Rev. J. M. Sloan, Glasgow. Dealing with the second division, Mr. Nicoll said: "If mercy was to be loved, it must be practised, not simply regarded as a sentimental feeling. It must also be carried out to its legitimate end, and in the commonest things of life. Mercy in speech was greatly needed. The sin of mercilessness in speech, he believed, characterised Christian people more than most others. A spirit of censoriousness was cherished, and made itself known in speech, and thus God's great gift of speech was much abused. He counselled the cultivation of a more charitable disposition in regard to our fellow-men, assured that it would bring a rich reward to those who practised it." Evangelistic addresses were given before and after the conference by various friends.

FIFTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of R. NELSON, of PATRICK, N.B.

This case was brought under my notice by Mr. Dunn, of Maryhill. (The reader of this will probably remember the very interesting and remarkable cure of Mrs. Dunn, which was published a short time since.)

The patient's address is Rose Cottage, Claythorn, by Patrick, N.B. A statement of his case was sent to me on the 15th of Jan.: "Commenced with eruptions on the skin, and weakness, then cough set in, with expectoration (at first slight, afterwards assuming a purulent character), pains in the chest, and spasmodic breathing. The patient had taken cod liver oil and other medicines for nine months without any benefit, and was losing flesh in all his limbs."

He has so far recovered in two months that Mr. Dunn writes: "I am glad to say Nelson is a new man. There is quite an outcry for your medicine in these parts."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

SCRIPTURE TEXTS.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings; and may be had of any Bookseller.

From the late AGNES ELIZABETH JONES, Lady Superintendent of Nurses at the Liverpool Workhouse.

"The Lady Superintendent of Nurses begs to acknowledge the receipt of the parcels of Texts as ordered. She more and more feels their value. The patients lying in their beds can read the words—the print is so distinct.

"As she is going to undertake the charge of several hundred more patients, she wishes to give other Wards the advantage of these Texts on the wall."

In very large type, printed in blue ink, size 31 in. by 20 in., 70 different Texts, 3d. each.
Mounted on canvas, varnished, and with eyelet holes, 9d. each.
Mounted on rollers and varnished, 1s. 6d. each.

LIST OF THE TEXTS

1. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."
2. "The wages of sin is death."
2.* "The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."
3. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."
4. "Repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance."
5. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."
6. "In whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins."
7. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."
8. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."
9. "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him; to all that call upon Him in truth."
10. "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."
11. "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."
12. "The Lord is good to all; and His tender mercies are over all His works."
13. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; but fools despise wisdom and instruction."
14. "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered."
15. "When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."
16. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."
17. "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."
18. "Now in Christ Jesus ye, who sometime were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ."
19. "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found; call ye upon Him while He is near."
20. "Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God."
21. "Herein is love: not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins."
22. "God commendeth His love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."
23. "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so, by the obedience of One, shall many be made righteous."
24. "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing."
26. "The just shall live by faith."
31. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God."
32. "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin."
33. "Through this Man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins."
34. "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."
35. "God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved."
6. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."
37. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."
38. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."
39. "God so loved the world, that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."
40. "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me."
42. "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus."
43. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."
44. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."
45. "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not."
46. "He shall gather the lambs with His arm, and carry them in His bosom."
47. "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well-pleasing unto the Lord."
48. "I love them that love Me; and those that seek Me early shall find Me."
51. "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
52. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him."
53. "Casting all your care upon Him; for He careth for you."
54. "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."
55. "He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."
56. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."
57. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."
58. "In all their afflictions He was afflicted."
59. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth."
60. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."
61. "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God."
62. "He is despised and rejected of men; a Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief."
63. "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities."
64. "The chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed."
65. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."
66. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquities of us all."
67. "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."
68. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."
69. "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me, and drink."
70. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

The eight following are in Extra Large Type.

25. "Jesus only."
27. "Now."
28. "God is love."
29. "Behold, He cometh."
30. "Have faith in God."
41. "Prepare to meet thy God."
49. "Thou God seest me."
50. "Be ye kind one to another."

An Urgent Appeal for Funds.

RESCUE WORK IN POPLAR.

Funds are needed for maintenance; the expenses consequent on improvement of the premises in Kerby-street; and also for the complete outfitting of a number of the inmates for a new life.

At this time, when the hearts of the whole Christian world are stirred by the thoughts of how to help in this great question of social purity, surely aid will be given to a work which aims at teaching, tending, and raising the victims of vice, ignorance, and drunkenness. The Houses are all crowded, and the expenses very great.

Contributions of money and clothing are earnestly requested by Mrs. WILKES, The Elms, Copper Mill Lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

URGENT APPEAL.

"Bis dat qui cito dat."

The Parish of Eston W. Normanby, including South Bank and Grangetown, in the district of Cleveland, has a population of 18,000, consisting of Miners, Iron-workers, and small Shop-keepers. The only Church is the old Parish Church of Eston, which seats 180 people. A new Church is in course of building, towards which £3,000 has been subscribed; £1,000 is absolutely needed to complete the same. At South Bank the site for a new Church is given: the plans are passed, and tenders conditionally accepted. £2,000 has been promised towards the Building Fund, but an additional £800 is required at once to enable the Committee to commence the work. Who will come to our help in this great emergency? Cheques can be paid into the National Provincial Bank of England, Middlesbrough, to the credit of the "Eston and Normanby" or the "South Bank" Church Building Fund account; or addressed to the Rev. C. BYRON WILCOX, Eston Vicarage Normanby, near Middlesbrough.

GEORGE YARD RAGGED SCHOOLS, &c., Whitechapel, E.

GEORGE HOLLAND thankfully acknowledges receiving from G. D. 10s.

BLUE RIBBON GOSPEL TEMPERANCE MISSION. Founded by William Noble, Feb. 10, 1878. The annual meeting in Exeter Hall, Monday, May 21. Chair to be taken at 7 p.m., by S. A. Blackwood, Esq., Q.B. Speakers: Rev. H. Pelham Stokes, M.A., Rev. J. Monro Gibson, D.D., Mr. G. O. Barnes (from Kentucky), Mr. Councillor White, Mr. W. I. Palmer, J.P., and Mr. Noble. Miss Mary Davies, and a choir of 500 voices will sing. Admission Free. Reserved seats 1s. at Hoxton Hall, N.

MISSION HALL, Thrawl-street, Spitalfields.—An important work has been carried on by the Christian Community for nearly forty years in this locality, with constant tokens of God's blessing resting upon it. To meet the increasing needs of the work, a new Hall was recently erected, meeting the wants of the work very adequately. The cost of the hall was £800, one half of which has been raised, leaving a debt of £400 still to clear off. To accomplish this object, two very kind and generous friends have promised to give £100 each, on condition that we raise the remaining £200. For this object an earnest appeal is made to the Christian public for assistance to meet the offer made.—Donations can be sent to the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street; to the Editors of THE CHRISTIAN; or to the Secretary, JAMES ATKINSON, 10, Enfield-road South, Kingsland, N.

FUNDS ARE GREATLY NEEDED to carry on Mission work in connection with the Sailors' Home, Teignmouth. Further particulars will be sent, and contributions thankfully received, by Miss C. FRY, Teignmouth.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectly assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

For Delicate or Backward Youths

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. That Little Bow of Blue.

IN FOUR VERSES.
(Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN).

MY heart was very heavy, for my children cried for bread;
I wept to see my little ones go supperless to bed;
I listened for a footstep, as I'd often done before,
Waiting for a staggering man to stumble through the door:
But his step was firm and steady, and his eye was clear and true,
And on his ragged coat he wore a little bit of blue!

A CALL TO CHRISTIANS.
By CHARLOTTE MURRAY.
IN THREE VERSES.

(Reprinted from THE CHRISTIAN).

COME forward, Christians, young and old, come join our ranks to day!
Oh help us in our fearful fight against the tyrant's sway!
A cruel master he has proved to many in our land,
And now we hope to set them free; oh, lend a helping hand!
We go not forth to rescue them in feeble human strength,
But trusting in our Saviour's power, we hope to win at length,
For He doth bless—ay, grandly bless—each effort that we make;
It matters not how small the deed, if done for his dear sake.

GARRATTONIAN PHILOSOPHY: WHAT IS IT?

"He is not the discoverer who first utters a truth, but he who says it again and again until he compels mankind to hear him!" So said Sydney Smith.

If the party who wrote last week, enclosing this heading, with cover, will give me his name and address, I shall be happy to reply. Truth needs no disguise.

The statements of patients often reveal the cause of their chronic and intricate ailments as resulting from the worry or anxiety of mind, and strain to which the nervous system has been subjected. This is how the vital force of the system becomes lowered, and the resisting power to external influences lessened, so that exertion of any kind renders them liable to local weakness. Not that the throat, or lungs, or limbs, in such cases are weak in themselves, but that the system is lacking the full force required to tide over the exertion without sensible exhaustion, either to the system as a whole, or some organ in particular. We do not break down during the excitement of those occasions which call forth the excessive expenditure of nervous force; indeed it might at times be well for us if we did so break down, as this would prevent the more complete and final exhaustion from over-strain, following a repetition of the cause, which confirms the local weakness as a chronic condition, and to correct which, any remedy, to be effective, must influence the whole system from nerve-centres to nerve extremities. This kind of invigoration cannot be accomplished by local treatment. We are often asked to supply local remedies for clergymen, public speakers, and singers; but if we could sanction limited and partial treatment, we should advise that all such applications for the chest should be worn on the back the greater part of each day, so as to be most effectual. Even this is not the means by which vital energy is to be restored as a constant possession, and the true balance of power regained. Any remedy, to be permanently effective, must exert an influence reaching beyond the symptoms, or it will fail to do more than the means already tried. The entire system once energised on the principle indicated, the symptoms will disappear as surely as the drooping plant revives when vitality is communicated to the root and stem.

Many persons are never well, although not actually invalids; health in its fulness is a stranger to them. They consider themselves, and are considered by others, incurable, because they have been so long in this state; and yet their only ailment is a deficiency of that energising element which it is so manifestly the office of Odo-Magnetic influence to impart, an abiding energy which medicine cannot give. Rarely can a tangible and measurable potential remedy minister to the necessities of a distressed mind or a debilitated constitution. Is it not to natural external influences that the physician consigns his patient when his skilful treatment has done its utmost without restoration? We say, then, why leave the most effective means out of the prescription at the commencement, allowing the spirit to hunger and pine to powerlessness, while seeking in vain to inspire a living energy from inert, but noxious and irritable compounds? For while medicinal treatment is being directed to the symptoms, it too often happens that the affection, or, more correctly speaking, its cause or causes, are allowed to assume a chronic type.

(To be resumed.)

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

TRIBUTES TO MISSIONARY WORK.

THE cause of Missions sometimes receives testimony from the enemies of truth as well as from its friends, and in such cases the evidence becomes specially forcible from the certainty of its lacking all bias in favour of its theme. It has been charged against missionary advocates that they over-estimate and highly colour their reports of what is accomplished by those at work in our Mission-fields. We do not believe that this is so, unless in very rare and exceptional instances. A French atheist, in the Revue des Deux Mondes, has just been discussing the question of the wisdom or otherwise of the French Government in proposing to withdraw protection from religious Missions carried on by the Romish Church. His evidence is given very strongly, from the utilitarian point of view, in favour of missionary operations, and furnishes an important tribute to the real and intrinsic worth of the religion of Christ as seen in its moral and social results.

M. Charmes, the writer to whom we refer, speaking of our own Government in relation to Missions, says :—

> In consequence of the spirit of association that reigns in England, their Missions have organisations of the strongest character, and are in no want of resources. The State protects, sustains, and encourages them. No one would think of proposing to England to abandon the Protestant protectorate it exercises in fact, if not in law. It does not forget that the Protestant Bibles carry its language everywhere, and that missionaries are the best agents of civilisation that a great people can employ to deliver from barbarism the countries that are still plunged in it.

He adds, referring to the fact that benevolent operations such as command the sympathies and win the hearts of men, are always interwoven with the efforts of missionaries to extend the faith they proclaim, and also to the beneficial efforts of those operations in civilising and opening the way for material properity :—

> How can these things be done more cheaply and more surely than through the missionary societies? Who can be depended upon to remain faithful to their posts in time of trial except those who are sustained by that hope, or, if you please, by that supernatural illusion, that belongs only to men controlled by faith?

We may truly say of the foes of Christianity, "their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges."

The Times, in one of its leading columns the other day, thus spoke of modern Missionary enterprise :—

> In a material aspect, and as mere organisations for the administration of vast sums of money and the government of vast companies of subordinates, most of the societies which propound their annual reports in Exeter Hall deserve admiration. It is satisfactory to be able to believe that they may claim sympathy on higher grounds. For a considerable expanse of the earth's surface the missionary station affords the sole educational and civilising centre which in the nature of things is attainable. A permanent decay in the fruitfulness of the collections summarised at Exeter Hall would mean the extinction of the solitary rays of brotherly kindness which break the darkness over wide spaces abandoned else to native darkness.

The same article criticises with undue severity Lord Cairns' reference to the smallness of the amount expended on Missions as compared with the expenditure of the nation on intoxicating drinks. The writer appears to think this comparison an odious one: it seems to us perfectly reasonable and fair. There is no room to fear that the supply of funds for Mission work is likely to exceed the demand, although the writer of the article says, "Missionary enterprise is fairly sure to levy a continually augmented income, provided it can point to a continual augmentation of good work."

This it does already; on all sides the cry is heard for more labourers, and in some important districts work must actually be stopped if larger means for carrying it on are not forthcoming. The worthiness of missionary claims on enlarged support is amply proved by facts, even if, without going further, we accept the evidence of The Times itself as quoted above. We admit that the claims put forth by our various societies should be scrutinised, but we rejoice in the certain conviction that they will bear most thoroughly the closest scrutiny.

LATITUDINARIANISM.

THE progress of what is called "free-thought" in religious matters is unmistakably rapid and sure. It can scarcely be otherwise, while those who profess the faith of Christ publicly fraternise with the leaders of systems of belief radically opposed to Evangelical truth. Dr. Martineau welcomed and praised in the midst of the students at New College, as a writer whose books induce reverence for their author, and congratulated upon his influence and power for continued efforts to mould human thought, is a sign of the times most believers in "Jesus Christ, and Him crucified," will regard with pain rather than pleasure, and with concern and apprehension rather than with gladness and hope.

Dr. Martineau's talents are undoubtedly of a very high order, and our reference to him is purely theological; but we cannot forget that to him our adorable Redeemer is only the best of men, while his Cross is but that of a martyr for the truths He taught. A teacher of such doctrines as those comprised in the Unitarian creed, must surely be far removed from the position the Principals of our Colleges would desire their alumni to adopt. And yet can it be wondered at if many are induced to take their views of cardinal doctrines of the Gospel from Dr. Martineau's standpoint, while they are taught to revere and admire him as a teacher and guide in spiritual things?

Fidelity to Christ in these times demands that a bold stand should be made for the honour of His name, and indubitable testimony borne to the efficacy of his blood as the only means of atonement for sin. The difference between Unitarianism and the Christianity of the New Testament is wide; the points of disagreement are not those on which neutrality can be maintained by any mind really taught by the Spirit of God. The tendency of young men whose thoughts are turned to the study of sacred truth is already far too strongly inclined to negative theology, and we can but view with sadness any movement which is calculated to break down still more completely the barriers between orthodox Christian truth and Socinian error.

The presence of a Congregational minister as a speaker at the laying the memorial-stone of a Unitarian chapel at Croydon, the other day, points in the same direction as the "cordial reception" and "enthusiastic thanks," accorded to Dr. Martineau for his presence at New College. Christian charity surely ceases to be Christian when it sanctions, in the least degree, any contradiction of Christ's claims to be regarded as the co-equal Son of God, and the sacrificial substitute and sin-bearer for man.

The highest glory of the Saviour as the Son of Man is seen in his voluntary surrender of Himself to death, even the death of the cross, that so He might become the Life of men. To despoil Him of this is to rob Him of the noblest crown He wears; and of no part of his character and work should we be more jealous than of this. It is as the Lamb slain He is worshipped and adored in heaven, and on earth no real and spiritual worship can be rendered to Him which omits regard to this same feature of his work. We may respect as men, and admire as gifted men, some who deny these truths, but to help by any means to add to their status and influence as religious teachers, is a step fraught with peril as to its results, and calculated to grieve that sacred Spirit which testifies of Him.

In all spheres of thought and action to-day, the intrinsic value and importance of truth is to a large extent being lost sight of, and the force of firm unwavering testimony to it is being sacrificed to what is called charity and toleration. As a speaker in the House of Commons said the other night, "Religious freedom must not be made to mean freedom from religion." Neither must regard to Christian liberty be allowed to become license to ignore the leading doctrines of Christianity. Bigotry and sectarian intolerance, we know and feel, are far removed from the spirit of the Gospel of Christ, but equally so are vacillation and indefiniteness in relation to the great truths which form the foundation of our faith. Simon's noble confession of the Divine Sonship of Jesus earned for him the title of Peter, or the rock, and on that same rock the whole of the true Church is built. Whatever is not built upon it is destined to perish, and is therefore worthless. Surely it behoves all who know the certainty and preciousness of the old, old story, to see to it, that their influence is all given to the preservation of it in its completeness and purity.

GLASGOW CITY ARABS.

AN interesting account of the outward voyage of Mr. Quarrier's last batch of 100 boy emigrants, per ss. Prussian, from the pen of Miss Quarrier, appears in the North British Daily Mail of Wednesday, May 9. After describing the experiences at sea and on landing, Miss Quarrier says :—

"The wharf at Halifax was crowded with people just out of the churches and chapels, and the singing powers of the boys were called into use. We hoped to get off from Halifax early on the Monday morning, but it was one o'clock before we got all our boxes out, checked, and into the cars. Dr. Clay took dinner with us on Sabbath evening, and we had a very pleasant time round the table. I should so have liked some of the Glasgow folks to have heard his unasked-for testimony as to the work we are engaged in. He told us he had visited over 1000 children placed out in Canada, and out of that number not one had ever been in a penitentiary, gaol, or before the court, and that 19 out of every 20 were doing well. The captain remarked, 'Mr. Quarrier says 95 per cent. do well;' and Dr. Clay said he had found it so. It was very gratifying to us to hear of several cases he told us of who are now such a comfort and help to the people who have them, and a blessing to the country. The Governor of Nova Scotia also came on board, shook hands with us, and asked the boys to sing, which they did. He expressed warm sympathy with the work, said he never had seen such a nice, healthy-looking band of boys, and wished us 'God-speed.' All the way through we have met with so much kindness from entire strangers that it is impossible to tell of it all. Mr. Watch has plenty of applications for the boys. Some go to-morrow, some on Saturday, and about 30 or 40 east on Tuesday."

The "Christian" Pulpit.

A PILGRIM'S PRAYER.*

By Rev. Dr. CHARLES STANFORD.

"And lead us not into temptation."—Matt. vi. 12; Luke xi. 4. (Authorised Version.)

"And bring us not into temptation."—Matt. vi. 13; Luke xi. 4. (Revised Version.)

THE Lord's Prayer is for the use of the family while travelling home. This is no easy travelling. A poet, speaking of the modern "Pilgrim's Progress," reminds us that there can be no railway to the Celestial City—that the journey must still be made in the ancient fashion—made, so to speak, on foot—made not for us, but by us. The onward movement is not like that of a carriage, while we are asleep inside it, but must be the result of our own individual volition and exertion. "We walk;" and we walk "by faith, not by sight."

Some of us notice that the shadows begin to lengthen. The day will soon be over. Jesus, our Sun, is gone before us, is out of sight, and is already creating the glory of the land that we call Heaven. So, we are "stepping westward." Questioned as to this, each one of us might answer—

> "Stepping westward, did you say?
> Stepping westward? Yes, alway;
> With staff and scrip,
> Wayfaring songs upon our lip,
> Stepping, stepping to the end."

"Wayfaring" prayers as well as songs are upon our lip, and this is one—"lead us not into temptation."

This appeal implies that our Father is our Leader. No other leader knows the way. It must be so, for ours is a pilgrimage, not through space, but through time. Whatever else we have seen, we have not seen to-morrow. Whatever maps we have consulted, we have never found a map of the future. No atlas can help us. The road beyond the moment in which I now plant my foot is all mist. We know that at some time or other we may have to wade heavily through black suffocating thoughts that make the "Slough of Despond;" or to toil wearily up the "Hill Difficulty;" or, our spirits quivering with awful touches, to go down into the "Valley of the Shadow of Death," or to be locked in the cell of "Doubting Castle;" or to drink the air and see the beauty of the "Delectable Mountains." There are lions in the way; and giants for each red-cross knight to fight with, but when or where these sceneries may break upon us, or these adventures open, no horoscope can tell. Our Father knows, for "He inhabiteth Eternity," and sees the "end from the beginning." In Him therefore do we place our trust, and to Him do we lift this cry. . . . . .

We thus pray, because we know that our path abounds with instruments and occasions of temptation.

These would not be so certainly dangerous if they all had open advertisement. If danger-signals hung out near all danger—if everything that had in it the nature of hell made itself visible by the light of its own hell-fire—if every snare had the word "Temptation" written on it, by the hand of mystery that wrote on the palace wall of Babylon, you would keep out of its way; "for in vain is the snare spread in the sight of any bird." You would not bathe in brightest waters while seeing sharks play there; you would catch up no basket of flowers like Cleopatra's if you saw the asp lifting its head from below, for only the lunatic will "dally with the crested worm." Life is not in love with death; and the instincts of holiness would make the Christian shun a sin when known to be a sin, even without the warning, "avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." But it is not so. The sin that is near us constantly hides itself under a false colour and a wrong name.

We may be led into temptation, when in business. Business is not in itself a sin. It is not a sin to make the most of the earth, to get the most out of it, to make it answer, to turn it into value, and to do that with it which creates wealth. The commandment to "dress and keep" the garden in which God has set man, so as to "replenish and subdue the earth," was given before the fall, and is still binding on us; but in the world as it now is, who does not know that while in pursuance of this lawful end we may be led into something that is unlawful? When a thing that is in itself only subsidiary, is interesting, there is a tendency to take too keen an interest in it. Dealing with earthly things, we may be too eager to gain them, too grasping to keep them, and too sorrowful to let them go. We may be mastered by the law of assimilation, and so become like the elements that we work in. "Bury a man in earth," says the shrewd Owen Feltham, "and he himself will soon be earth."

We may be led into temptation by the habits of society. Let me try to make my meaning plain by a parable.

Sometime after the last of the Apostles died, there lived at Ephesus a thriving man of business named Marcus, who was an elder of the Church. His wife, though, like himself, an accredited member of the Church, was scarcely reclaimed from the prevailing heathenism, and still cherished with sentimental interest, though not with belief, the old poetic stories of Apollo and Venus, Jove and Diana.

Their children, as the children of persons rising in life, were sent to schools suited to the risen class, and where it was thought a sign of respectability to honour "the fair humanities of old religion." Naturally, the associates of these children, as they grew older, were the fashionable heathen. They entreated and coaxed their parents in one thing after another to conform to heathen usages. "Why should we be singular?" it was said, "Why should we not be at feasts where, just for mere form's sake, libations are made to Apollo, so long as we do not believe in Apollo. Why should we refuse meats consecrated to the heathen gods, when every one knows that this consecration means nothing? How are we to reclaim the heathen, if we never mingle with them? And, besides, did not our Master sit with publicans and sinners?"

Marcus was a man courteously inclined, easily entreated, happy to see others happy, especially sympathetic with the happiness of youth; and just now, on the principle "that extremes beget extremes," was tempted to the extreme of laxity because some Christians had gone to the extreme of stringency—making, as he justly thought, religion appear to the young less like a Divine principle than a hardy, narrow, censorious prejudice. So, afraid to create a prejudice in young minds against religion, gradually, but uneasily, the good Marcus gave way.

Gradually, you saw his children at heathen festive meetings held at their friends' houses. "Why not? The heathen should never have ground for saying that Christians are morose." Gradually, toiler though he was, his own house would become the scene of a sumptuous entertainment, where, between the toil of yesterday and the toil of to-morrow, hot, exhausted crowds, in hot exhausted air, would be in mazy motion most of the night. "Why not? Entertainments of this kind," it would be said, "are absolutely necessary to maintain our position, and if we accept them, we must return them." Gradually you saw about his walls, silver or marble statuettes of Jupiter or Venus. "Why not? They are not for worship, of course; they are placed there simply in compliance with the general usage of good society." Gradually in the course of these evening entertainments, exquisite perfumes from censers richly wrought would be waved before these images. "Why not? It is always done; nobody means anything by it; and as for the statuette, we know that an idol is nothing in the world.'

At last, fellow Christians would venture on remonstrance. Then the young people in the family of Marcus would fire up, and answer grandly—"You tell us that we are in danger. We tell you that we know when to stop. You tell us that we distress the consciences of persons in the Church, who keep to the simplicity of the old faith, and check the decision of converts. We beg to reply, that we glory in everything broad, and scornfully repudiate everything narrow. The meanest of all influences over conduct is that which comes from the thought of what others may think. Others may think it religion to shut themselves up and read the old Gospel manuscripts; we stand up for our own rights; and, whatever others do, as for us, and our house, we will please ourselves." So by degrees they were led into temptation, and at length it became impossible to tell from any social signs whether these advanced Christians were servants of Jesus or of Jupiter. Let us, as far as it is needful, apply the principle thus suggested to the circumstances of our own day.

We may be led into temptation by retiring from the world. It must be plain to every one who forms a fair estimate of men as they are, that the great majority of them regard Christian principles as expounded in the New Testament with dead indifference or sarcastic hostility. The many are of the world; the few are not of it. So patent is this fact, and so patent has it ever been, that according to the supreme Book, the term "world," marking the ungodly, is the term that also represents the idea of society in general; obviously importing, that, in the judgment of inspiration, the ungodly form the mass of mankind. This is an alarming consideration, for it implies that if we are thorough-going Christians, we have to hold our ground or make our way against an opposing mass. Surely that which has at once mass and momentum, weight and velocity, must carry all before it! It has often been thought, therefore, that there is no safety for those who are "not of the world" but by getting out of its way.

If we attempt this by retirement into some scene of quiet happiness, we may there meet with new temptations. In the middle ages, when it was a common article of belief that the garden of Eden, though a holy secret, guarded by angels, still flowered in all its glory in some Eastern land, many a terrified soul in wicked city or monastic cell would doubtless dream of the blessedness there would be in finding the spot, and dwelling there guarded from Satanic spells.

Yet, Paradise was the scene of the fall, and there it was that man was first led into temptation. Be sure that if we could find or make some earthly Paradise of our own, where we might hear "the voice of the Lord God walking in the trees of the garden," where "the world forgetting and the world forgot," holy love would tremble into tenderness, thought into flame, and where there would be no outward interruptions to prayers, even there, a tempting spirit would find us.

If, on the other hand, we fled into a wilderness, we should still be followed. In the same old times at which we have just glanced, devotion has often sped in alarm from the world into the wilderness. The devotee has many a day made his escape to some stern solitude, where, a cave his house, a litter of leaves his bed, roots his food, his drink the crystal spring—he has tried to crucify every natural inclination, to strain all humanity out of his body, and to steep his soul in ghastly meditations, that thus he might keep out Satan. But old legends testify that on such lives Hell has often spent its utmost fury, and that in such conditions, poor souls have suffered most from the poison of idle thought or polluting fancy.

Though the first Adam was tempted in a garden, the second was tempted in a wilderness. There it was, that through forty days, with no rich fruits to stay the sting of hunger, no clear stream rippling over golden sands to slake his thirst, no shelter from the fiery day or the freezing night, and where—beauty banished, grim desolation sat enthroned, He who afterwards died for us was tempted, and the wilderness was the memorable field in which man's great representative fought with man's great foe. After this, let no follower of his hope to escape "the fiery darts of the wicked one," by living in any wilderness of self-inflicted poverty or pain. The principle of seeking retirement from the world of temptation, either in some kind of Eden or in some kind of wilderness, is always being tried in some form or other, and always fails.

We may be led into temptation even when we feel most secure from it by communion with God. When was Christ himself tempted? Bishop Hall says, "No sooner has Christ come out of the waters of baptism, than He comes into the fire of temptation. No sooner does the Spirit come in the form of a dove, than he is 'led by the Spirit into the wilderness.' No sooner doth God say 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased,' than Satan darts the suggestion of doubt, 'If Thou be the Son of God.'" We have in Christ's experience a rehearsal of what is likely to be our own. It is a specimen of what is common in the tempter's strategy. After a season of profit and privilege, you may expect to be caught in some artifice or challenged to some deadly fight. The robber of the soul waits for the moment when the soul, being most happy, is least cautious, and has most to lose. "It is the man bringing his dividend from the banker's door who has most cause to dread the pilferer's hand. . . . . .

It is said of Jesus, whose steps we are to tread in, that "He being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and was led by the Spirit into the Wilderness."

This strikes us as a strong contrast to the reckless rush and flippant levity with which men often plunge into dangers so great that it would need a miracle to bring them out unscathed. "Be ye filled with the Spirit," is the Divine law for us. Can we, when thus filled, go, from our own preferences, into the haunts of sin? Our Father never sends his children into them on any needful errand, or for any wise discipline, without this preparation. "He never," says an old writer, "suffers his castles to be besieged till they be provisioned." With this equipment, it may be his will that we should enter fields where we have to face the full array of evil, and brave the full blast of storms. But however charged with the Spirit's influence, we shall not step into a post of great moral hazard without clear orders.

While only led by our own inclination into a risk, we have no Divine guarantee of protection. Led and filled by God Himself, our souls are safe anywhere.

Not only so, but temptations will be made subservient to the highest purposes of profit to man and glory to God. Overcome, they will keep us closer to Him who is leading us, make us lowlier God-ward, and more sympathetic man-ward. Victors who have been tempted are the wisest teachers, and the strongest helpers of those who are tempted now. Still, though the result may be so gracious, the process is so trying that it is right to say, "Father, if it be possible, spare me. It is not my own choice to go, if it be thy will lead me into some other path, but if it be thy will to lead me in this I will go. I will go in the strength of the Lord God, making mention of thy righteousness and that only."

"THE BEST PROTECTOR."

A TRUE INCIDENT.

THE train rushed into the station, and I was relieved to find that I was at the end of half my journey. Persons of all classes, each with a different destination and a separate business, were leaving the carriages; but I paused, scanning the crowds, on the step of mine. A happy-faced, soft-voiced porter came running up, and touching his cap, asked:

"Any luggage, lady?" "Thank you, porter, only those two."

"You're not like a lady I served this morning, she had twenty pieces of luggage, and heavy luggage, too. It would be six months before she reached the end of her journey."

"Was she alone?" I ventured to ask. "Oh, yes, lady,—leastways she was not alone—she'd got the best Protector with her. I wonder, lady, if you've got that Protector?"

The sure ring in the voice, the searching, earnest look of inquiry that accompanied the words, told me at once that this man was no novice in the missionary field of a railway-station, and that he was a man who used his opportunities.

"Thank God, and thank you, I have!" I could answer.

"Ah!"—such a relieved sigh, such a radiant face! "Then you know all about Him, lady. He's been everything to me. Now, lady, we'll wait here till we get this labelled, for you must see it labelled yourself, and then you'll have ten minutes to wait for your train. I'm used to the work, you see; I ought to be, for I was twenty years at Brighton-station, and ten years here this very year. I've seen all sorts of life, people that come and wait here for hours for their train, they're ready and waiting for their journey. Others come rushing in, no time even to get a ticket, they just scramble into their carriage, and sit down quite out of breath; they're the people that are almost too late, and they remind me of death-bed repentances. Then there are those that come in—they see their train just out of the station, and they stand looking after it, full of anger—they've lost a few minutes on the road to speak to a friend, and now they're too late! They remind me, lady, of the thousands that die every year, and catch a glimpse of their lost condition at the last moment, too late.

"I've waited on royalty here, too; been as near to them as I am to you, ma'am. But I'm nearer heavenly Royalty than I ever shall be to any other, for I'm in the King's presence all day long. Before I began railway work I waited at the tables of the great, and I've seen plenty of high life of that sort as an outsider; but, lady, I wouldn't exchange my ——"

"Here, preaching Jim, take this over for Streatham," a rough voice burst in upon my porter's little talk; and there was pushed into his hands a truck containing a pile of luggage. He smiled cheerfully, took the new charge, and said, "I'll be back soon, lady."

When he returned I questioned him about the nickname I had heard applied to him. "Yes, ma'am, they call me 'preaching Jim' because I tell them about my Master, and sometimes they'll listen, and sometimes they won't."

"How did you first come to serve our King?" I asked.

"Well, a gent came up to me one day, and he says, 'Here, porter, I want you to look after these while I get my ticket.' So I took care of his wraps and bags, and when he came back he'd only a minute to spare. He gathered his wraps together, pushed something into my hand, and was off down the platform. I looked in my hand—he'd given me half-a-sovereign! I rushed down the platform, put my head in at his carriage window, and tells him his mistake. 'Ah,' he says, 'you're very honest. What's your name?' 'Godson, sir.' 'I wonder,' says he, 'if you are God's son, by faith in the Saviour?' The train was running on, so I just touched my cap, said 'No, sir,' and jumped off the footboard. But I began to think. That gentleman wasn't a clergyman, but he'd hit home, and I kept hearing them words, 'I wonder if you are God's son, by faith in the Saviour?'"

"Every day I looked out for that gent, but I never saw him again; and every day I got more uncomfortable, more wretched about myself, and more conscious that I was a sinner needing a Saviour. Well, the long and the short of it was that I found the salvation I needed, and I've been twenty-eight years, 'oft in danger, oft in woe,' with ever so many escapes for my life: but as I've had the Great Protector with me, I've always come off conqueror, and I expect to do so now to the end of my days."

The gate was opened, the tickets were examined, and my porter and I would soon part. As he put my bag in the rack, he said, "A pleasant journey to you, lady, and our Protector to guard you every step of life's way!" A hearty wish which I re-echoed on his own behalf, and so we parted.

It was pleasant to have had this little chat, apart from the encouragement it always is to meet with those who have their strength in the Source of our strength, and who find in Him their All and in All.

MARGARET B. GERDS.

MANCHESTER ORPHANS.—While Mr. Moody was in Manchester, the work carried on at the Cheetham Orphan Homes, in connection with the Boys' and Girls' Refuges, Strangeways, was brought under his notice. Having seen a number of the boys at one of the early Sunday morning services, he has offered to take twelve of them into his Training School, at Northfield. As many as show fitness and capacity for Mission work will, in due time, be transferred to one of the colleges, and from thence sent forth as Scripture-readers, evangelists, or missionaries, to labour in the noblest and happiest calling which can fall to any human lot. It is expected the party will sail on or about June 1, in company with Mr. Leonard K. Shaw, the hon. sec.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—8.

THE INNER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

PART II.—THE SOUL'S SUPPLY.

"Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. vi. 1.

THUS our Lord bids us beware of what we may call a natural religious life. A religious life that is born of self, and sustained of self, has no higher source and no other aim. It prays and gives alms and fasts—but all that is only the price it pays for the good opinion of others. It gives its gold to buy men's admiration, and has it: that is its reward.

Very different, in all its course, is the life of holiness. It never does, it never can by any possibility, reach that point at which it stands up before men to be seen of them, and says, "I am perfect." It would be false to its whole nature if it could thus make a vulgar show of itself and trumpet its piety in brazen ado before the world. The Father in heaven does not recognise that as having any claim upon Him. Holiness has altogether another source and another nature. It is not born from within; it cannot thrive on itself; it does not seek itself. It is born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man. It is born of God—your Father—the life of holiness has its beginning in that relationship, and in the Father it must find not only its source but its continued sustenance and growth.

Like the life of the body, the spiritual life is dependent upon that from which it is derived. The body, taken from the earth, is dependent upon the earth. It must breathe the breath of earth. It must feed on that which the earth yields. It must be warmed with the warmth, and lit with the light which belongs to earth; it must be exercised in its work, helped by its society, and it must be renewed in sleep. So our spiritual life is from God, and in Him only can we find its supply. Let us set this plainly before us. We cannot sustain the life of holiness by any outside forms—prayers, almsgivings, fastings. We cannot sustain it by thoughts of God. Orthodoxy is not holiness. The springs of this new life are much further in than that—at once deeper down and higher up. The source of our holiness is in God, and in Him it is always to be beginning. It is not a life begun in the soul, and henceforth independent and self-existent. In Him, and in Him only, we live and move and have our being. We can only receive this life from Him; and we can only retain it by continually receiving—of Him, for Him, to Him, is its ceaseless round—like the rain that cometh down from heaven, decking the earth with fairness and enriching it with food, then mounting to heaven again. For our supply, as for the Father's claims, there is the one great condition—"Enter into thine inner chamber, and having shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret."

To all life as we know it, derived and dependent, there are the same wants, in plant and in animal, in body and soul:—

Air,	Food,
Warmth,	Light
Exercise,	Society,
Sleep.

There may be a kind of existence without some one or two of these, but "the abundant life" is only for him who will secure these. And these are the conditions of that healthy spiritual life which is holiness.

THE BREATH

of our new life is to be found only in communion with the Father, away in the inner chamber, behind the veil, in the Holy of Holies of his immediate presence.

And this is more than a first condition of living. If we do not get breath, it matters very little what else we get. Food, warmth, sleep, are of no avail if we cannot breathe. This entering into the presence of God and communing with Him is the renewal of our spiritual atmosphere.

Set before your mind the case of the diver who has to go down to work in the depths under the sea. The water is the breath of the fish, but it is death to him. The condition of his life is that the air of this upper world be pumped down to him. Then he goes down without fear, careful beforehand to see that all is right with the atmosphere above him, and careful, however deep he goes, or however busy he is, to keep the communication open with that upper world to which he belongs. He is not always thinking about his breathing, but he cannot do without it for a moment, and he knows better than to suffer any trifling with the apparatus which secures that.

So are we in this world; the atmosphere is too dense for our new life. And yet our duty lies down here. Well, fear not, go down; only, first of all, be sure about the communication with that higher life to which we belong. If that be broken off or neglected, we die. Take not thy Holy Spirit from me! is a cry for very life. And this hiding of ourselves with God in prayer is the adjusting of the apparatus with that source whence comes the breath of life to us.

Nothing can take the place of this quiet waiting upon God. It were a mad folly to try to live without sleep or food; but what of the man who tries to live without breath? That he does who suffers prayer to dry up into a mere set of phrases, which are gone over without any thought or heart. Wandering thoughts in prayer-time! Is it any wonder? They have nothing else to do.

Prayer is more than a kneeling and asking something from God—much more. It is more than expecting and claiming that which we ask. What we need is to get into the presence of God. We want the hallowing touch of God's own hand, and the light of his countenance. Tarrying in his presence we must have the breath of God breathed into us again, renewing the life which He created at the first.

This is the first, the great need of the life of holiness, without which nothing else can avail us anything.

FOOD.

The second condition of the healthy spiritual life is food. The spirit can no more live without being fed than can the body. But what can it feed on? All about us is of the earth, earthy. Where are the green pastures in which the Good Shepherd can make his sheep lie down, satisfied with the abundance? There is but one answer—in the Word. The Word of God is the food of the life of God. The Word of God read, marked, learned, and inwardly digested, is essential to healthy spiritual life. The blessed man finds his strength in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night.

Think how the milk is fitted to the child, or meat to the strong man; how each nourishes the whole system, turning into blood, bone, nerve, muscle; how each strengthens every organism—brain, heart, lung, eye, ear, hand. So the word of God is fitted to the life of God within us, ministering to every spiritual faculty; invigorating all the graces of our new life, love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance—so strengthening us that to do the will of God is a delight instead of a burden, as a strong man rejoiceth to run a race.

And picture a babe without milk—a puling, pining, wasting thing. So is the soul without the Word, a life that is a prolonged dying without growth, without beauty, without strength! The churches swarm with these sickly babes of twenty, thirty, forty, fifty years of age, always requiring to be dandled and petted, and always needing to be looked after, crying for cordials and to be carried; of no use to any living creature, only a burden to everybody. They have never fed on the Word.

This feeding means much more than reading. Search, meditate, these are the words which direct us in its use. We need to get in at the life of the Word, and we need get the Word into the life.

It might shame us out of our indolence in this matter if we would quietly think out the process of our being fed—the story of the bread that perisheth.

Think of some benighted citizen, ignorant of where his daily bread comes (there are many such). And the kindly countryman takes him forth to enlighten him, brings him away in the dull ploughing-time when under wintry skies they turn the furrows.

"But where is the bread?" cries the bewildered citizen, looking at the dull brown earth.

"Wait and you will see," says the patient countryman.

And now there comes forth the sower casting out the handful of seed.

"But is not the bread ready yet?" murmurs the eager visitor.

"Wait, sir, wait. Come again in the spring."

"Why, surely it will be all eaten before that," thinks the citizen.

So the winter has slowly dragged itself away, and the spring time arrives. Here is the dainty young green wheat waving glossy in the April sunshine.

"Where is it?" asks he of the city.

"Wait, and come again, sir, in the early autumn."

And now it is the harvest time, and he sees them reap the yellow corn and bear it home.

"But I don't see the bread!"

Then follow all the further processes—thrashing, with its complications—the grinding, and all the pleasant mysteries of the mill; and at last the crowning skill of baking.

"Here, sir, is your loaf."

"All that to get me a crust of bread!" thinks the enlightened citizen, amazed.

But even here the matter does not end. A score of further marvels are involved in the process of eating and digesting it; the teeth, sharp to divide, and flattened to grind it, with their movements fitted exactly to their work—the supply of gastric and other juices. So many vast and varied contrivances to feed us with the bread that perisheth. And do we think the soul can be fed by five minutes' careless glancing at a chapter?

The Word is called good seed. God provides that. But we find neither much interest nor profit in the Word because we don't take the trouble to plough and sow and reap and thrash and grind and bake for ourselves; or else we beg our crusts from door to door—old, dry, mouldy, like those which the Gibeonites showed to Joshua. No wonder we find so little relish for the Word.

And not for strengthening only is the Word necessary to the life of holiness. It is a power directly cleansing us. "Sanctify them through thy truth" is still the Saviour's prayer for his disciples. "Now ye are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you," is a blessedness that we may prove. Christ has given Himself for us that He may sanctify and cleanse us "with the washing of water by the Word." Nothing can so hallow the imagination as to have it hung about with these scenes—"the chambers of our imagery" thus adorned and consecrated. The motives and aims must be purged by its precepts. Our hopes and energies are to be purified as well as stimulated by its promises, and the heart freed from its earth-stains and spots of worldliness by these glowing revelations.

We need only allude very briefly to the other conditions; not because they are in any degree of less importance, but because to secure these of which we have already spoken, is to secure much of the others. That communion with God in which we find our spiritual atmosphere is the source of light. The food yields the warmth. Each reveals the presence of our gracious Lord; each invigorates us for exercise; each invites us to rest.

Yet it is well for us to think of each of these distinctly as necessary to the spiritual health, and definitely to seek them.

We need WARMTH; we cannot afford to live without finding in our religion that which stimulates and develops the emotions. All that is within us is to bless the Lord, and we cannot afford to have the heart chilled, the feelings paralysed. The New Testament shows that Christianity began with a great outburst of gladness, so deep, so pure, so sustained that earth had never seen anything like it. Heaven touched earth, and admitted those men through Christ—who is the Door—into the fellowship of its own blessedness. What a picture of pure joy is set before us in this description of the early Church: "And they continued daily with one accord in the Temple, and breaking bread from house to house did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favour with all the people." What a triumphant rapture rings through the experience of St. Paul; and how constant are the exhortations to rejoice. We are not to wait for tides and feelings of gladness; we are to seek and to secure this abiding joy for ourselves. We need linger underneath the Cross, musing on the Crucified, until the fire of our love is kindled and enwraps our soul with ardent adoration. We need sometimes rise up and sit in the Heavenly Places with Christ Jesus, and taste the bliss of those who see the King in his beauty. The joy of the Lord is to be our strength.

LIGHT.

The life of holiness is a growing perception and a larger revelation of God's will. There is in it a steadily increasing power to receive and to perceive. The eye grows stronger with use, until it learns to look upon the Sun.

Holiness is very much a matter of dwelling in the light. She cannot live at the poles, where life is dwarfed and stunted and frozen; her home is on the very equator. The sunshine of the tropics turns the very grasses and ferns of colder climates into trees, and makes the shivering plants of the arctic regions into the monarchs of the forest. The lives that enrich the world with ripened fruit; the mighty love that can endure; the graces that adorn and beautify the Christian character, can only be grown in the light.

Holiness follows the sun that she may dwell in a perpetual noon. They who live in the dawn only are but touched on one side with the solar rays, and on the chill side cast a black far-reaching shadow. But they who know "the perfect day" have found a noontide blessedness, wherein the light falls round about on every side, and the shadows—the black and gloomy thoughts that never felt the sun—are lost.

EXERCISE.

But holiness cannot rest in seeing, or spend herself in emotion. She must show forth her love in her life. A hearer of the Word only that she may be a doer of it. The heavenly vision creates only a more complete consecration and a more earnest inquiry, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

SOCIETY.

For holiness cannot dwell alone. These three, Light, Exercise, and Society, are beautifully set before us by the Apostle John: "If we walk in the light as He is in the light we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth from all sin." Walk, light, fellowship. God's own white light shines right down into the innermost thoughts and wishes, in upon the secret aims and emotions. Quick to see the stains and specks of evil, we are as quick to claim the precious blood which cleanseth from all sin. And walking thus there meet us the Shining Ones.

REST.

This last condition of the healthy spiritual life is often overlooked. Yet it is as needful to the spiritual life, at any rate in its present condition, as it is to mind or body. It is to be feared that there are not a few who think and call themselves Christians that do nothing else but sleep. Religion with them is a waking up occasionally on Sundays to sigh, and stretch, and look toward heaven mournfully—and then a going to sleep again. But there are many earnest souls who suffer much because they have not learned to sleep.

There are no promises more frequent than those which are to secure for us this rest. And that not as a recovery from weariness, but that we may find at the outset strength for service. The Blessed Master would have us at our ease with Him as the first condition. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me TO LIE DOWN," and then after that, "HE LEADETH ME." "Come unto Me," saith He most tenderly, "AND I WILL GIVE YOU REST," then, "learn of Me."

It is away in the inner chamber, in the presence of God, that we find this rest, in the vision of God. To see Him in his Omnipotence controlling all things, to know that his infinite wisdom is guiding all the affairs of the universe, to know that his righteousness triumphs, that his great love and pity yearn over all men; to draw nearer to Him and to call Him my Father; this is deep, delicious, unutterable rest to the soul. To put off the burden of our care from the tired shoulder and let Him carry it for us, home cares, business worries, soul troubles, church work, national affairs, fears about the future—to lay them all upon Him who careth for us, this is rest. To pass up from the toss and turmoil of the earth, away into the secret place of the Most High; to find in the Eternal God our refuge, to feel that underneath us are the everlasting arms, to be quite sure of his love as our very own;—this is the rest which his love and our need alike urge us to seek as a necessity of healthy spiritual life.

"Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest, where Thou makest thy flock to rest at noon?" "He will save: He will rejoice over thee with joy; HE WILL REST in his love; He will joy over thee with singing."

SUNSET THOUGHTS.

"The night cometh when no man can work."

HAVE you watched the hues of sunset,
As the daylight speeds away,
How the misty twilight gathers
At the ending of the day,
When the stars, like jewels of glory,
Glitter with a peaceful light,
As the pale blue sky of evening,
Deepens into quiet night?
Doth it bring to your remembrance
Visions of the close of life;
Of the hush that wraps the spirit,
After a brief day of strife?

Life perchance is in its morning,
Dear to thee its sunny glow;
What thine after years may bring thee,
Joy or care thou may'st not know.
Let us thank the tender Father,
Who hath hid them from our view;
He would have no shadow darken,
Morning's bright and roseate hue.
With the faith of little children,
Take each day as from his hand;
Trusting Him to guide us safely,
To his own glad, resting land.

Maybe, thou hast past life's morning,
In the midst of noontide care,
Fear not! for He knows thy burden,
'Tis not more than thou canst bear.
Doth the mid-day heat oppress thee?
Art thou longing for the rest?
Is thy faith a little wavering?
Doubt not! for He knoweth best.
Are thy talents small? He bids us
To be faithful over few.
Oh! the ever joyous resting,
Of the loving ones and true.

Some have passed the noonday turmoil,
Worked until the setting sun
Disappeared beyond the mountains,
Telling that the day was done.
Some are waiting in the gloaming,
For the loving Master's call;
There may still be work unfinished,
Yet He bids us "Rise, leave all."
We shall say "How light the labour!"
When the toiling day is past;
We shall cry, "How short the conflict!"
When we gain the crown at last.

'Tis not always at the sunset,
In the evening of our day,
That the Father bids his children
Leave the strife, and come away.
Some are taken in life's morning,
Or amid the busy noon:
Oft our wayward hearts would murmur,
"Lord, why callest Thou so soon?"
Question not the Master's doings,
Trust Him till thy day be done;
In thy youth's glad, fearless morning,
Till the setting of its sun.

ISABEL HURREL.

PENDLETON, MANCHESTER.—The 20th anniversary of "The John-street Hall Ragged School and Mission" was celebrated on Saturday week. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thomas Briggs, supported by the Mayor of Salford, the ex-Mayor, Alderman Bailey, J. Sugden (secretary of the hall), and other gentlemen. The Chairman said twenty years had elapsed since the commencement of the operations of what was then called "The Working People's Association" at Charlestown, since which period it had been continued with varying success. Sixteen years ago the present hall was erected, being found necessary for the purpose of effectually carrying on the work. Taking the past year in its entirety, it had been the most successful in the history of the society. There was a ragged school with an average attendance in the winter months of 500 and about half that number in the summer. Outdoor services were held, and the sick visited. The Gospel Temperance work had been singularly successful. During the past eight months 1200 pledges had been taken. The Mayor of Salford, Dr. Meacham (Red Bank), Mr. Alderman Bailey, Mr. Kirlew, Mr. Tom Johnson, and Mr. Sugden addressed the meeting.

ON HEARING THE WORD.

THE object of a faithful ministry is two-fold—to build up believers, and to win souls to Christ; the latter is the distinct work of the evangelist, the former the special work of the pastor. We have the ministry, in its peculiar relations to the believer, in view at this time, deeming the importance of this aspect of our theme to be by no means small, or in any way inferior to the great work of conversion. Indeed, there is reason to think that the results of evangelistic work, whether in connection with the regular ministry, or with special agencies, are often weakened, and sometimes lost, for want of care being given to the advancing of new converts in the knowledge of the truth. Certain it is, that for want of clearer perception of those deep things of God which He has revealed in his Word, many young converts lose their first love, and fall out of the ranks; while many in our Churches lack spiritual force, and fail to walk in the assurance of faith and hope, because they lack the assurance of understanding. Believers of every age, and of all degrees of experience, require to be led to the Word of God, which, to the devout mind, is ever full of life and power, ever able to build us up, and increase us in the knowledge of Christ. But it is obvious that even where the ministry is spiritual and decidedly scriptural in its character, it must yet depend on the spirit of the hearer as to how far it shall be successful in producing those fruits which our Lord said that seed falling into honest and good ground should certainly bring forth.

Jesus Christ had much to say to his disciples on the subject. Two precepts fell from his lips in addressing them, which demand our careful consideration. One was "Take heed what ye hear" (Mark ix. 24); the other "Take heed how ye hear" (Luke viii. 18). Both seem to have been uttered in connection with the wonderful series of parables recorded in Matthew xiii., where we also find the words, so often repeated by our Lord, "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." All who profess to be his disciples have not ears such as the Great Teacher intended; of some it may be said as of those referred to in Jer. vi. 10, "Their ear is uncircumcised that they cannot hear. The word of the Lord is a reproach to them, they have no delight in it." To each one of the seven Churches in Asia the Master addressed the words, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches;" showing how essential it is that we should possess special grace to enable us to hear aright the truths of his Word, and how diligently we should apply ourselves to the knowledge of his will. In these days great caution as to what we hear is requisite. From many pulpits teaching is given which so far from building up the soul, weakens and disturbs the very foundations on which it rests. Error and truth are so commingled that the latter is rendered powerless, and the mind is perverted from the right ways of the Lord. The sophistries of human reason, the speculations of man, the fine-spun theories of "modern thought," are put forth in place of the solid and unchanging truths of "The glorious Gospel of the Blessed God." This is done in some cases with so much skill and apparent reverence for truth, that hearers are apt, before they suspect the soundness of the teaching they receive, to find themselves perplexed with doubts and beset with difficulties which they would never have experienced at all but for their lack of attention to our Saviour's direction.

It is of the first importance that Christian hearers should seek out a godly and a faithful ministry such a one as Bunyan describes in his picture, referred to in these pages in a recent article on "The Ministry for the Times." Concerning this picture, the Interpreter said to the Pilgrim, "Bear well in mind what thou hast seen, lest in thy journey thou meet with some that pretend to lead thee right, but their way goes down to death." There are many who prefer such teachers; the time would seem to have come (certainly, there are signs of its near approach,) to which the Apostle refers in 2 Tim. iv. 3: "They will not endure sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts, and will turn away their ears from the truth and turn aside unto fables." The true believer is not in the counsel of such, he desires to hear the Word of God, and keep it; let him, therefore, carefully consider what he hears, and pray for heavenly wisdom to distinguish between the precious and the vile, between the truth of God and the specious errors of men.

The advice of the wise King of Israel must have weight with him, "Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge." But given a ministry pure, and true in its adherence to the inspired rule of faith, and also hearers eager to hear the voice of the Shepherd, not of the stranger, yet, if the soul is to profit, the hearer must take heed how he hears. A few hints on the art of hearing may be of service to some of those who are alive to the claims of truth upon their attention.

(1) It is important to hear as in the sight of God. Thus Cornelius and his friends set themselves to listen to Peter's message when he was sent of God to inform them of the Christian dispensation and its distinctive truths. His words must have been to the Apostle stirring and impressive in their deep earnestness and solemnity, "Now then we are all here present in the sight of God to hear all things that have been commanded thee of the Lord." It is not the servant we are to have in view when we are attending upon the ministry of the Word, but the Master. However loved and honoured for his work's sake, it is on the message rather than the messenger, on the King from whom he comes, rather than on the ambassador, that we are to fix our attention. Too often this is lost sight of; truth from the lips of an unknown and perhaps neglected, though faithful servant of Christ, is sometimes lightly esteemed. "Wisdom is better than strength; nevertheless, the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard." This is to grieve the Holy Spirit, who delights to speak through his own instruments, choosing ofttimes "the weak things of the world," rather than those which are by man more highly esteemed. Many a Christian loses ground by running hither and thither after popular preachers and great men, rather than contenting himself with a ministry of which Christ is the central theme, and the exposition of the Scriptures in their fulness and force the great aim. It is when the presence of God is discerned and the truth of God sought after, that the soul gains light, and the hearer is truly edified.

(2) It is essential to right hearing that there be prayerful dependence upon the Divine Spirit whose office it is to guide into all truth. Without his aid we cannot see light in God's light; no human instrumentality, however qualified, can suffice to reach the recesses of the heart and mind, and to make us prove the illuminating, sanctifying power of truth. This is strikingly illustrated in the case of Philip and the eunuch. The Spirit led the preacher to the hearer. The Spirit was in the word read, the Spirit guided the words spoken; when the message was delivered He caught away the messenger, and filled the hearer's heart with a holy joy.

It is impossible for either preachers or hearers to make too much of the Holy Spirit's agency and power in reference to the services of the sanctuary. Without it the most gifted, and the most earnest, are powerless; with it "the feeble shall be as David." The pulpit and the pew are alike entirely dependent for spiritual results on his grace and energy. "The things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God." "He that is spiritual discerneth all things." These are simple axioms in the sphere of sacred truth, and we must take them into all our calculations and methods in the pursuit of spiritual good.

(3) Reverent regard to the sacred Scriptures is essential to profitable hearing. The Bereans are an example in this respect for all time. "These were more noble than they of Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily whether those things were so. Therefore many of them believed." The wise hearer will refuse to be led beyond the covers of his Bible. Within them are to be found the green pastures where he must feed; there are the treasures he regards as better than fine gold, there the oracles he knows he may depend upon, without fear of being misled. For him in every disputed point this is the arbiter to whose decision he bows. Of it he says:—

> "This is the judge that ends the strife,
> Where wit and reason fail,
> My guide to everlasting life
> Through all this gloomy vale."

He knows the voice of the Good Shepherd is heard there, and so it is with him, as with all who are the true sheep of Christ's fold, "A stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the voice of strangers." The wise hearer will be open to conviction concerning every point where Scriptural evidence is given; prejudice and preconceived ideas, however long cherished, will give way before the force of a "Thus saith the Lord;" the claims of sect and party will be subordinate to Bible light, and with docile, childlike mind he will "receive with meekness the engrafted word." Thankful for all which tends to make the written Word more clear to his understanding, and practical in its power over the heart and life, eager to gain whatever information he can upon its hallowed contents, he takes it as the right-hand man of his counsel, and refuses to be led away from its dictates. "Comparing spiritual things with spiritual" he thus learns to know and do his Lord's will.

(4) We close by saying, an eye to Christ, and the exaltation of his name, is essential to a wise and right hearing of the Word. He is the pole-star of the believer's voyage, upon which his eye is fixed, and by which he directs his course. He is the one great object of desire in all his search after truth, and the only anchorage of his faith. He tests all doctrines, and proves all assertions, by this unerring rule—Do they exalt Christ? then they are worthy of his acceptance, and command his confidence. Our Lord said of the Holy Spirit, "He shall glorify Me, for He shall receive of Mine, and show it unto you." How far Christ is glorified by any ministry becomes, therefore, the measure of the believer's delight in it, and of his respect for its teaching. Like the wonderful shield of which we have read, into which the artist who made it had so skilfully worked his name that it could not be removed without destroying the shield itself, so Christ is interwoven with every truth so closely that nothing can be true in which his name is not found, or which does not in some way show forth his praise. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." His Mediatorial Person and Work, the virtue of his Sacrifice, the power of his Resurrection, and the glory of his Second Coming, will be themes of vital importance in the estimation of the wise hearer, to whom Christ is truly "all and in all." And this not for the sake of a cold and rigid orthodoxy, but out of love to his name, and practical desire to be made conformable to his will. The great end of hearing the Word is that we may do it; we gaze upon the beauty of Christ as it is reflected in the mirror of the inspired volume, that we may be changed into the same image as by the Spirit of the Lord. Let us, then, not be "forgetful hearers, but doers of the Word," and let us hear as those who would "prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

BETHEL SANTHAL MISSION.

A LETTER from Mr. Haegert, dated Bethel Mission Station, Jamtara, March 19, says:—

"Six native teachers go every day, two-by-two, to different villages, preaching the glad tidings of salvation through Christ. This morning at 8 a.m. we had a "council of war." Christians from six or eight villages were present; we had a happy time with the Master; we trust that our native brethren were strengthened by it.

"On the 7th inst. I was called in all haste to attend a Brahmin priest in Phatepore, ill with cholera. He had lost the power of speech, but uplifting his clasped hands in a pleading way, he wept like a child. For many years he had heard about Jesus; he had been convinced, yet thought his sacrifice of position too much to follow the Lamb of God; now he was apparently dying, without God, and without hope. His tears of bitter regret flowed freely over his cheeks. I stayed two hours with him, and called again in the evening, comforting him with the words of our Saviour, who receives all who come to Him. I gave him medicine; we all prayed for him. The medicine acted at once, and his life was spared.

"On the 10th, in the evening, we had our magic-lantern at work. Over 300 people were present. They opened their eyes and mouths to see the wonderful things on the canvas. I preached to them in Santhali, and Bolai (native teacher) translated sentence by sentence into Bengali, as our assembly consisted of Santhals and Hindoos."

Communications should be addressed to the Hon. Sec., Miss M. C. Gurney, 12, Camden Hill-road, Gipsy Hill.

VEVEY, SWITZERLAND.—Messrs. B. Caille and Co., publishers in this place, write: "We should be happy to communicate or to meet with any good friends of Gospel temperance who might be in Switzerland this summer. Kindly direct them to us."

INDIAN PRAYER UNION.—This Prayer Union was started in Bangalore, S. India, in the month of July, 1881, under a sense of the deep need that exists throughout the land of an outpouring of God's Spirit, the result of which should be a revival of true, vital Christianity. This little Union has nothing sectarian in its nature, being composed of Christians of every denomination, and from all parts of India, some native converts being among the number. There are now upwards of 250 members, and the founders are most anxious to increase the number of those who will really pray. The Secretary for the English branch is Miss Hogarth, 35, Addison-gardens, North Kensington, W.

UNCONVERTED CHURCH MEMBERS.

BY DR. J. H. BROOKES, ST. LOUIS.

ONE of the saddest features of the present evil times is the immense number of unconverted, and therefore unsaved, Church members found in all denominations. This is no doubt largely due to the unfaithfulness of preachers who, unlike the Apostle, cannot say, "I am pure from the blood of all men," because, unlike the Apostle, they are unable to add, "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God" (Acts xx. 26, 27). No man can declare all the counsel of God concerning the utter corruption of the human heart, the entire worthlessness of the flesh, even in its most attractive forms, the inability of any and every Church on the earth to save, the absolute necessity of the new birth, and the certainty of an everlasting hell for unbelievers, and be popular! And with thousands in the pulpit the main thing is to be popular at any cost.

Besides this, there is the pressure of a strong desire to succeed, to build up one's own sect, to gain reputation and renown as a pastor or evangelist, to wield a powerful influence in connection with ecclesiastical affairs; and hence people are urged to join the Church, before they have passed out of death into life.

Well, such false prophets might find searching admonitions in God's Word, if they would read them. "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from Me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand" (Ezek. iii. 17, 18). Such a minister may put into a building a lot of wood, hay, stubble, but it will all be burned at the coming of Christ, and he himself will be saved, provided he is converted, "yet so as by fire" (1 Cor. iii. 11—15). "Many," says Jesus, not few, but "many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name, and in Thy name cast out devils, and in Thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from Me, ye that work iniquity" (Matt. vii. 22, 23).

If thus it shall be with false prophets, how will it be with unconverted members of the Church? Let the same Witness, who is "the Truth," reply in his own words. "When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and He shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are: then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and Thou hast taught in our streets. But He shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; depart from Me, all ye workers of iniquity" (Luke xiii. 25—27). It is not enough, therefore, to go to the Lord's table, to eat and drink in his presence, or to hear his teaching; for except a man is born again by the Holy Spirit through faith in Jesus Christ, as revealed in the Word of God, he can never enter into the Kingdom of God, but shall most certainly be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power.

Oh, it is unspeakably painful to think of the multitudes in various ecclesiastical organisations, who give no evidence whatever that they know Jesus as a personal Saviour. They deny the inspiration of the Scriptures, they avow infidel sentiments, they are thoroughly wedded to the world, they live in sin, they are precisely like the children of the devil in their principles, their aims, their amusements, their conduct, and their conversation; and yet their fear is quieted because they belong to the Church. They imagine that all is well, while all is ill with them, perhaps fatally ill; for it is not probable that they will be aroused from their slumber of death, until it is too late to escape the tremendous consequences of their delusion.

There is nothing for which the children of God should more earnestly pray than for the power of the Holy Ghost to attend the truth to the hearts and consciences of these dead members. Of course it is difficult to reach them by human instrumentality, for, as a rule, they will not listen to a man who preaches the Gospel; but it is not difficult to reach the Throne of Grace in their behalf, and surely no class stands in greater need of earnest, importunate prayer. Moreover, those who have received Christ, and are, therefore, born again, should seek opportunity to talk to them kindly but faithfully, and to put into their hands tracts and little books, that plainly show how, and what it is, to be saved. True Christians in all the congregations of the land are doubtless acquainted with some who, perhaps, sit in the adjoining pew, but who, even in the judgment of the largest charity, know nothing whatever of the power of God's converting grace. Let them send one of these little printed messengers of truth to such, setting forth simply and clearly the way of salvation, and let their prayers attend it for God's blessing.—The Truth.

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.

LAST week the thirty-ninth anniversary of the Ragged School Union was held in Exeter Hall, the Earl of Shaftesbury presiding. The report for the year, read by Mr. John Kirk, secretary, stated that the buildings connected with the union numbered 170, and the noble army of voluntary teachers had reached the total of 3211. The day-schools had, for the most part, been maintained with efficiency and usefulness through the year. The benevolent operations included infant nurseries, maternity societies, Dorcas meetings, soup kitchens, Thrift and providence were encouraged by Bands of Hope, temperance societies, Blue Ribbon missions, penny banks, clothing, boot and shoe and loan clubs.

Some 700 of the children from the various schools were seated on the orchestra, each school with its banneret. During the evening, under the conductorship of Mr. Joseph Proudman, they sang in a very creditable manner. The prizes, consisting of books, illustrated cards, and of money, were distributed by the Chairman to the teachers of the various schools, who, as they passed off the platform, in some instances staggering under a heavy pile of books, were more or less cheered.

The Bishop of Bedford spoke of the need for these agencies for the lifting up of the masses. Ardent Churchman as he was he made the admission that the ordinary ministrations of the Church of England were inadequate to the work to be done. He said he was very sorry that the School Board should be aiming at schemes of higher education before trying to grapple with the wants of the poorest and lowest. Rev. Paxton Hood and Rev. G. W. Olver having made short speeches, the Earl of Shaftesbury said what was required was not so much a justification of ragged-schools as an extension of their operations. The venerable earl, who has never missed attending one of the thirty-nine anniversaries of the Ragged School Union, was loudly cheered by the children, as well as by the general audience, on quitting the hall.

MAY MEETING NOTES.

THE BISHOP OF EXETER ON THE BIBLE.

At the recent meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society Dr. Temple spoke very forcibly on the authority of the inspired Word. Remembering the Bishop's connection some years ago with the noted "Essays and Reviews," his words on this subject are to be received with devout thankfulness and special regard. He said:—

I have read many books which do much for the human intellect and for the human spirit. I have read many books which teach and enlighten—which sometimes seem, as it were, to be the medium of new revelations to the soul; I have read the writings of good men and great men; I have read the writings of great philosophers of old—of men who saw far deeper into the truth by the power of wonderful intellects, guided, no doubt, by God's providence, than it was possible for ordinary men to see. I have read many books which set before the soul the loftiest motives of action, and the most heavenly principles to guide the conduct. And still, wherever we turn, as we read them all, we feel that they are referred to our own consciences to judge; that we still are called to discriminate, and to say, "Here I accept, and there I reject;" and though the man be a greater man than I, still my judgment remains responsible for its own decision, and I cannot shift the responsibility on any other shoulders than my own. And I have read many such books, and have felt that I have learned much; and still, for all that, there remains the sense that these books, though they are my teachers, are not my rulers, and, though they instruct me, they cannot command me. But when I turn to the Word of God, it takes me straight, as it were, into God's very presence, and gives its message thereby an authority which is his, and his alone. It speaks with the authority of its Maker.

So again in reference to the relation of the Bible to modern criticism, and strictest scrutiny and research:—

The more the Bible is spread, and the more the Bible is studied, the deeper, the profounder the thought that is spent upon it, the more earnest the inquiry bestowed upon it, the more careful the criticism, the closer the examination—all the more shall stand out conspicuous before the spiritual nature, the marvellous power which breathes through all its pages, and tells mankind of the truths which it contains. I fear not any examination to which it may be subjected; I fear not any criticism of its history, or any investigation of its source; I fear not any examination of the details of its meaning. Still, I know that whatever else shall go, this will stand. This is, indeed, the message of God Almighty to man, and as long as man still remains here on earth, still shall he find, in ever increasing measure, the power which it has to uplift his soul.

Coming from such a source, all lovers of the grand old book will hail these wordswith satisfaction and delight.

RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.

The eighty-fourth anniversary meeting of this institution was held on the 4th inst., Earl Cairns presiding. The report was of a most gratifying kind, giving evidence of a vast amount of vitality and power existing in the various departments of the Society's operations. The total circulation from the Home depôt had been 79,379,350, of which 33,249,800 had been tracts; an increase over the previous year of 6,217,730, while 14,000,000 had been issued from foreign depôts. The only feature of the reports presented, of other than a cheering character, was the fact that there was a slight decrease in the funds of the Society so far as the subscriptions and donations were concerned. As the Chairman and others pointed out, this probably arises from the fact that the position of the Society as a missionary agency is not clearly present to the public mind, its enormous business as a publishing house obscuring somewhat its missionary objects. The work done by its means, in connection with the evangelisation of Europe, has been of untold value and of widespread extent; while in Asia and Africa, as also in the colonies, the circulation of good literature and Gospel truth has been greatly promoted.

THE POWER OF HOME LITERATURE.

Dr. MacEwan, of Clapham, spoke of the manifest readiness of those at its head to adapt the work of the Society to the requirements of the times, especially referring to the admirable series of "Present Day Tracts" issuing from its press. His words as to the provision made for the youth of our country were well deserved:—

It has ever been the grandest feature of the society that it influenced powerfully for good the life of our country in its most sacred and influential spheres. Guard home life, and young life, and you take the best method of establishing religion and righteousness in the land. Keep these pure, and you go far to purify the whole nation. Already has this society done noble service in providing a wholesome and readable literature for the homes and the youth of our country, and I do believe that at this moment the boys and girls of England give it most hearty thanks for providing them bright and instructive periodicals to which they can turn in their leisure hours with pleasure and profit, without the risk of having their young lives poisoned.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION ABROAD.

The addresses given by Dr. Lansdell and Rev. Jas. Smith, of Delhi, furnished ample illustration of the importance of tract distribution in foreign lands, and gave most encouraging instances of the blessing God had made to rest upon it. We have recently referred in our columns to Dr. Lansdell's travels in Siberia, and his efforts in this direction, and must refer our readers to the published reports of his speech, which well deserves a careful perusal. Mr. Smith in an extremely interesting speech told of the rapid spread of education, and the de ire for knowledge in India, among the lower, as well as the upper classes, showing the need there is for the extension of such operations as those of this Society.

THE INFLUENCE OF A BAD BOOK.

Canon Fleming uttered an eloquent word against the pernicious influence of bad literature, and illustrated it by a double reference to the late John Angell James, of sainted memory. We specially commend his words to the attention of the young:—

It is a satisfaction to know that that book of John Angell James, "The Anxious Enquirer," has reached its six-hundredth thousand. But, alas! who can tell what shall be the influence of a bad book? That same minister—and I believe there was no holier minister of God in the Church than John Angell James—once said this in the pulpit: "Twenty-five years ago, when I was a boy, a schoolfellow gave me an infamous book, which he lent to me for fifteen minutes. At the end of that time I was to return it to him, but that book has haunted me like an evil spectre ever since. I have asked God on my knees to obliterate that book from my mind, but I believe that I shall carry down the damage of those fifteen minutes to my grave." God grant, then, that in that effort which we are making, in common with all the churches, the growing literature of this age may increasingly be such as shall extend the spirit of pure and undefiled religion, such as parents, when dying, would wish to put into the hands of their sons and daughters.

LONDON CITY MISSION.

In presiding over the annual meeting of the London City Mission, the Earl of Aberdeen claimed peculiar sympathy with its work, on the ground that it was of an eminently unobtrusive kind. It was therefore emphatically desirable that the public should be made fully acquainted with its operations. The missionaries have such special demands on their faith and patience, that they need to be assured of the place they hold in the daily thought and prayer of their supporters and friends.

It appeared from the report that a larger average number of agents have been at work during the past year than in any previous one, 454 missionaries having been employed. The vastness of their sphere may be judged of from the fact that during the twelve months prior to the publication of last year's police returns, 26,170 new houses had been built in the metropolis, covering a length of more than 86 miles- £47,519 had been received by way of income for the year. The expenditure had been £51,014; but unless larger aid was given, some districts would have to be resigned which are at present occupied. This, when the need for wider operations is so urgent in all directions, would be a calamity we trust will be speedily averted.

Such a record of work as this Society shows, we venture to say, cannot be surpassed by any institution either as to its importance or its thoroughly evangelical character. It is a cause for deepest gratitude to God that there should be such a work going on in a centre like our great metropolis, from which there radiates all over the world lines of influence and impulse for good as well as for evil.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE LEAGUE.

The annual meeting of the National Temperance League, under the presidency of Mr. J. Crosfield, J.P., has been a most successful one. Mr. Robert Rae, the able secretary, had a very cheering report to submit. Referring to the recent division in the House of Commons on the Local Option question, Mr. W. Fowler, M.P., said:—

It showed not only a marked change in public opinion, but also in the opinion of Members of Parliament, who were "a squeezable article," soon affected by the ebbs and flows of public sentiment. A notable change was also shown in the opinion of the members of the Government on the question. He confessed, however, that he had misgivings as to whether the decision of the House of Commons meant all that it seemed to indicate, and whether a great deal more would not have to be done before the end aimed at was attained. He doubted whether the boards to be appointed for all sorts of objects would also do the temperance work as well as some people supposed.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION

has this year celebrated its Eightieth Anniversary, and had, as it deserved, a most enthusiastic reception from the vast audience which thronged Exeter Hall at its annual gathering there. The chairman this year was Mr. Henry Lee, M.P. The speeches delivered were of a high order, as may be inferred from the fact that the programme included such names as those of Revs. Arthur Mursell, R. H. Lovell, Newman Hall, and Dr. Bevan. The subjects dealt with were of first importance, and worthy of the highest efforts that sanctified talent could employ to set them forth. They were, "Love, the great need of the Teacher," "Face to Face, or Confidence between Teachers and Scholars," "The youthful Christian life," and "The Temperance Work, in its connection with the Sunday-school." We should like to quote from the valuable addresses given on these topics, but space forbids. Our contemporary, The Sunday-school Chronicle, gives full reports. We trust these utterances may be productive of yet larger success in the great work the Union labours so effectually to promote.

REV. J. CLIFFORD, in a recent letter from Nice, states that he is much better, and improving daily in health and strength.

Notes and Comments.

In consequence of having to go to press a day or two earlier than usual, by reason of the Whitsuntide recess, we must defer some notes on the meetings of the Congregational Union and London Missionary Society, with other matter, until our next issue.

Dr. Parker, of the City Temple, has been elected to the Chairmanship of the Congregational Union by a large majority, two-thirds of the assembly voting for his election.

We learn from the current number of Evangelical Christendom that it has been arranged to hold the annual Autumn Conference of the Evangelical Alliance this year at Norwich, some time in October next.

A lady correspondent responds to our suggestion that some Christian capitalists should provide places of safe and attractive resort for the working classes, by offering to contribute £100 to any substantial effort of this description.

We commend the approaching eight days' Gospel Temperance Mission at Exeter Hall to the prayers of all our readers, and invite the co-operation of those who have it in their power to help in making the effort eminently successful in securing the highest results. The chairmen and speakers engaged, ensure a good representation of the principles which the Mission aims to advance; we may confidently expect the Lord's presence and blessing upon the meetings of the week, which commence on the 27th inst.

Mr. John Shrimpton, of 38, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W.C., has sent us a copy of his fourth "Annual Letter to Boys," a copy of which he will be pleased to forward to any schoolboy who will apply to him for it. We should like all the boys of all our public schools to read it. It abounds in wise counsel and racy utterances, such as are calculated to be of good service in winning young hearts, and guiding youthful minds. Long may the writer live to be blessed of God in such useful efforts as this!

A meeting of unusual interest was held recently at Park Chapel, Camden Town, to celebrate the seventieth birthday of Rev. Joshua Harrison, its esteemed and honoured pastor. It is a fact of much interest that he and Mr. S. Morley, M.P., who presided on this occasion, were more than fifty years ago young men in the same business department of the well-known house of Messrs. J. & R. Morley, Wood-street. A close bond of friendship was then formed between them; together they attended the Rev. John Clayton's ministry, and together they received the true light into their hearts. The loving esteem in which Mr. Harrison is held by his church and congregation, as well as by many friends outside, was shown by a gift of £3000, and an address full of kindly and hearty words of congratulation and Christian affection. Drs. Stoughton, Allon, Hannay, Angus, and Newth, with others, took part in the engagements of the evening, which formed a graceful and fitting tribute to a life of sterling worth and unostentatious service of Him, who, as Mr. Harrison declared, had been the God of his youth, his manhood, and his age, and whose goodness had upheld him to that day.

A meeting of a similiar character, and under the same chairmanship, was also held the same week to express goodwill and esteem for another minister of nearly fifty years' standing, Rev. W. Tyler, of Bethnal-green. Mr. Tyler's labours in connection with the Christian Community, which was originally organised by the Rev. John Wesley for the benefit of the sick poor, and to labour in the lowest districts of London, have earned for him general respect and love, and have been followed by a large measure of success.

At the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of England just held, with Dr. Edmond as Moderator, Rev. Dr. Dykes moved a resolution to the effect that such changes should be made in the language of the Westminster Confession as would make that venerable symbol of the Reformed faith more intelligible to the people of the present day. This was seconded by Dr. McEwan, and carried by a large majority. Not a few adherents of the old faith will watch with deep interest and concern the progress of this movement, anxiously waiting to see what form the changes proposed will take.

We are sorry to see that the memorial presented to Mr. Gladstone, in the name of 120 Members of Parliament, asking him to afford special facilities for the second reading of the Sunday Closing Bill, has failed of its object. So valuable and important a measure calls for urgent and prompt support, and even yet let us hope some way may be found to secure for it a further consideration before the Session closes. No subject that has come before the House is more worthy of its attention, and no Bill which asks for its sanction, is so full of promise of good results for the nation, if only it could be made into law.

We are glad to observe that the Earl of Dunraven's motion for the opening of museums and galleries on Sundays has been rejected in the House of Lords by a majority of twenty-four. We are thankful for this in the interests of the very class for whose benefit this piece of legislation has been proposed. It could not fail in the long run to tend against the working classes by increasing Sunday labour, and leading to further changes in our Sabbath observance which must be morally and socially prejudicial to all concerned. The friends of the Sabbath as a day of rest and of sacred appointment should maintain vigorous and resolute action against the various infringements that many seek to make upon it.

Among the names of self-made men, from whose lives valuable lessons may be learned by all who contemplate their course, that of Peter Cooper, who has just passed away, in his 93rd year, from the place he so worthily filled in the society of New York, must rank high. After severe trials in early life, he rose step by step, through the exercise of perseverance and virtuous principles, to the highest pinnacles of mercantile prosperity and social influence. It has been said of him by those who knew him best:—

> His energetic business life is a fair sample of the industry and skill to which our country owes its matchless progress. His genius for business, his broad, practical philanthropy, and his eminently righteous and pure life, place him among the worthiest of the great men of our land. How to make money honourably, and how to spend it wisely, are seldom so nobly illustrated as in the life of Peter Cooper.

His long life abounded in usefulness to his fellows, and in fruitfulness to the glory of God. He has left behind him a substantial monument to his true character as a Christian philanthropist, in the Cooper Institute for the Advancement of Science and Art in the City of New York, which he established at a cost of two million dollars, and handsomely endowed.

A letter in The Nonconformist and Independent of last week, on the present aspect of Congregationalism, calls attention to the want of sympathy and brotherly love which prevails in some churches, and speaks of it as "one of the chief causes that lead to declension." The writer says:—

> The Church is a family, and though the newly-received child may hear the Master's words, "My son, my daughter," can you blame him if he feels pained and hurt at finding himself practically alone? Being adopted into fellowship, is it not the duty of his fellow-members to come forward with kindly words of welcome and sympathy? Surely if the Church is Christian, its first duty is to show Christianity to the new-comer, and so make him to feel that he is of their number. "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

We are persuaded that the lack of attention to this lies at the root of the indisposition many new converts show to joining the churches of to-day. Workers in mission-halls, and other special agencies, know how often converts, when urged to identify themselves with some one or other of the Christian communities in their neighbourhood, excuse themselves on the ground that they do not feel at home when they go to the regular church and chapel services. In many cases this is not to be wondered at, no effort whatever being made to welcome them, or the slightest notice, in fact, being taken of them if they do present themselves.

Every Christian church should be a spiritual home for each and all who enter its fellowship, but it can only be this by the manifestation of kindly concern for, and interest in one another, by all the members. Apart from this, church fellowship is merely a name, a sham rather than a true representation of the fold of Christ. Class distinctions have no right to interfere with Christian brotherhood, or to intrude themselves into Christ's Church. The plain and practical words of the Apostle James need to be ever and anon repeated in the hearing of many, "My brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons."

At an important conference held the other day at the City Temple, on Evangelistic work in London, the Earl of Shaftesbury in the chair, the duty of Church members was much dwelt upon. Rev. W. E. Hurndall, of Bow, spoke with faithful boldness of the sin of "those respectable people who say they are converted, but who sit in their pews Sunday after Sunday, and never stretch out a hand during the week to save those in poverty and sin." Mr. Jack (theatre preacher) said: "What was needed in combination with special services was for people of the upper classes to come down, and bridge over the chasm between the classes. His panacea was for Church members to go down to the poor people, who would receive them gladly if they understood that they really loved them, and desired to do them good."

Rev. G. S. Reaney also said "they must look to the better class—to those who had leisure—and they must look for such a manifestation of practical Christianity as was not yet conceived." The noble Earl also, referring to personal Christian effort, said, "It was house to house visitation, coming into contact with the fathers, mothers, and children, which would produce a real and permanent effect." All these testimonies are true, and when the Church of Christ, in the spirit of her Lord, learns to come down, we shall soon see the moral and spiritual condition of the masses going up.

Pastors and teachers do well in these days to show special gentleness, and to use special care, in dealing with those who are troubled with honest doubts on religious questions. Amid the abounding scepticism which permeates much of our literature, and prevails so extensively in modern society, many minds unskilled in argument, and sincere in desire for truth, get disturbed and perplexed. For such, not censure, or harsh, cold criticism, is required, but kind, gentle sympathy, and fraternal endeavours to guide and help reverent inquiry. As Christ treated the doubting Thomas, so should we our doubting brethren and friends.

To frown upon them is to increase their difficulties, and probably to drive them more fully into the quagmires of scepticism and despair. Truth will bear fullest investigation, and the best remedy for doubts as to the reality of the Christian's creed, is to give them full vent, and to place them alongside of the overwhelming proofs of its value, and sure foundations. Smother doubts, and they are likely to linger on, and sooner or later assert themselves with increased vigour: bring them out and honestly face them, and they will vanish like mists before the sun.

MAJOR POOLE AT FROME.

A VERY successful Gospel Temperance Mission was conducted in this town for the first six days in May by Major Poole and Mrs. Evered Poole, assisted by Rev. W. W. Perrin, Mrs. Reaney, and Mr. Mark Knowles. The meetings have been mostly held in the Market Hall, the largest building in the town, and have been marked by the high spiritual tone so prominent a feature in Major Poole's Mission throughout. Some opposition showed itself at first in an attempt to disturb the meetings by scattering noxious acids about, but the Spirit of God prevailed and order was preserved.

We have reasons to believe that many rejoice that Major and Mrs. Poole came to this town. The same spirit was manifest in a marked manner in Mr. Knowles' addresses. The Mission was closed on the evening of May 8, with an after-meeting for prayer and praise. Number of pledges taken, 384; ribbons registered, 504; and about another 500 unregistered. 110 papers were taken home for parents' signature from the children's meeting. B.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.—The good work commenced by Major and Mrs. Poole is proceeding satisfactorily, and greater results are still anticipated. Among those employed at Messrs. Kelly's, printers, a large number are donning the blue.

DISCHARGED PRISONERS.—The noble rescue work carried on among these pariahs of society by Mr. George Hatton and his coadjutors in the St. Giles' Christian Mission is rapidly extending. The Home Office authorities have kindly granted a site for the erection of an Iron Room near Wandsworth prison, for the daily reception of those discharged from its gloomy portals. A blessed work will be carried on there, similar to that which has been so greatly owned of God at Coldbath-fields and Holloway. Help is much needed for this new effort, and will, we trust, be freely given. A meeting in connection with the Mission is to be held at Exeter Hall, on the evening of the 29th inst., when testimonies will be given by a number of those who have been rescued from lives of lawlessness and sin.

REV. GRIFFITH JOHN IN CHINA.

MY DEAR SIR,—I wish to thank you very sincerely for THE CHRISTIAN, which you have sent to me during the past twelve months. Its record of work done for God, at home and abroad, is very stimulating to one seeking to advance the interests of Christ's kingdom in a land such as this is. Here the progress is slow, and the work plodding. The kingdom of God is coming unquestionably in China, but not with observation. You will not suppose, however, that the missionaries are either disappointed or discouraged. Our faith in God and the Gospel is unshaken, and we know that we are not engaged in a doubtful contest.

Now and again our hearts are greatly cheered by what we see and hear of the silent influences which are at work around us. Especially are we gladdened from time to time to find that the converts are working for God, and that they are the means of leading men into the light by their consistent lives, as well as their fearless proclamation of the truth. A very gratifying instance of this has just come under my observation.

It is now six years since a young man from a neighbouring district joined the Church at Hankow. Since his baptism he has been a humble and faithful disciple. I do not think we have one connected with us who has given greater satisfaction, on the whole. His relations were bitterly opposed to his becoming a Christian, and many of them showed their anger in ways that were extremely trying to the young convert. One of his uncles was especially wrathful, and threatened once and again to kill him if he did not renounce his faith. The young man persevered. Gradually the light found its way into the dark minds of his persecutors; and now nearly every member of the household is in the church. The first to yield were his parents, and they have been in the church for some time. Last year his uncle came forward as a candidate for baptism, and in due time was received, along with his two sons. This uncle is now one of the happiest and brightest-looking men in the congregation. This day four weeks his elder brother appeared in my study as a candidate for baptism, bringing with him an ancestral tablet, on which the names of twelve generations are inscribed. It was with evident joy the younger brother handed the tablet to me, saying, "Pastor Yong, we are now all Christians, and shall need this tablet no more. I have brought it to you, thinking you might like to have it." I was very glad to have it, and I am keeping it in my study as a precious memorial of this triumph of Divine grace.

An instance of this kind gives me an idea of certain possibilities in connection with our work. We know not what influences are at work around us, or what results are about to appear. Ancestral worship is the very strong hold of Satan in this land. The Chinese will laugh at the idols as much as you please; but tell them it is wrong to worship their deceased ancestors, and they will look at you in blank astonishment, and turn away from you and your doctrine with something akin to deep loathing. The Chinaman cannot give a stronger proof of the sincerity of his profession of Christianity than this man gave when he placed the ancestral tablet in my hands. This superstition has a marvellous hold on both the heart and conscience of every man and woman throughout the entire empire, and nothing but the grace of God can enable anyone to sincerely abandon it, and to brook the reproach, the insult, and the injury which the attempt to do so must inevitably incur.

I had two illustrations last week of the intensity of the Chinese feelings in regard to this ancient and deep-rooted custom. The week was spent in the neighbourhood of Hiau Kan, where we have three stations, and a goodly number of Christians. One of the Christians at the Wei village was recently baptized at Hankow. No sooner did his mother become acquainted with the fact than she became furious. During my stay at the village he was compelled to keep away from me and the services. His mother kept watching him, and declared that if he went to the chapel she would go also, and break up the meetings with her clamour. The principal source of the mother's anxiety is the fear of the ancestral worship being abandoned. To her imagination there is something appalling in the thought. The consequences to the spirits of those who have already departed this life, and to her own spirit when it enters the Land of Shades, would be unspeakably distressing. When exhorted to calm herself, for fear she might make herself ill, her reply was to this effect: "Why talk about making myself ill? He (pointing to her son) is breaking my heart and making me mad by this act of his. I am not afraid of illness, I am afraid of madness."

I went next to the Liu village, where we have another group of Christians. As I entered the chapel, I noticed a young man to whom I have often preached, and asked him when he was going to make up his mind to become a Christian. He told me, with evident sincerity, that he had fully made up his mind. His mother, however, had been informed of his presence at the chapel, and ere many words had passed between the young man and myself she appeared. The son had to flee, and she followed him, cursing us all most bitterly as she went. After some time I sent the native assistant to speak to her, to ask for some explanation of her strange conduct, and to try to do something towards assuaging the violence of her hostility. Her reply was something to this effect: "This son is breaking my heart; he has already given up all the idols, and he is now wanting to become a Christian. If he becomes a Christian, what will become of my spirit, and the spirits of his ancestors? there will be no one to sacrifice to them." Of course, we saw nothing more of the son on this visit. I am convinced, however, that he is a Christian in heart, and will be an open disciple ere long.

These facts may interest you, and perhaps they might interest some of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN. If you think so, please use them as you may see fit.—I am, yours faithfully, GRIFFITH JOHN.

Hankow, China, March 24.

CHRISTIAN COLPORTAGE.—The annual meeting of the members and friends of the Metropolitan Tabernacle Colportage Association took place on the 7th inst. In the absence of Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, the chair was taken by his brother, Rev. J. A. Spurgeon. He exhorted all to "stir up the gifts that were within them" in the prosecution of the work. The Secretary (Rev. W. C. Jones) submitted the annual report, from which it appeared that during the past year, besides the sales made by seventy-nine colporteurs, close on 621,000 families had been visited, and 7149 religious services conducted. Rev. J. Reid Howatt (Presbyterian Church, Camberwell) referred to the evils and doubts which infidelity was spreading over the land. Infidelity, it seemed, was becoming aggressive, but it could not last. At the same time, though infidelity would yet have to hide itself in the mire, Christian workers should be alive to the doubts which it was disseminating—doubts which, once entertained, became the ruin of many, young men particularly. Several of the colporteurs present delivered brief addresses descriptive of the work in their respective districts, and relating instances of the beneficial results accruing therefrom.

For the Young.

EVA AND DOUGLAS.

OF late I have been domesticated with five grandchildren; all full of health and life, fun and noise. A little too much so for my nerves (or temper), and occasionally I reprove rather sharply. However, to-day coming from church with pretty Eva—just six—I got a lesson. I was telling her about the Resurrection, and how she "would have her own body again, only more beautiful, and quite free from pain—no toothache" (from which she suffers), "nor sorrow, nor crying." "And no more worry, when grandmamma is cross!" she asked, gravely and quietly.

She and Douglas, five years old, were much distressed about the starving children in Donegal, and gladly sent some of a late "tip" to them, and pray for them every night. To-day I told them about the poor Manchester children coming so far for a supper of soup, and Eva said, "We will pray for them too, that they may always get it." But Douglas sighed heavily, and looked oppressed. At last he said, "How many things we have to pray about!" H. C. H.

A FLOWER PARABLE.

"Well, I don't see what I was stuck here for!"

"Neither do I. I wish I could be of some use in the world."

"And so do I," "And I," "And I;" and the chorus was taken up by all the primroses growing in that corner of the wood.

"That's just what I want, to be of some use to somebody," said the first speaker, a tall Hyacinth, who was usually the first to start a conversation in that part of the world.

"What good can we do, rooted here?" sighed a Wood Anemone. "Now, if we only had wings like the birds and butterflies, we could fly away into the towns and villages, and delight people with our bright colours or delicate forms, and so do some good; but here——."

"Yes," said the Hyacinth, "it isn't even as if by our names we could help anybody; now the Speedwell there, wherever he goes, seems to be blessing people, and wishing them 'God-speed;' and the Forget-me-not can carry messages, but what meaning does my name, for instance, show—Hyacinth? and what does Anemone, or Woodsorrel, or Stitchwort? We were sent here to do good, and the question is, What are we to do, and how are we to do it? What do you say, Cowslip?"

The Cowslip, who had not yet spoken, had been gazing at the bank beyond; where, if you looked very carefully, among the grass, you might see a little green plant, very fair and delicate, with two leaves on its stem, like an anemone, and above these a little round head, made of five tiny green flowers, four on the sides, and one looking straight up into the sky.

"I was wondering," said the Cowslip, when spoken to by Hyacinth, "what Muscatel was thinking about, for she has been looking up to heaven as if reading something there, and I think she has something to say to us."

"Oh! let us hear it, let us hear it," cried all the flowers; while a tall purple Orchis, who was not exactly one of the company, not living quite in the corner with them, but who liked to hear what they were saying, wondered whatever they wanted to listen to "a dowdy thing like that" for; but then Orchis could not see Muscatel clearly, and did not know her so well as her nearer neighbours did.

"I was thinking," said the Muscatel "that God would not set us here to do his work without giving us work to do; and though it may not be just the kind we should like, it must be the best for us, since He gave us it to do. We cannot do one another's work; and if we have not "names that mean anything," as Hyacinth says, "if we are not planted where people can see us and be pleased by our looks (only we must not be vain about them), we can look our brightest here, and God will see that we are trying to please Him in the way we know best; and, besides, who knows what may not be in store for us to do?"

"Oh, thank you, dear Muscatel!" cried the flowers, and they all tried to look their very brightest and best, feeling sure that God was looking down from heaven, and was glad to see them so willing to serve Him.

By and by the children's voices were heard in the distance, coming nearer and nearer, and then the pattering of little feet, and a voice saying, "Oh, what a pretty place!" and then little fingers were busy picking all the primroses, hyacinths, anemones, cowslips, orchises that they could find. Muscatel was too small and green to be seen among the grass by eyes that were looking for bright colours, so she was left behind alone, while the others were being carried away in a basket with a number of other flowers.

"Well!" said Hyacinth, "Muscatel was right; she said we did not know what was in store for us."

"Only I wish we were not squeezed together so," groaned the Wood Anemone, "I can't live much longer, and the Woodsorrel is drooping already."

"I don't think this is the end," said Cowslip, "I think there is something more yet for us to do."

And he was right; for before long they were taken out of the basket, and placed by kind hands in a bowl of water. Oh, such long drinks they took! The anemones revived directly, and looked as pretty as ever, and the primroses opened out as wide as they could, and looked up in the children's faces, thanking them for the nice, pure, clear water.

Presently a lady came into the room with some bright coloured wool, and she and the children began making up the flowers into little bunches, with a printed card tied to each.

Now our flowers—those from our own little nook, you know—had been gathered all at the same time, and laid in the basket together; they were also close together in the water, and when the bouquets were made up, one consisted of our primroses, anemones, and dog-violets, hyacinths, orchis, and cowslips. When all the bunches were made up, they were put into a basket again, and carried a good long way, but as they were in the dark they could not see where they were going to.

When at last the basket-lid was removed, the flowers found themselves in a long, long room, with rows of little white beds, many of them occupied by women who were too ill to sit up, as some others were doing. The lady who carried the basket went from bed to bed, giving each woman a little bunch of flowers with a few kind words. It was a very old woman who got our little friends.

"Oh, dear!" she said, "that's just what I was wanting. I've been lying here fretting, because I know how the primroses and cowslips and other flowers will be out all over the country, and I can't get out to see them, and I was just longing for a sight of some of them, I love them so, and here they are!"

"Then I am glad you have got such a nice bunch," said the lady visitor, "and such a nice text with them: can you read it?"

"To be sure," replied the old woman. "I learned to read when a girl, and my eyes are good still. 'My God shall supply all your need, according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus.' Oh, that's true! that's true! I'm all ready to go when the Master sends for me; my husband and sons are all over there waiting for me to join them; and all I could have wished for was just a sight of some fresh spring flowers. 'All your need,' it's true."

"Cowslip," whispered Hyacinth, when the old woman had fallen asleep, still holding her treasures in her hand, "you and Muscatel were right, God had some work for us to do that we did not know of, and how glad I am that He gave us it; let us thank Him for his goodness to us little things."

So all the flowers thanked God that He had made them of some use in cheering the heart of one of his servants, and fulfilling her last wish; and when at last they drooped and died, they did so feeling that they had done just what was given them to do.

As for Muscatel, though her work might seem less than that of her companions, yet I feel sure that she was no less loved of her Maker, for she had delivered the message to others that had been given her for them, and could rest in the assurance that "she had done what she could." F. P. T.

THE AFRICAN GOLD COAST.

TIDINGS have reached Basel of the death, at Akra, of Mr. Hermann Prætorius, who went out on a visit of inspection with three young missionaries last autumn, and has fallen before the deadly climate of the African seaboard. He leaves a widow and three children of tender age to mourn his loss.

Mr. Prætorius visited England on his way to Africa, and, with his fellow-voyagers, was commended to God in a meeting at Mildmay Conference Hall. Those who then formed his acquaintance can sympathise with his colleagues at Basel, in their loss of so gifted, zealous, and humble a worker for Christ. He went to the front and fell at his post, like a brave soldier of the Cross. Prayer is asked for this much and oft-tried Basel Mission. M.

"TO THE JEW FIRST."

THE fortieth annual meeting of the British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews was held in Exeter Hall on Tuesday evening, May 8. The chair was taken by Alderman Sir William McArthur, M.P.

Rev. J. Dunlop read an abstract of the report, from which it appeared that the receipts had been £9454, and the expenditure £6780. The income is a larger one than had been received in any previous year of the Society's existence, and has enabled the committee after clearing off the mortgage on the Mission House amounting to £800, to put aside upwards of £2000, as a reserve fund to prevent borrowing to meet current expenses at that season of the year when little or no money comes in. The Society, forty years ago, began with four agents, now there are upwards of 100 labourers, paid and unpaid. It is a cheering fact that never before in its history had there been such steady advance along the whole line.

Effective speeches were delivered, on behalf of the Society's work, by Revs. Dr. Bevan, John Bond, R. P. Downes, Louis Herschell, and P. Gaffe, of Nuremberg. We hope to give further details of this interesting and useful Mission in an early number.

REV. E. P. HAMMOND AND HIS WORK.

By Dr. S. S. HUBER.

I AM now paying a visit to my esteemed friend, Rev. E. P. Hammond, the Evangelist. In the year 1875 he spent a few days in Neuville, Pa., and the wonderful results that followed are still fresh in the minds of the people. Those meetings will be long remembered by me personally, for it was through their influence that I was led to a new life.

I went to them with no friendly feeling. I left my place of business with the determination to criticise, but came back a convicted sinner. In the back seat of the Lutheran Church Mr. Hammond found me, and asked, "Do you ever pray?" to which I answered in the negative.

He evidently knew by my appearance that I was a godless man. By my side sat my associates, ready to join me in opposing any effort to do us good. He spoke a few kind words and asked me to attend the meeting the next day.

While on my way to church, accompanied by my wife, he overtook me, and during his conversation said, "Doctor, you are too good a man to be lost." During his sermon that Sabbath morning, when the feeling in the audience was very deep, Mr. Hammond mentioned my name, and looking me in the face, said, "If you would give yourself to Him who bled and died for you and come out boldly on the Lord's side, forty men in Neuville would follow you."

At the close of the sermon he came directly to me and said, "Will you forgive me for mentioning your name publicly? I never did such a thing before." With tears in my eyes, I said, "I thank you for it; by the help of the Lord I will try and be a Christian."

The next morning I stood up in the old Presbyterian Church, publicly avowed my determination to forsake my sinful ways and trust in Him "Who loved me and gave Himself for me." Ere long great peace and joy filled my soul; a wonderful change came over me. Things I loved before I hated, and the good things I before hated I loved. From that hour my heart went out to the Evangelist, and I have loved him ever since. I know there are many in Neuville who feel towards him as I do. Nearly one-fourth of our population at the time professed conversion. Mr. Hammond and the thirty or forty from Harrisburg only remained in our little town two days; yet, out of a population of about two thousand, four or five hundred professed conversion. Dr. C. L. Thompson, Editor of The Interior, states that, as a result of the meetings conducted by Mr. Hammond during the brief period of five weeks in Harrisburg and Cumberland Valley, there was reason to believe that there were not less than three thousand conversions.

With these personal and general facts before me, it is not surprising that I desired to see my old friend at his home in Vernon, Connecticut. It is a beautiful town in the Connecticut Valley, on the line of the New York and New England Railroad, twelve miles east of Hartford. Rockville, with a population of 6000, is one of the villages of the town. Mr. Hammond's ancestors for generations have lived in this locality, and have been among the leading men of the place.

On my arrival I found Mr. Hammond unpacking his trunks, as he had just returned from a series of meetings in New York and Brooklyn. In Brooklyn he held meetings mostly in the magnificent Tabernacle of Dr. Talmage, by special invitation of the pastor. It is well known the capacity of that building is from 4000 to 5000. A series of meetings in a place like that, where people attend from all parts of the city and country, must have been one of great influence. In a letter from Dr. Talmage he said, "Eternity alone can reveal the good accomplished."

The evangelist spent several weeks this spring in the Bermudas, a group of 365 islands 700 miles south-east from New York. He there held crowded meetings in the Presbyterian, Episcopal, and Methodist churches, all denominations uniting in the effort. Over 700 professed conversion during the eighteen days he and his party were there.

SPITALFIELDS GOSPEL MISSION.

DEAR FRIEND,—Will you kindly give the space for me to say to dear friends that I have been very ill and suffering; I am still so weak and shaken that I am compelled for a little season (the Lord granting) to give up the active oversight of our loved work for the Lord, purposing, so soon as I can make the needful arrangements, to have a season of rest in the country. I have prepared a new number of "Promises Proved," but must ask all dear friends to pardon my delaying the posting till I return.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM JOSEPH LEWIS.

[We bespeak for our brother the deepest and most prayerful sympathy of our readers in this time of his bodily weakness. For a quarter of a century he has given his whole life, almost miraculously sustained as it has often been, to the lifting up of the sunken masses at the East-end. We trust that God will yet spare him and strengthen him for much service in such a needy corner of the vineyard.—ED.]

DR. SOMERVILLE AT THE GOLD FIELDS.

OWING to the many nationalities which go to compose the white population of these fields, it is most difficult for those at a distance to accurately gauge and fathom the intensity or motive power of any great popular movement that takes place amongst us. Even keen observers, who have lived here for some length of time, have often been disappointed by the apparently free and easy manner in which mass assemblies can apparently so quickly support and countenance what the same or a similar mass meeting only a short time before had discountenanced. Dr. Somerville has done what many believed impossible in Kimberley, sustained the interest and enthusiasm of the multitude for a considerable length of time.

A remarkable feature of this movement is its catholicity. We find united on the same platform, praying for the same object, working harmoniously together, Episcopalians, Wesleyans, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, adherents of many other churches and sects, and freelances, or men of no particular denomination. A grand and encouraging spectacle it is to see men and women, while not laying aside their characteristic denominational distinctions, meeting and joining hearts and hands on the broad and beautiful platform of love to Jesus Christ. It would be the greatest pity that this unity of heart and purpose amongst all the different companies of Christ's army here should prove only a fleeting parade, useful merely to show what could be accomplished by its combined forces in the skilful hands of a masterly commander. It would be well if the recognised leaders and influential members of all denominations, who desire to witness the continued development of the Doctor's good work in Kimberley, could devise some system of organisation by which the different bands of workers now in active co-operation could still carry on their work under some responsible and guiding control. Already a Young Ladies' Association is being formed, and we believe that before many days a similar Association for Young Men will be established. May no sectarian jealousy prevent these two desirable and necessary institutions from being successfully carried on. If the clergy, the leading citizens, the philanthropists, the earnest Christian workers of Kimberley were further to band themselves together into a compact, united, harmonious whole, for the propagation of the great truths common to all, and for the practical work commanded by the Great Master, amongst the sick, the poor, the irreligious, amongst the surging masses of heathendom at our very doors, the results would be such as to astonish the world, and cast a halo of glory around our Diamond City.—Kimberley Paper.

"THE BONNIE BIT OF BLUE."

Air: "Auld Lang Syne."

Of all the tints the light looks on,
However bright their hue,
There's none that speak of better things,
Than does the bit of blue.

The bonnie bit of blue, my friends,
The bonnie bit of blue,
It tells of hope, it tells of joy,
The bonnie bit of blue.

There's many a home where comfort reigns,
And peace and gladness too,
Whence want and sorrow have been driven,
By just a bit of blue.

Come, wear the blue—you cannot know
The good that you may do,
By joining in a noble cause,
The Army of the Blue.

Then wear the blue above a heart
That's brave, and warm, and true,
And never be ashamed to show
The bonnie bit of blue.

BAND OF HOPE UNION.

THE twenty-eighth anniversary of this important branch of Temperance work was held on the 9th inst. Dr. Richardson presided over the breakfast meeting at Exeter Hall, when the Revs. W. Barker, M.A., and J. W. Horsley, M.A., Chaplain of her Majesty's prison, Clerkenwell, gave addresses. The latter said: "The Union was doing more to disestablish and disendow him than any other society, fully three-fourths of the crime of the country being the outcome of the evil of drink."

A Conference was held in the afternoon, under the leadership of W. S. Caine, Esq., M.P., Dr. Sinclair Paterson delivering an address, and Miss Annie Young reading a paper on "Woman's Share in Juvenile Work."

In the evening, Mr. S. Morley presided. The Secretary reported 10,144 Juvenile Temperance Societies in connection with the Union, having a membership of 1,167,000. 1282 meetings had been held in London during the year.

Rev. J. P. CHOWN was among the speakers, and spoke of the work that was being done amongst the young in the Bands of Hope as one of the great influences of the day, for it did not stop with the Bands of Hope, but went on through the Sunday-school to something higher and nobler still; many who were filling honoured positions in Christian fellowships in the ministry and in the missionary field, would never but for the movement have been led into the course of which this was the consummation.

Canon WILBERFORCE referred to the influence of the blue ribbon as having been of immense power in awakening the nation to the importance of the Temperance movement, and said that Temperance was a power that it had never been before. There was only one danger, and that was lest the movement should become secularised into a mere utilitarian movement for the improvement of the nation. If that were so, it was bound to fall, and all the ground they had gained would be lost; it must go hand-in-hand with the religion of Jesus Christ, and he asked for their prayers that the power of the Holy Spirit might be poured out upon it. So far only as it was carried on in the power and presence of the living God would it continue to be the success which during the last two years it had been in the nation.

Rev. CHARLES GARRETT also eloquently pleaded the same cause, and urged the necessity of giving closer attention, and yet greater care, to the training children in the principles of Gospel Temperance, their future place and influence in the world making this of vastest importance. It is in the next generation the wonderful results of recent advances in the cause of total abstinence will be seen and felt.

MISS NAOMI WATERMAN has held a Gospel Mission in Barnstaple for a fortnight. Night after night she gave a faithful Gospel testimony, which God has owned. She has now entered on a Gospel Temperance Mission to Bristol.

BRITISH WOMEN AND TEMPERANCE.

THE anniversary meetings of the British Woman's Temperance Association were this year transferred from the Memorial Hall to the more central hall in the Strand. Thursday last was largely filled up with meetings for mutual conference; and in the evening a large company was gathered in the Lower Exeter Hall for the annual public assembly. An interesting and hopeful feature of the attendance was the presence of a goodly array of young ladies.

Reviewing the work of the society during the seven years of its existence, Mrs. BRADLEY, the able and energetic secretary, said that its progress had been steady and sure. From eight branches in the first year, they had now increased to ninety-five. Many, if not most of the results, could hardly be tabulated. During the past year much good deputation work had been done, but it had fallen on comparatively few; the committee would make a strenuous appeal for more workers in this wide and ripe harvest field. Thousands of pledges had been taken during the year, and twenty-five new branches established. A marked advance had been made in the "parliamentary" department of petitioning in favour of more stringent legislation. Mrs. Bradley's excellent statement ended with a note of triumphant hopefulness as to the ultimate success of the cause.

Rev. CHARLES GARRETT, chairman, said that, in one respect—his reverence of woman—no one was better qualified to occupy that post. He proceeded to give some cogent reasons for wishing all the women in the land on the side of total abstinence. Think of the influence of woman in all the stages of life. If all the daughters in our families were on the right side in this question how soon the battle would be ended! Some striking illustrations of the power of women, in their different relations in the family, Mr. Garrett related with much effect. He said that by the way of the mother we could reach the heart of the roughest and wildest of men. Womanly tact and determination are also of untold value in such a crusade as this. Mr. Garrett made an urgent appeal to mothers, for the sake of their children, to inculcate, both by precept and practice, the principles of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks. He quoted the saying of an old friend many years ago, which he had never forgotten: "If a man takes a glass of brandy and water, and there is any evil principle in his nature, it will surely find it out and stir it up." He hoped the income of the society would be doubled next year, and their numbers increased tenfold. These anniversary gatherings ought to have the same effects as those mentioned lately by a rough homely Yorkshireman, who thus described a revival in his village: "The Lord A'mighty has been mendin' old Methodists, and makin' new ones."

In a most impressive and persuasive address, Miss TOD, of Belfast, exhorted her sisters engaged in this warfare to look at the more hopeful aspects of the subject. The many Sunday Closing Bills were a striking sign of the growth of the movement throughout the kingdom. So many good efforts had sprung out of their Ladies' Association in Ulster, that they had added as a subsidiary title, "The Christian Workers' Union." She suggested that her English sisters might take a leaf out of the Irish book.

Mrs. JAS. PARKER, with much pathos and real womanly eloquence, expatiated on the past achievements, in many departments of reform, of that Divine "enthusiasm of humanity" that is now going out in noble efforts for the salvation of society from the great evils of the drink. She stirred the meeting to its depths as she declared that they would give themselves no rest till the accursed drink should be banished from the land, the brewery converted into a flour mill, the pawnshop into a savings' bank, and the gin-palace into a sanctuary. "Oh, for the brush of an artist and the tongue of an angel!" she exclaimed, "that I might make you see and realise the terrible wrongs that the drink is inflicting upon us. I call on you to unite with us in putting down this soul-destroying enemy of our land and our race." In some further references to the parliamentary action of the society, Mrs. Parker said that if the legislature would only give votes to the women, that social pest, the grocer's licence, would soon be swept away. In closing one of the most telling speeches we have ever heard from woman's lips, she invoked the eloquence of the pulpit, the learning of the bar, the power of the press, the pen of the author, and the advocacy of the statesman, in this momentous struggle.

As a delegate from the Eastern Counties, Mrs. HOLMDEN, of Cambridge, said that the cause was making rapid progress in that town, and especially among the undergraduates. As an amusing instance of this, she spoke of one college where a large extra supply of tumblers had lately to be purchased, as scarcely any of the "freshmen" coming to the university would use the customary tankards for beer.

Happening to be present at the meeting, Mr. FRANCIS MURPHY was called on, and made a characteristic little address. He spoke of the great power of woman in every good cause, and magnified the example of Mrs. Hayes in excluding intoxicants from the White House during her husband's term of office.

The meeting was altogether an excellent one, and will, we trust, give a powerful impetus to the work of the Society for another year.

MEMORIAL COTTAGE HOSPITAL,

MILDMAY PARK, N.

IN the Memorial Cottage Hospital, Mildmay-park, it is much wished to name a bed after Agnes Elizabeth Jones, whose noble self-sacrificing love for the poor in the workhouse infirmary at Liverpool will for ever cause her memory to be blessed.

The hospital in which the Agnes Jones Memorial Bed is to be placed is situated in the north of London, amongst a very poor class of people, and where there is the greatest need of hospital accommodation. The money for building the hospital has been given by one friend of the poor in memory of a beloved son, and the need of an endowment is so manifest that special effort is being made to collect money for this object.

All who knew Agnes Elizabeth Jones, or have read the record* of her life-work, must feel that there is no spot so suitable to place her name as on the walls of a hospital devoted to the care of the sick or dying poor. In Florence Nightingale's words we appeal: "Let us add living flowers to her grave. . . . Let us bring the work of our hands and our heads and our hearts to finish her work which God has so blessed. Let her not merely rest in peace, but let hers be the life which stirs up to fight the good fight against vice and sin and misery and wretchedness as she did."

The secretary of the proposed endowment fund of £1000 is Mrs. A. R. Pennefather, 7, Cheniston-gardens, Kensington, W.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.—Earl Cairns, in presiding last week at the anniversary meeting of the Irish Church Missions, at St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, said that the state of Ireland during the past three years had been one of intense anxiety to every friend of the country. He did not think he should be exaggerating anything when he said that during these years Ireland had been in a state of more disorganisation, more disloyalty, and a greater source of danger to the community at large, than at any time during the present century. In the midst of all that had occurred they had some great things to be thankful for and rejoice at. England had made one great mistake in the past—she had neglected to give Ireland the Gospel of Christ; but this and kindred efforts were now supplying the lack.

VILLAGE MISSIONS.

SIR,—As the time of year is approaching for country excursions, I beg to give your readers a short account of a tour to the neighbourhood of Wales and back last year. We left my home on Saturday, May 27, and spent the next Saturday morning at Tintern Abbey, going by rail from Monmouth to give our pony rest, and reaching home again near the end of the following week. Without waste of time we saw the splendid scenery which abounds along the roads through Worcestershire to Malvern and thence over Saddle-bow Hills to Monmouth, returning viâ Wye Valley to Ross, thence to Cheltenham, Abingdon, &c. We were able to do some 230 miles of house-to-house village visitation, and preached the Gospel at every point where there were a few houses.

Our party usually consisted of five, and for the development of walking powers this work is fine. We have not been over more than fifty miles of the road since, but it is very remarkable that when we touched it again in the autumn, in Herefordshire, at the first house one friend visited he found an old man who had yielded his heart to the Saviour, in response to the earnest appeal given during the previous visit. One Lord's Day morning we seemed specially blessed; several whom we visited there and then yielding themselves to Christ. In one house the mother was "hungering and thirsting" to be filled with the Lord Jesus: the daughter was also seeking for Him.

We usually dined by the road-side, and asked some poor woman for the use of her cottage, and a kettle of water at tea-time. In several cases our visit was, we believe, blessed to those. Between each village our time was often occupied in telling of sick or anxious cases we had just left. We have also very happy recollections of kindness received from Christians on the road. To those who love the work, every day seems to have its special blessing, and the road-side prayer-meetings under the trees are times of real blessing and communion.

No person who has not visited these outlying districts can form any idea of the abiding influences of visits of this kind, and I write this with the hope that many others will go this summer.

Our kind friend Mr. E. W. Thomas, 200, Euston-road, has given us an invitation to tea and conference on May 22, and we shall be specially pleased to give any information then, or by letter.—Yours truly,

THOMAS S. HELEY.

DEAF AND DUMB FEMALES.—The Skinners' Company have made a grant of £10 10s., and Mrs. Allnutt, of Tonbridge Wells, a donation of £100, to the British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb Females at Clapton.

EVANGELICAL CONTINENTAL SOCIETY.—Alderman R. N. Fowler, M.P., presided last week at the annual meeting in connection with the above society, at Exeter Hall. The Society's twenty-three spheres of labour are situated in France, Belgium, Italy, Spain, and Bohemia. The expenditure for the year, £3552 9s. 9d., left a balance to the treasurer of £318. The amount received, however, for the ordinary work of the society for the year had been only £2647. A legacy of £2284 had been received from Miss C. R. Manning, and £2000 had been deposited as a reserve fund, which the committee proposed to expend during the next five years for the purposes of special evangelistic work in France and elsewhere. The Rev. R. S. Ashton, B.A., the secretary, read the report, which stated that the year had not been marked by any extraordinary movements. Reports from the numerous fields of labour showed healthy progress. The Chairman alluded with pleasure to the fact that France was now opened to the work of the agents of the Society without let or hindrance. Rev. J. F. Tinling (Congregational minister, Eastbourne), referring to the infidelity abroad, remarked that it was the direct result of the influences of centuries of priestcraft, and he was sure the importance of the nations amongst which the work was carried on made the Society worthy of the support of a Christian public in this land. Rev. D. A. Hershell, Dr. McAuslane, Rev. T. A. Binns, and Mr. F. Y. Edwards also advocated the claims of the Society.

RAGGED SCHOOLS PAST AND PRESENT.

By H. R. WILLIAMS.

IT was no easy task which the few pioneers of this movement undertook thirty-nine years ago. No superficial, or half measures, would be of any avail in the haunts of poverty and crime, which they had determined to assail. They must dive deep down into filthy courts and alleys, despite their foul and fœtid smells, and lay bare the withering forms of poverty and neglect, which at that time abounded in all the thickly-populated districts of London and other large towns. Many of the homes of the poor were wretched almost beyond description; dilapidated, dark, dirty, damp, unprovided even with the commonest decencies of civilised life, they had become the haunts of every kind of repulsiveness, the breeding places of fever and contagion. Under these circumstances there is little wonder that crime and immorality flourished. The child was too often more sinned against than sinning. In spite of the boasted civilisation and Christianity of the first half of the nineteenth century, children were growing up in every large town as ignorant of a God or a Saviour as the very heathen themselves, and who, if left to themselves, would prove in years to come a terror and a scourge to society. It was for this raw material of humanity that ragged-schools were founded.

In November, 1844, the work of the Ragged School Union really commenced. Lord Ashley became its first active and devoted President, and has continued, as the Earl of Shaftesbury, to take an earnest interest in the welfare of the poor and neglected children and their parents, who appropriated the schools as their own, and crowded them from the very commencement. Over and above those collected into the various schools under the auspices of the Ragged School Union during the first few years of its existence, it was computed that in London alone more than 100,000 youths of both sexes were growing up untaught and uncared for. It was to grapple with this mass of ignorance and wretchedness that the unceasing efforts of the Union were directed. The early struggles to plant schools in the most degraded and neglected neighbourhoods are worthy of record, nor must the devotion and heroism of the voluntary and unpaid teachers be omitted. Seeking no reward but the approbation of their own conscience, and as in the sight of God, they laboured on with a devotion which has never been exceeded, and but seldom paralleled. No adequate idea can now be formed of the faith and patience with which the founders and conductors of these schools grappled with the foulness and repulsiveness which beset them. Sustained by a simple and fervent piety, they surrendered nearly the whole of the Sabbath, their only day of rest, to this self-imposed labour of love, and on other days, after many hours of toil, they devoted their evening hours to the most harassing, and not unfrequently dangerous, duties of the school.

The statements made at the opening of the various schools, and the facts brought to light by their founders, attracted much attention. Dr. Guthrie, in his admirable and impassioned appeals, held it to be a mockery to give the little starveling moral and religious education, however good in themselves, without at the same time providing daily food, and showed how much easier and cheaper it was to educate the boy than to punish the man. The Ragged School Union opened an Industrial School and Refuge in Westminster, which was successfully administered for some years to the benefit of some hundreds of neglected youths of both sexes. Others upon the same model were established in other centres of destitution and neglect in London, and in most of the great manufacturing towns throughout England.

To what extent ragged-schools have been the means of reducing the heavy catalogue of juvenile criminality it is impossible to say, but we may fairly claim that no system of law or police could have done what these schools have accomplished. They have, by God's blessing, rescued thousands from a career of crime, and have prevented multitudes from falling into vicious and depraved courses, and placed them in positions by which they have become good and useful citizens, a blessing instead of a curse and a burden to society.

Somehow or other an impression has got abroad that ragged-schools and their affiliated Missions are no longer necessary, and that the London School Board are doing all the work hitherto carried on by the Ragged School Union in the slums and alleys of London. It is admitted by the Board that school-places are still required in London for 100,000 children, for whom no provision at present exists. But it is not the day-schools and elementary education about which the Union are now anxious; their own day-schools have been reduced in number, and the present attendance at ragged day-schools is now only 4868 children. They are quite content to leave the educational work to the Board; but the Mission and spiritual work of the Union cannot be transferred. At the present time, and apart from all the other operations carried on for the benefit of the poor, there are in connection with the Ragged School Union 203 Sabbath afternoon and evening-schools, with an average attendance of 36,734 children, presided over by 3157 teachers.

The importance of these schools cannot be over-estimated. This forms no part of the work of the School Board, and, if it did, no teachers they could employ could compete in earnestness and devotion with the voluntary and unpaid teachers of the Union. Love to Christ is the one great principle that has animated this army of volunteers, many of whom were once scholars in the schools in which they now teach. What would happen if the Sunday ragged-schools were closed, and all the collateral and independent efforts arising out of them suspended, and the 3157 volunteers disbanded? Why, simply that more than 50,000 of our very poorest children would be thrown upon the streets, neglected and uncared for, exposed to much of the vileness and irreligion which unhappily still exist, no man caring for their soul.

It is not pleasant to think that the income of the Union is not equal to its expenditure, and is altogether inadequate for the purposes required. If another thousand or fifteen hundred pounds could be added to the yearly income of the Society, it would go far to relieve the Committee of the anxieties they often have on this account, and would help many a poor Mission-school to carry on its work with greater vigour.

MRS. YOUMANS was expected to arrive in this country from Canada on the 13th inst. She has been for many years president of the Ontario Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and is well known throughout America for her forcible, earnest, and eloquent addresses in the cause of temperance. We gladly welcome her presence and help on this side the Atlantic. Any communications may be addressed to Mrs. Youmans, care of Miss Billbrough, Wellesley-road, Croydon.

THE SUMMERBANK HOME, 8, Bellevue-street, Edinburgh.—This Home for little children was opened five years ago, with only four little boys and girls, and in a much humbler house than the one at present occupied. Since then the number of children has been increased to thirteen. During the five preceding years we have never had to report any serious illness, and this one, we are thankful to say, has proved no exception. The children wash all the dishes, brush all the boots, make several of the beds, and are besides very useful in various smaller ways, such as in cleaning knives, dusting rooms, dressing the younger children, and running errands: their services are not to be despised. They are still taught their lessons at home, and though their progress is somewhat gradual they are, as a rule, doing well. The Home is at present in debt to the amount of £70. The ordinary expenditure now comes to about £270 a year, so that the estimated sum required to meet present liabilities, and to conduct the Home satisfactorily to the close of another financial year, is £340. In looking back on the past five years, we do not feel great anxiety as to the future, believing, as we do, that God will surely send for the children all that they need; still it would be a comfort to receive sufficient help to free the Home from debt, and to carry on the work free from money embarrassments. A. M. Logan, Treasurer.

My Jewels. 13, Chetwynd-road, N.W. This record of incidents in the life and labours of a London City Missionary is deeply interesting, and worthy of circulation.

The Chinese in London (2d. Wesleyan Book-room) is a description of the degrading habit of opium-smoking among the Chinese who visit the metropolis, with an appeal that more should be done for their spiritual welfare.

Jock Halliday. A Grassmarket Hero. By Robina F. Hardy. 2s. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier. A capitally written sketch of Scottish city life among the humbler classes. The author's accurate reproduction of the rich northern dialect will make the little work all the more attractive to those readers who are "to the manner born." Many of the incidents hinge on the unhappy prevalence of drinking habits. The youthful "hero," of course, is a bright exception; may he have numberless imitators.

Roving Robin. By Nellie Hellis. Religious Tract Society. The writer has succeeded in producing a very pretty story, illustrative of the power of kindness to overcome the waywardness and hardness of heart that are sometimes met with in early life. The lessons of love and of thoughtfulness for others which are contained in this little volume are well calculated to impress themselves upon the mind of the reader, and we heartily commend it to those who are desirous of placing really good and useful books in the hands of their juvenile friends.

The Railway Signal. 1d. Monthly. 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C. We are glad to know that this useful serial has a steadily-growing circulation among railway employés. No better service could be done, by any friends interested in the moral and spiritual well-being of those engaged at the railway station nearest to their residence, than the introduction and distribution of this paper. Its expository articles and reports of Evangelistic work cannot fail to be of much service to those who, in too many cases, are deprived of the ordinary "means of grace."

The Observatory Tracts. By Pastor C. Spurgeon. 6d. per 100. E. G. Berryman, Greenwich. These tracts are written by the son of the Metropolitan Tabernacle Pastor, who has a charge at Greenwich, hence the title, Observatory Tracts. But, as the proverb says, "Like father, like son;" the twin-sons appear to have inherited the paternal faculty for writing crisp, clear, idiomatic English. These tracts are strikingly effective, well adapted for wide distribution, and worthy to have been written by "John Ploughman" himself. To ensure the wide circulation they deserve to obtain, we should like to see them somewhat improved in "get up;" and they ought to be supplied through some agent in Paternoster-row.

Our Eastern Sisters and their Missionary Helpers. By Harriet Warner Ellis. 2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. There is no more outstanding or pleasant feature of modern Missions than the increasing solicitude felt for the enlightenment of the female inmates of secluded Eastern homes. This volume furnishes in brief compass, and in a deeply interesting form, the leading facts of this Gospel crusade, brought down to the most recent date. Every Christian young woman should be acquainted with the progress already made in carrying the light and liberty of the Gospel to her less fortunate sisters in Eastern lands, as well as with the greater work that yet remains to be done. Such knowledge it may well be hoped would inspire them with a holy resolve to help in the doing of it. We wish for this volume many intelligent readers of the right sort.

DR. STEPHENSON'S CHILDREN'S HOME.—Exeter Hall was crowded last Thursday evening on the occasion of the annual festival of the Children's Home. Mr. James Barlow presided. Rev. Dr. Stephenson, principal of the institution, told the story of his recent travels round the world, the glowing narrative being varied by a musical performance, vocal and instrumental, from the children, who, to the number of 300, both boys and girls, were arrayed on the platform. Rev. Charles Garrett, President of the Wesleyan Conference, looked in from another meeting during the evening, and spoke warmly in commendation of Dr. Stephenson's work. The institution receives children from all parts of the United Kingdom, apart from any consideration of nationality or sect. The headquarters are at Bonner-road, Victoria-park, E. where there are eight houses, containing 233 children—109 girls and 124 boys. About 600 children are now resident in the several branches of the Home.

ISLAM AND CHRISTIANITY.

SIR,—The following remarks by Dr. Carslaw, of the Mount Lebanon Schools, regarding the present relations of Christianity and Mohammedanism, are from the forthcoming Report of the Committee. They have already appeared in a local daily paper, and may be interesting to your readers. The Rev. Mr. Rae, of Aberdeen, who was for some years resident on Mount Lebanon as clerical superintendent of the schools, says, regarding these remarks:—"Dr. Carslaw can render no better service in his leisure time than keep an eye upon and feel the pulse of Islam, in such places as Beyrout and Damascus, and let the friends of the schools have from time to time the benefit of his observations. Islam is for the most part inaccessible to the direct efforts of Christian Missions, and it is of the greatest consequence at present that information as to this unwrought field—as to any ways of practical access to it that may yet be found open—should be brought fully before the Christian public. Christianity is practically kept at bay by Mahommedanism."

Dr. Carslaw's remarks are:—

"During the rebellion in Egypt there was a good deal of excitement throughout the country, but especially in Beyrout and Damascus. At one time the alarm of the Christians in Beyrout was so great that thousands of them fled to the mountains for safety. But though the Government took stringent measures to prevent an outbreak, no confidence was restored to the Christians till the news came of the battle of Tel-el-Kebir and the capture of Arabi. For a long time the Moslems could not believe that the army of the regenerator of Islam was defeated, and that he himself was a prisoner in the hands of the infidels; but now, whatever may lie beneath the surface, all interest in the rebel is apparently gone, and things are moving on in their usual way.

"But though there is apparent quietness, causes are at work which will always create uneasiness among the Christians, and will assuredly cause an outbreak at no very distant period. Islam is not a religion for a conquered race; it is in its very essence a religion for conquerors. It is all very well to speak of Islam as being tolerant, but Islam is only tolerant when it is the dominant religion, and when its professors are flourishing in this world. Now it is notorious that the land in Syria is rapidly passing into the hands of Christians. It is notorious, too, that of the races that profess Islam, and those that profess Christianity, the latter are industrious and try to accumulate wealth, while the former are not inclined to exert themselves. As civilisation advances, the Christians eagerly take advantage of all the means it offers to benefit themselves. Comparatively few Moslems are found in our schools and colleges, almost all the students are Christian. The most wealthy of the merchants are Christians, the most industrious of the artisans are Christians. And while the Christians are ascending in the social scale, the Mohammedans find themselves descending, even in a country where they form the governing class. Again, they see the Caliph, the head of temporal and religious power, dictated to by the Christian nations, instead of dictating to them, which, according to Mohammedan ideas, is the proper state of matters, and this increasing weakness of their Caliph has an especial influence on the ulemas and the more fanatical of the Moslems.

"Another thing, too, which does not at all tend to smooth matters is that, through the influence of the European powers, the Mohammedans cannot help themselves to the wealth and goods of their Christian neighbours whenever they think it necessary, for Mohammedan cadies and other Turkish officials find themselves compelled to do justly; and when a Moslem is punished for having done an injury to a Christian, that is put down in his mind to the account which, he is quite sure, he will at some future time have an opportunity of settling with his enemies. It is not possible that the Mohammedans can rest contented with the present state of matters. That they will make a determined attempt to regain their former power, if an opportunity occurs, is certain. For these reasons the Christians are to some extent always uneasy, and when any excitement arises among the Moslems the alarm and fear of the Christians may be easily imagined. Again, while the Government are disarming the Christians for the purpose of maintaining peace, Moslems are not deprived of their weapons, so that if any disturbance should arise every Moslem would be armed while the Christians would be defenceless. It is something like pulling the teeth of the sheep in case they should quarrel and fight with the wolves.

"Of the Christian populations of Syria the most intelligent and most industrious is to be found in the Lebanon. In Beyrout and in Alexandria they are found in merchants' offices, as teachers in schools, as editors and proprietors of newspapers. And if the day come when Syria will be governed without respect to creed, the natives from Mount Lebanon will be found occupying most of the offices requiring ability and intelligence. Our work, then, is of the greatest importance, not only for the immediate results we hope and expect may follow, but for its future influence on the country."

I shall be glad to send the report when published to any who may send me their address.—Yours truly, W. FERGUSON.

TRACTS FOR THE EAST-END.—The workers of the East London Tract Society are greatly in need of tracts for distribution. Upwards of 148,000 tracts have been distributed by 62 workers, who are engaged in distribution to sailors, soldiers, policemen, emigrants, in docks, streets, cemeteries, hospitals, public-houses, canals, parks, &c. 2000 weekly required to meet the demands; besides which upwards of 2000 families are regularly visited. Funds and tracts are urgently needed. Much good has resulted. The superintendent is Mr. George Fuller, 34, Cawdor-street, Bromley-by-Bow, Poplar, E.

WAIFS AND STRAYS.—The Lord Mayor presided last week at a public meeting, held at the Mansion House, in connection with the Church of England Central Home for Waifs and Strays. From the Report it appeared that the committee have at present under their care about 140 children, of whom fifty-six are in the receiving houses, twenty-eight in other Church Homes and institutions, and the remainder boarded out with communicants of the Church of England. An important step had recently been taken in the appointment of an officer to deal with cases which appeared to come under the provisions of the Industrial Schools and Elementary Education Acts.

AN ORGAN FOR COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.—Mr. Wells Thatcher, the active Secretary of the "Commercial Travellers' Christian Association," has issued the first number of a new series of "On the Road." (Monthly, 1d. Allen & Co., Ivy-lane, E.C.) Whatever may be its shortcomings, we can vouch for it that under Mr. Thatcher's supervision it will not commit the offence, unpardonable in these days, of being dull. The contents are varied, full of genuine and instructive interest, and such as are likely to be acceptable to its peculiar clientèle. We wish for it, in ever increasing measure, the privilege of helping its readers to spend many a pleasant and profitable hour "on the road."

WHOSE IS THE PRAISE?

HE sat at the table with thoughtful brow,
And swiftly his fingers moved,
While the swifter flowing of heart and brain
The close-written pages proved.

So fair and clear were the characters traced,
So weighty the thoughts expressed,
So graphic and choice was the language he used,
With the seal of power impressed.

Transcribed to print those thoughts and words,
Far over over the world were read,
Still stirring and strengthening the hearts of men,
When their author had long been dead.

But on the day he finished his work,
And rose from his study chair,
The pen he had used soliloquised thus,
As it lay among others there:

"How well I have written these masterly sheets,
How true I kept to the line,
And not a mistake or a mis-spelled word,
In all this fair work of mine.

"So great and so good are the thoughts and words
I have written down for men,
They will surely ascribe much praise to me,
And talk of the wondrous pen."

O Spirit of God, how often are we,
Whom Thou dost vouchsafe to use,
As foolish as boastful pen would be
In our vain self-conscious views.

Thou dost hold us up, and direct our steps,
So that we walk in the light;
And are we not prone to think that we stand,
And guide our own feet aright?

Thou art pleased to inspire some heaven-born thought,
And the words which convey it best,
So that it reaches a listening heart,
Which is quickened and taught and blest.

Do we always give all the praise to Thee,
Without a presumptuous thought,
Of how we have spoken, of how we have felt,
Or how much we have striven and wrought?

And when we consider thy gracious work
Through a brother or sister done,
Do we most consider the instrument,
Or the grace that used each one?

Do we think too much of the means employed,
Too little of Him who wrought;
Or place them both on a level of praise,
More nearly far than we ought?

How foolish the powerless pen would be
That boasted what it could do;
How equally foolish would men appear
If they gave it the credit, too.

Lord, keep us far from such folly and sin,
Teach us our part and our place,
To yield to thy hand, and fulfil thy will,
As "grace-filled" channels of grace.

And yet in thy work Thou art graciously pleased
To say that of us Thou hast need,
Not a word could be written without the pen,
Though the heart and the hand must lead.

Thou dost link thy power with thy instruments,
Thus making them strong and free.
Co-workers with God! What honour for us
But all the glory for Thee E. R. V.

SHEPHERD'S BUSH, W.—Services have been held at the Athenæum, Goldhawk-road, W., by Miss Brryman, on Sundays, for the last four weeks with very blessed results. Miss Brryman is assisted in this work by Miss Cresswell, a young lady devoted to the work of leading anxious ones to the Saviour. The Athenæum, which holds about 550, has proved too small, numbers having to stand outside the doors.

A NEW POCKET COMPANION.—Among the various attempts to supply the travelling and writing public with a portable, cheap, and efficient substitute for the conveniences of the desk, the latest is decidedly the most successful. The "Grapho" Fountain Pen is simple in construction, and free from the faults in working that have marked some of its predecessors. Its distinguishing advantage over the popular "Stylograph" is the fact that the writing instrument is a real pen, thus preserving the characteristics of the handwriting. It has the additional merit of comparative cheapness, the price being only 2s. 6d., while fresh points are supplied at a very low figure. After a prolonged test, both for longhand and shorthand purposes, we can strongly recommend it as an indispensable pocket companion. The office of the makers is 77, Leadenhall-st., London.

Letters to the Editor.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

Sir,—Will you allow me to draw the attention of your readers to the desirability of forming "Bands of Mercy" in their different neighbourhoods. I am sure the claims of the lower animals do not receive that attention which they deserve, and I regret to see this question so very seldom touched upon in The Christian.

It is painful in the extreme to notice the cases of cruelty which take place in our midst. As far as the brute creation is concerned, truly it can be said, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain."—Yours faithfully. B. Molony.

OUR LORD'S "UNANSWERED PRAYER."

Sir,—In your issue of May 3 the following occurs in a letter from "H. R." : "Does not the cry, 'Let this cup pass,' three times uttered in vain, remind us forcibly that the most sinless and earnest prayer may not be granted?" On the general views expressed in that letter I have no remark to make; but, with your permission, I desire to correct what seems to me a serious error and misapprehension on the quotation I have made—one not uncommon, I fear.

The writer, and those who think with him, imagine that "the cup" which our Lord prayed might pass from Him was the impending death on the cross—that cup of which He said shortly after, "The cup which my Father hath given me shall I not drink it?" In other words, that his human weakness shrunk now from the accomplishment of the work of which He had said, "For this cause came I into this world."

Is there not something justly startling here?—First, that He, who as they were ascending to Jerusalem, "went before them, and as they followed they were afraid," should now draw back; and, second, that any prayer of his, especially one thrice spoken in agony of spirit, should have been "uttered in vain?" I cannot believe it. We read, on the contrary, in Heb. v. 7, "Who, in the days of his flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears, unto Him that was able to save Him from death, and was heard"—a reference, as is universally believed, to the agony of Gethsemane.

From what, then, did he pray to be delivered? What was the cup—the hour (Mark xiv. 35)? The appalling agony of that hour was testified by the sweat bursting in drops of blood from the skin—a well-authenticated though rare phenomenon in cases of extreme mental anguish. That agony surely was the sense of what was due to the sin of man, now resting upon Him—the great Propitiation. It threatened an untimely end to his human frame, before the things which were written of Him should be fulfilled, especially his dying on the accursed cross. And his prayer was heard. "An angel appeared from heaven strengthening Him." He regained composure to meet his captors and to appear before his judges. On the cross, when all else had been accomplished, "He was made sin for us." The light of his Father's countenance was hidden from Him; the agony returned, and the bitter cry, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" was heard from the midst of the darkness. And at last—that which He prayed might not prematurely take place in the Garden—was accomplished on the cross—He died of a broken heart. (See Stroud on "The Physical Causes of Christ's Death.")

This view your readers will find in Doddridge's writings, and in "Letters Practical and Consolative," of the late Rev. David Russell, D.D., of Dundee, very convincingly stated.

I cannot close without asking any reader who may be inclined to the theory that there was no penal element in the death of our Lord, to account for his awful fear in the Garden, his apparent want of faith in his Father on the cross, especially as contrasted with the composure or triumph of his martyrs, or even of his feeble followers in their dying hours.

If there was no vicarious character in his sufferings; if He who did always the things that were pleasing in his Father's sight yet could not realise that Father's smile when it was most needed, and might have been most expected, oh, what may I have to fear in that hour! Why, unless He suffered on my behalf, should I expect the peace that was denied to Him?—Yours, &c., D. M'L.

May 7.

OUR CANAL AND GIPSY CHILDREN.

Sir, — A Sunday evening or two ago, while people were wending their way with light heart and step joyfully to church and chapel, I came upon three canal boats tied together, waiting to be "tugged" through a long dark tunnel—with a moral outlook for those living in the cabins darker still. As the boats lay underneath the overhanging branches of lovely trees budding into exciting spring-life alongside a beautiful park, I could not resist the promptings of my heart to inquire into the condition of the poor neglected creatures living in the suffocating cabins. In No. 1 boat there were man, woman, and four children of both sexes, from 8 to 14 years of age, none of whom could tell a letter. I gave them some picture cards, &c., which the good woman with sorrow upon her face and grief in her eyes, said, "I shall take them to Birmingham for my mother to read to us in our cabins, as she often does." In No. 2 boat there were man and two grown-up daughters. The man could tell a "big letter," but neither of the young women could do even this much. In No. 3 boat there were one woman, a young man, and four children of school age. Out of the 15 men, women, and children living in three cabins in a total space of less than 9 ft. square, not one could read and write a sentence.

The previous day I came upon a poor boat girl of about ten winters doing horse's work in pulling a laden boat along. A strong woman was at the tiller, and the man was in a public-house.

Should the time ever arrive — which seems doubtful—when the Canal Boats Act Amendment Bill I am humbly promoting, becomes law, and my plans carried out, this state of things will be remedied, and the children receiving a free education with but little cost or inconvenience to either boatmen, boat-owners, or canal proprietors—in fact they will be gainers in many ways.

With reference to the amending Bill, as the matter now stands, it has been "blocked" by Mr. Warton, M.P. for Bridport, and Mr. Algernon, M.P. for Wigan, and is opposed by Mr. F. S. Powell and the Canal Association.

Freezing wintry darkness and cruelty are to be the lot of the 60,000 canal and van children of school age in the future, as it has been for centuries in the past, with no parliamentary hand to deliver nor Government to protect. Caravan and canal children are living in blacker, denser ignorance, and suffer more cruelty and hardship than the children of our working classes in England; and this is the state of things in our country, which is reckoned the first in the world to protect the children within its borders, and to extend the blessings of civilisation over the Globe.—Very sincerely yours, George Smith, of Coalville.

Mission and other Appeals.

Mansion House Mission.—Mr. G. W. Linnecar (89, Bellenden-road, Peckham, S.E.) appeals for help towards the necessary repairs of the Mission-room at 82, Camberwell-road. The people who attend the services have done their part, but they are very poor.

Littlehampton-on-Sea.—This place is under very peculiar depression this year from local causes. I am labouring very hard at my own charges. The income is not sufficient to meet the expenses, interest, and ground rent on my Mission Church, which is otherwise well attended. I am unable to bear the burden alone and want some help. Contributions will be thankfully received. W. H. Simms, St. Saviour's Parsonage, Littlehampton-on-Sea. Any visitors who will come and help will confer a double obligation.

Home for Invalids, 6, Queen's-road Villas, Battersea-park.—We have had a house full of sufferers all through the long, trying winter; so much so, that we have scarcely had sleeping accommodation for ourselves and helpers. It has long been thought desirable to add the adjoining house to the "Home," so that we might find accommodation for the numerous applicants we now have to reject; by increasing the number of patients, which could be attended by the same staff, we might render the Home self-supporting, which, as yet, has never been the case. To fit up this adjoining house, which may be hired at a reasonable rate, would require from £80 to £100. Will the Lord's people help in this effort? I ask your prayers for the work.—M. L. Ellen Waskett.

Notices.

The permanent address of Mr. Geo. Pearse is, Bouvelard Victor Hugo, L'Agha, Algiers.

W. L.—Joshua Poole has been an invalid for nearly four years, from nervous debility, attendant upon a severe attack of rheumatic fever. During this long period he has been unable to undertake any work for the Lord; he has made several attempts, but as they only had the effect of still further prostrating him, he had (much against his will) to desist. He has suffered very much lately, but he still hopes that the Lord will raise him up once more to engage in the evangelisation work, in which, for so many years, he had been successfully employed. Earnest prayer is requested on his behalf. His address is, 7, Gladstone-road, Halifax, Yorks.

MARY LYON.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A NOBLE WOMAN.

BY

FIDELIA FISKE.

"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon; and, after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."—Sunday School Teacher.

THE COTTAGE ON THE ROCK.

AN ALLEGORY.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

"Cradled in prayer, and mourning only for the feebleness and imperfect utterance of the glorious truths so faintly apprehended, I cast this little waymark of my pilgrimage into the hands of Him whose faithfulness I have to this day proved."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

PAPERS ON

CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE, LIFE, AND WORK.

By R. C. MORGAN.

"It is a book addressed to believers, and cannot be read without much spiritual profit."
Christian Progress.

"A book for quiet hours, suggestive of good and wise lessons."—Sunday-School Teacher.

"The writer shows a large acquaintance with Scripture, and though by no means perfect in its composition, the book has much in it that is calculated to enforce the truths of the Word."—The Freeman.

"We find many traces of earnest and devout study. Many will prize the work as a valuable stimulus to the inner life."—Literary World.

Calls to Christ.

A SERIES OF ADDRESSES BY REV. R. W. NICOLL, M.A.

"The Gospel scheme of salvation is fully set forth, and is pointedly enforced. It is a book which might with much profit be placed in the hands of the careless and unconcerned."—The Record.

"Force and freshness are eminently the characteristics of these 'Calls to Christ'; they are also brief to a proverb, and hence they may be of great service to an earnest evangelist who knows how to use another man's thoughts."—Kelso Courier.

"A choice book. Sweet-scented throughout with the name of Christ, it sets forth the 'old, old story' in eleven simple but explicit lines of Gospel teaching. Though on a familiar theme, it has an unobtrusive originality, and many touches of beautiful thought, which remove it far from commonplace."—Children's Record.

"Choice Sayings."

BEING NOTES OF EXPOSITION OF THE SCRIPTURES.

REVISED BY ROBERT C. CHAPMAN.

Obedience.

It is good to bear in mind that whatever our circumstances, it cannot be necessary to disobey God. Let us not wish for anything unless the means to obtain it be as much approved of by God as the end. (Page 140.)

Salvation, Justification, Pardon.

"How can I be pardoned?" says the poor self-condemned sinner. "How can I not pardon?" says God. The sinner looks at his sins; but God looks at his Son's atoning blood. Sinner, do thou likewise. (Page 136.)

Life of George Whitefield.

By J. R. ANDREWS,

Superior Edition in large type, for Presentation, cloth, bevelled boards (with Portrait), price 5s.

"In July, 1752, he went to Bristol, and to his great surprise, after what had occurred, thousands came out every evening to hear him. Old times seemed revived again, and he had reason to believe that much good was done. On the last evening it rained, yet but few people left. 'I was wet,' he says, 'and contracted a cold and hoarseness; but I trust that preaching will cure me again. This is my grand Catholicon. Oh that I may drop and die in my blessed Master's work!' He had a single eye to God's glory; and a godly fear of sinning against Him was much upon his mind."—EXTRACT, page 79.

POWER FROM ON HIGH; or, The Secret of Success in Christian Life and Christian Work. By D. L. MOODY. 17th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.: Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"This series of earnest and solemn Addresses bear throughout that stamp of honest, eager earnestness, which is so striking a characteristic of the writer's labours as a preacher."—Clerical World.

"Every page is full of stimulating thought for Christian Workers."
Commonwealth.

ADDRESSES by D. L. MOODY. Revised. 104th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"With the effect of these Addresses when spoken the whole land is acquainted, and now that they are written they will tend to keep in force the impression they have already made. The book is clearly printed, on good paper, is handy in form, and is sure of a wide circulation."—Primitive Methodist.

"The volume will be found of great use to Christian workers, for reading, and for distribution among the 'ignorant and them that are out of the way.'"—Methodist.

THE FAITHFUL SAYING. A Series of Addresses. By D. L. MOODY. 10th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Full of the Gospel, well illustrated, thoroughly alive."—Sword and Trowel.

"They are the fresh and earnest utterances of one who longs to honour Christ and to do good to men."—Evangelical Magazine.

"Thoroughly practical and earnestly evangelical."—Wes. Meth. Mag.

HEAVEN; Its Hopes, its Inhabitants, its Riches, its Rewards. By D. L. MOODY. 36th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Limp Cloth, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. 6d.

"Practical, full of anecdotes and point."—Friend.

"It will be sufficient to say that the book contains Mr. MOODY'S vividness of expression, illustrative anecdotes, fulness of faith and hope in undiminished measure."—Edinburgh Daily Review.

"Simple, direct, anecdotal, and earnest."—Freeman.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

Works suitable for Bible Students.

Published by MORGAN & SCOTT.

John, whom Jesus Loved. Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Isle of Patmos." Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.

"This is not a book to be taken up lightly, read hurriedly, and carelessly dismissed. It merits, and will reward, a quiet, thoughtful perusal."—The Record.

"Thy First Love." Christ's Message to Ephesus. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A clear and thoughtful exposition. Dr. Culross writes in an easy, interesting manner; sometimes quaintly, always pointedly. Many a laggard in the heavenly race would be stirred to activity by reading Dr. Culross' exposition."—Penuel.

"Behold, I stand at the Door, and Knock." Christ's Message to Laodicea. By Rev. Dr. CULROSS. Tinted covers, 1s. cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A most opportune book. Would that every professing Christian would thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse it. Sunday-school teachers also would find it immensely stimulating and reviving."—Hive.

Notes for Bible Readings. A Collection of over Six Hundred Subjects, carefully compiled and arranged. Suitable for Bible Readings, Cottage Lectures, Sermons, Addresses, Sabbath-school Lessons, &c. Cloth, bevelled boards, 3s. 6d. A cheap edition may also be had in tinted cover, 2s. 6d.

"This is a book which every Bible student should possess. It will be of special value to the class-teacher, and an assistance also to the preacher. It brings together an immense number of subjects, with groupings of Scripture texts on each. It supplies valuable matter for private meditation; and those who conduct Bible readings will find it most suggestive."—Christian Progress.

Christ Lifted Up. Meditations on the Death, Resurrection, and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. By Rev. ROBERT GILCHRIST. Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The subject from beginning to end is well thought out, and the volume altogether is well fitted to be at once edifying and awakening."
Free Church of Scotland Monthly Record.

"The fulness of Christ for every need of fallen humanity is set forth in a clear, convincing, and attractive manner."—Christian Week.

The Gospel according to Moses: as seen in the Tabernacle and its Various Services. By Rev. GEORGE RODGERS. Frontispiece. Tinted covers, 1s.; cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 2s.

"No young Christian, and especially no preacher, should be ignorant of the truth which this small volume very simply but very forcibly enunciates."—The Record.

"A very spiritual as well as instructive little book, the Saviour being typically portrayed in the Tabernacle, the High Priest, and the Sacrifices."—Churchman.

FIFTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

ASTHMA—CASE of MR. J. PICTON.

This patient resides at Bath-street, Hemel Hempstead, Herts.

For ten years he had cough and short-breathing, which, in spite of all remedies, increased year by year, until at last the asthma was most distressing. "I was compelled (he says) to sit up without sleep I shook the bed in breathing. After taking two large bottles of your medicine my cough left me, and never returned. In a short time I was able to sleep with ease and comfort. My friends are all surprised to see me looking so well now. I took about eight bottles of medicine altogether. I do my utmost to recommend it wherever I go. Use this as you please."*

* This patient did not leave off medicine when a little better, as many do (stunning the snake, but not killing it; and, consequently, having the work to do again), but persevered until the old standing disease was thoroughly mastered.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

THE WHITE FIELDS OF ENGLAND.

An Entreaty to Communicants.

By REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

"What Christian does not long for the Gospel to spread on the Continent of Europe? And who that reflects can fail to observe that the gross state of our large towns arises very much from their being grossly neglected by us communicants. Their sad state is patent to every observing foreigner whom business brings into the midst of us, and he naturally looks with contempt and abhorrence on what he styles our "Christianity." Extract.

BY REV. JOHN MACPHERSON.

Cheap Edition, Cloth, 2s. 6d. Special Cheap Edition, 1s. 6d.

LIFE OF DUNCAN MATHESON, the Scottish Evangelist.

"This is a book full of interest. It tells of the life-work and success of a most excellent and able lay revivalist of the best sort. No Christian can read it without profit. It is highly calculated to instruct and encourage such of God's servants as make the labour of saving souls the business of their life." Methodist Family.

With Lithographed Portrait. Handsomely Bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

HENRY MOORHOUSE, the English Evangelist.

"The record is full of interesting incidents from which counsel and encouragement may be gathered; and we heartily commend it to the attention of those who would know what may be done by workers somewhat off the ordinary recognised lines."—The Rock.

Home for Destitute Little Girls,

THE DALE, UPPERTON ROAD, EASTBOURNE, SUSSEX.

(REMOVED FROM PLAISTOW.)

DEAR FRIENDS,—I am rejoiced to say that the Removal, last September, of our HOME FOR DESTITUTE LITTLE GIRLS, from Plaistow to Eastbourne, has proved a great success. The health of the children is excellent, and those around us are beginning to take an interest in the work. Altogether I am greatly encouraged. But I still need the sympathy and help of my old friends, especially now that expenses are heavy. I have at present Four Empty Beds; anyone contributing £12 could send a little one to enjoy our splendid sea breezes for Twelve Months. We are looking to Him who knows our wants, to send us, through his stewards, the needed supply.

I remain, yours most truly in Christian service,

JANE S. LEE.

THE ANNUAL MEETING

Of these Institutions will (D.V.) be held in EXETER HALL, on WEDNESDAY Evening, the 6th June, 1883.

THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL CAIRNS will take the Chair at 6 o'clock, and will be supported by a number of sympathisers with such work.

About 750 children from the "Homes" will sing, conducted by Mr. JOSEPH PROUDMAN.

To prevent the overcrowding of former years, and the necessity for waiting at the doors a long time before admission, it has been arranged that the doors shall be opened at a Quarter before 5 o'clock, after which hour persons holding tickets will be admitted at once to their seats, in the order in which they arrive, until the house is full.

Admission will be free only to the Gallery. Tickets for the body of the Hall will be 6d. and 1/- each, a few specially reserved and numbered seats being 5/- each.

Application should be made for these Tickets at once, in all cases enclosing stamps to prepay the Ticket and postage. No more Tickets will be issued than are sufficient to seat the Hall comfortably.

Offices: 18 to 26, STEPNEY CAUSEWAY, LONDON, E.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

DECISION OF CHARACTER

BOATING, BATHING, CRICKETING, NATURALISING, &c.,

GARRATTONIAN PHILOSOPHY: WHAT IS IT?

"He is not the discoverer who first utters a truth, but he who says it again and again until he compels mankind to hear him!" So said Sydney Smith.

We purposely omit in these papers the consideration of the ailments or affections which usually occupy so prominent a place in all works on Remedial Science, because we have a thorough conviction that such diseases or affections are but the indications of impaired vitality or want of energy. This is the cause, whatever form the symptoms may take. We must, therefore, be prepared to look beyond the bodily symptoms for the causes of our ailments, if we would correct the tendency to a return of the symptoms of disease, which are only an outward and visible proof of constitutional debility.

The remedy is simply to supply what we understand to be a positive influence to the negative condition of the system. This positive stimulus, operating on the blood, strengthens and vitalises the inner man, urging the system to demand its proper nutriment during digestion, and to efficiently bestow those constituents to the general welfare of the body. The dyspeptic, un-nourished, finds every function of body and mind fail him, because the mal-digestion of his food prevents the formation of health constituents for the blood. The natural impetus of Magnetism stimulates this latent function, by securing a better secretion of gastric juice, and a more healthy nervous and circulatory condition. And so throughout a long catalogue of general and specific affections. Magnetism, by its peculiar qualities, affords a natural power to overcome disease. The marked and speedy effect of this stimulating influence arises from its natural affinity to the nervous force with which it allies itself, aiding the recuperative powers of the system, heightening its vitality, increasing its resistance to all unfavourable external influences, inducing so radical a change in the whole organism, that, if the weakness is not entirely overcome, it is kept in abeyance to a degree fully credited by those only who have proved its efficacy. We have been advocating the claims of Magnetic methods of healing for years, with a deepening conviction that it would be outside the argument altogether to specify any class of ailments for which it is especially adapted, because, as Dr. Sharp truly says, "a certain amount of these imponderable influences is necessary to the maintenance of life itself," and therefore it would be equal folly to suppose we could ignore the value of pure air or sunlight, and be healthy, as to suppose that we could live apart from the influence of this universal law. We naturally draw the conclusion that there is scarcely any known ailment which a due supply of magnetic force could not materially relieve, because no existing form of Electricity could more readily ally itself with the vital force of the sufferer at any period of his life. For, as Magnetism is a universal law, its effects must be unlimited, and it becomes our duty to inquire how far we are obeying this law to our advantage. To suppose we can ignore a natural law with impunity is folly, and, without asserting that Magnetism will meet every emergency, we conclude that no other influence can come to our aid with such energising and life-inspiring qualities, and that it approaches more nearly to the life force ever acting upon the nerves than any other known influence. Who, therefore, can fix the range of its action, or set bounds to its power for good?

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of a LITTLE GIRL—Letter from REV. C. HIGGINS, SUMMERTOWN, OXFORD.

"Dear Sir,—My little girl, seven years of age, has always been delicate from her birth. No medicine she has ever taken has been of any permanent good until some months ago I was induced to try your Balsam. The first dose seemed to put new life into her, and after she had taken the first bottle there was decided improvement. After she had taken the second she was perfectly restored. She can now eat almost anything, can walk four or five miles without fatigue, and sleep well. She was the weakest of the flock, but now she is the strongest. All say how well she looks, and that she is not like the child she was six months ago. We owe this change to your medicine, under the Divine blessing. For this I tender to you my most grateful thanks, and trust your treatment will become universally known.—Believe me to be, gratefully yours, C. H."

A ROYAL REFORMER.

A REMARKABLE book has just been published by Messrs. Trübner & Co., entitled, "The Actual Mission of Sovereigns. By One of Themselves." Its author is said to be Louis II., King of Bavaria. It gives a comprehensive survey of the condition of Europe, as viewed from the writer's exalted position, and so furnishes facts on some subjects unique in their importance and interest. In reference to the prevalence of the war spirit in all the states and empires of the world, his Majesty, deploring the fact, says :—

To-day, the Sovereigns, more nominal than real, are but the guardians of an armed truce which does not permit the accomplishment of peace. A fatal circle encloses us, both sovereigns and peoples, and which we can only break through by a sincere and united agreement, to be brought about by a great intellectual and moral effort.

The plan suggested by the royal author for altering the existing state of things is that of establishing a great European Council, "composed of representatives from the municipalities and mercantile bodies of the chief cities, and who should draw up rules and agree upon guiding principles for the settlement, as they may arise, of all difficulties connected with commerce, manufactures, industry, finance, banking, railways, navigation, coinage, tariffs, customs, agriculture, and so forth. This Council would reassemble annually in the capitals of the chief countries, in succession."

In addition to this another should be convened, to be called the Council of the States of Europe :—

It would be composed of delegates from the Governments and Legislatures of the nations, and would take cognizance of questions and disputes referring to international justice, treaties, navies, diplomacy, colonisation, frontiers, and similar matters. The monarchs would have direct power in this council, which, like the other, would reassemble annually in one of the capitals. And the sovereign of the country in which the meeting took place would have, for that year, the title of Arbitral Emperor of Europe.

Nor does the author of these important suggestions stop here, but, recognising the vast influence which religion exercises in all human spheres, he proposes that a Council of the Churches, Romish and Protestant, Established and Nonconformist, together with all leaders of scientific thought, should be formed. The Pope as its President, it should aim at concentration of all sacred and literary influenceson securing arbitration and peace, where now discord and war prevail to such an alarming extent. We imagine, however difficult the task might be to bring about the two former plans, the difficulty of accomplishing the latter would be far greater, for agreement between such diametrically opposed elements of thought as Romanism and Protestantism, Agnosticism and faith in revelation, could scarcely be secured; nor would the presidency of the Pope prove a resting-place or centre of friendly conference between those who regard him as infallible, and others who regard his pretensions as insulting to the Majesty of Heaven.

It is, at the same time, pleasing to know that there are crowned heads to whom military despotism and armed force is detestable, and that there is, in some quarters at least, a disposition to face the problem, how the evils of war may be checked, and worthier systems and principles introduced. The question, as put by the writer of the book before us, is worthy of careful analysis and reflection :—

Christians in our private lives, civilised in our domestic habits, must we eternally cherish in our official relations, as Sovereigns, the impulsive and ferocious acts of an anti-Christian and barbarous policy, consisting of diplomatic strategy and military violence, the immorality of which, our national laws prosecute and punish, when practised by our subjects amongst themselves. No intelligent or conscientious person can reply in the affirmative.

It is said of "another King, one Jesus," "In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth." He is possessed of wisdom and power not only to consider the difficult problem how to reorganise a disorded world, but also to bring about speedily its practical salvation. With ardent faith and hope we cry to Him, "Thy kingdom come."

GOSPEL MISSION IN PENRITH.

A VERY successful nine days' Mission has been held in Penrith by Mr. Henry Thorne, in connection with the Y.M.C.A.

The ministers of the various churches in the town have heartily co-operated with Mr. Thorne in this work, and encouraged him by their presence and sympathy. It is felt that our dear brother has brought with and left behind him a savour of Christ which will long be felt.

After the close of the Mission proper, Mr. Thorne held a Blue Ribbon meeting; the Vicar of Penrith, Rev. E. W. Chapman, president, and other ministers and friends, took part. This was also a bright and helpful meeting; many donned the little bit of blue.

Penrith, May 16. C. H. G.

CHORLEY, LANCASHIRE.—Mr. W. Forbes has conducted an eight days' Gospel Temperance Mission in the Town Hall. The results have been most encouraging; upwards of 1400 donned the "blue" during his brief stay. It is to be hoped that the good work which he has inaugurated in this town will continue to prosper.

"SOUTHSEA MISSION," PORTSMOUTH.—As the summer months are now returning, and I am still entrusted by Mr. Russell Hurditch, of London, with two of his tents for Gospel work, we hope now to be giving our attention more particularly to that part of the work; the Government authorities have again granted us the privilege of pitching one on Southsea Common, where large numbers of people of all classes and characters flock nightly for pastime and pleasure, and where all sorts of games and amusements are carried on. We hope through the summer to hold Gospel meetings every evening, and twice on the Lord's day. There are also many other dark and needy places in this town where we are desirous to carry the Gospel. The tents are lent me by Mr. Hurditch without charge, but I am responsible for all repairs and working expenses, which are likely to be very considerable this year; as I have no means of my own, I shall be truly thankful to receive the freewill offerings of any of the Lord's people.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN IN FRANCE.

IN an interesting letter to The Times Mr. William Tallack, of the Howard Association, calls attention to a report just issued by order of the French Senate, concerning the condition of orphans and neglected children in France. It is a very voluminous report, and ably edited by M. Roussel, Senator of France, and in Mr. Tallack's judgment reflects high credit on the Commissioners, and all who have been engaged in officially investigating the subject. It is gratifying to learn the following facts :—

The amount of public and private charity bestowed upon orphan and neglected children in France is shown by the volumes under notice to be very considerable, and is most honourable to the character of the French people. There as elsewhere the Christian Church takes the lead in this and other good work. And it is satisfactory to find in these reports a recognition of this fact, and an absence of the bitter and meanly ungrateful spirit too often manifested by influential infidels and Jews in France against those religious bodies and teachers who have expended so much loving care upon the youth of the nation. Thus, out of the 713 orphanages alone in France, more than 600 have been established and maintained by religious bodies, chiefly the Roman Catholic Church.

It seems that even in connection with philanthropic effort great mistakes are made, and reform is needed in France as well as in some cases among ourselves. Mr. Tallack says :—

The Commissioners have rendered good service in drawing public attention to this weak side of charitable and reformatory work, and also to the necessity which exists in France, as in other countries, for leavening the generally too pedantic ecclesiastical mind with a liberal infusion of lay common sense. For it is also shown that the training of the children in many of the religious charities is so lacking in the needful preparations for meeting the temptations of practical life, that the convent-trained girls in particular, on their discharge, fall very easy and very general victims to seductive and ruinous influences.

Much judgment is required by those who govern our charitable institutions, and too much watchful oversight can scarcely be exercised by all true sympathisers with them to avoid mistakes and correct errors which may from time to time be discovered. Defects are sometimes seen from outside which those most responsible, from their absorption in the work to which they are given, fail to observe.

A lesson for our own country, much needed under existing signs of the times, may be learned from the latter part more especially, of the following paragraph :—

The report very briefly and incidentally alludes to two of the chief causes of juvenile, as of adult, crime and misery in France and other lands—the increased facilities for drunkenness of late years, and the prevalence of a flippant and irreverent disregard of the hopes and fears inseparable from adequate and judicious inculcations of the claims of the majesty of God here and hereafter.

Secular education divorced from religious influence is ever the cause of looseness in morals, and must lead to social disintegration and national decline.

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS AND THE SECOND ADVENT.

AS Chairman of the London Missionary Society's Annual Meeting at Exeter Hall the Earl of Shaftesbury gave utterance to some observations which form the subject of a special column in The Nonconformist of last week, written by Dr. Kennedy, late of Stepney. The writer says of his lordship's speech, "The theory of Missions which Lord Shaftesbury set forth seems to me unwarranted by Scripture, and if practically adopted, would be most mischievous." These are strong words, and we may well ask what strange and erroneous notions the noble Earl can have propounded. They are declared in the following sentences:—

Missionary societies "no longer claim the right and the power almost to cover the whole world with the Gospel, and to bring every soul to the knowledge and love of the Lord Jesus Christ." "They now know what they can do, and what they are called to do. They are not called to convert the whole world—that is reserved for one greater: they are called to carry the Gospel to every living creature, and to preach it over the whole surface of the globe, to offer the Bible message of heaven to every soul that breathes, that has a heart to feel and a mind to understand. We have to present that in preparation for the greater event." And the greater event is the "second advent of our blessed Lord and Saviour," which, according to the good Earl, is "the grand solution of all difficulties, and the consummation of all things."

Dr. Kennedy, after thus summarising the Earl's statements, adds: "The questions which gather around the 'second advent' are too great and too many to be discussed in these columns." Nevertheless he proceeds to criticise the theory, and to charge home upon its advocates ideas and consequences they would utterly repudiate, and which are by no means logical sequences of their beliefs on the subject. As for instance:—

To say that "it is expedient" that He should now come visibly and personally to reign, in order to "convict" and convert the world, is to say that the Spirit has failed to accomplish his part in the world's redemption.

The question, as millenarians would put it is, What is the part the Holy Spirit has undertaken to perform in connection with this present dispensation? Dr. Kennedy says it is to convert the world by the preaching of the Gospel. Lord Shaftesbury, and multitudes who with him study carefully the statements of the Word of God on the matter, says this is nowhere taught in Holy Writ. On the contrary, the purpose of the Gospel dispensation is an elective one, designed to gather out of the world a people for the name of Christ, a multitude whom no man can number, out of every kindred tribe and tongue.

This purpose demands the most earnest and devoted energies of the Church to be directed to its accomplishment, and that right on until the Lord returns. It also becomes, when Scripturally understood, one of the most powerful motives to missionary zeal, and personal concern for the salvation of men, it is possible to employ. We most honour the Holy Ghost when we accept his own teaching, and look to Him to perform his own work in his own time and way. That it is the function of the Church to present the Gospel to every creature as far as it is possible to do so no millenarian would deny; but to say that the commission of the Church is to convert the world, is to assert what no word of Scripture implies, but what is contrary to its teaching throughout.

The work of the Spirit in connection with the personal return and reign of Christ will be no less honouring to Himself, and blessed in its effects upon the world than it is now in its relation to the Mission of the Christian Church. The exaltation of Christ in personal triumph on the earth which was the scene of his humiliation, will not detract from the glory of that divine Spirit whose office it is to testify of Christ and to glorify Him. The dispensational purposes of God form the grand and glorious theme of revelation, and as in the past of the world's history, so in the present age the divine Word shall accomplish, not what the crude theories of men deem most probable, or most desirable, but as Jehovah Himself has said in the prophecies of Isaiah, "It shall accomplish that which I please, and prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."

After eighteen hundred years and more of Church work we see to-day three-fourths of the world still in darkness, and Christendom developing with frightful rapidity all sorts of rationalistic and anti-Christ forms of thought. From Dr. Kennedy's point of view, no wonder many speak of the Church's failure in face of her commission, failure for which in great part the Church, by reason of her apathy and divisions, is herself responsible. But in the light of Lord Shaftesbury's truly Scriptural way of presenting the matter, while there is ample room and urgent call for ever-increasing consecration and effort on behalf of the claims of Christ and of a perishing world, there is no ground for the charge of failure, but everywhere cause for deep thankfulness and joy that the savour of Christ's name is being made manifest in every place.

The bride is making herself ready, the Gospel is being preached in all the world for a witness, and signs everywhere being given of the near approach of that day when our absent Lord shall return, and take to Himself the heathen for his inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. Missionary societies have nothing to fear from the views the Earl propounds, and he deserves the cordial thanks of all lovers of God's truth in its dispensational aspects for having on such an occasion drawn attention to them. If they were but studied in their Bible light and accepted in their true significance, we should see the cause of world-wide Evangelisation gloriously sustained and advanced.

GROVE HALL, 130, Lisson-grove, N.W.—Meetings for prayer, praise, and addresses were held in this Hall on Whit-Monday. Stirring addresses were delivered during the day both to the saved and unsaved by various brethren.

AMONG THE FRENCH OUVRIERS.—Rev. R. W. McAll asks us to make the following correction in the notice that appeared in our issue of the 10th inst.: "It was stated that 'the Mission-rooms seat between 1300 and 1400 people;' the correct figures are, between 13,000 and 14,000. The attendances of half-a-million, and increase of 40,000 in 1882, refer to Paris and its vicinity alone. Taking in the whole number of stations, the attendance (including Marseilles) exceeded 800,000, and the increase was 75,000."

ENCOURAGEMENT TO TRACT DISTRIBUTORS.—A correspondent mentions the following circumstance which came under her personal notice: A young man who had lost his situation from drink, and had gone far away from the right path, one day on his return home found that a tract had been put under the door. At first he laid it aside, declaring he would not read it; he felt so sleepless and uneasy, however, that to amuse himself he thought he would look at it. The words he read made him so unhappy that he went the next day (Sunday) to a Mission-room with one who had acted the part of a real Christian friend many times. God sent him such a message that he felt constrained to stop and speak to the evangelist, and there and then he yielded himself to Christ Jesus. The next day he signed the pledge against drink, which had been such a curse to him, and he is now living a happy Christian life.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—9.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THE OUTER LIFE OF HOLINESS.

Part I.

WE have dwelt upon the Inner Life of Holiness, as set forth in Matthew vi. We have seen that, born again, we are brought into the deepest, closest, and most abiding relationship, out of which grows the Father's claim upon our love and service, and out of which grows our claim upon Him as sons.

And now we come forth from the Father's Presence, and go out into the midst of men. What is the first peril against which we have to guard? We find it in the opening words of Matthew vii.

"JUDGE NOT."

It is strange, almost startling, to find this in the forefront of the precepts about the Life of Holiness. It scarcely seems an offence; or, if an offence at all, it is surely one of the lightest. Who was ever troubled with anxiety to keep this precept? or who was ever troubled with much grief for having broken it? Yet its position indicates its great importance. Let us earnestly set ourselves to get at the heart of this command.

There are two or three things which it certainly cannot mean. It cannot mean that we are not to discern between good and evil. It does not mean that we are to paint black white because it looks better—that we are to tell lies or think lies and call it charity. It does not mean that we are to baptize foul things with pretty Christian names, and think we have regenerated them. Niggardliness is not to be called "the prudence that withholds." Miserliness is not to be called "economy." Ill-temper is not to be called "nervousness;" dishonesty is not to be softened into "misfortune." Judge not does not mean that. There never was a time when the world needed more fierce, unsparing, whole-hearted indignation against moral wrong than to-day. And there certainly never was any who burned against all forms of evil with such an abhorrence as He who said Judge not. With might and main, with a keen eye and a bold tongue, with both hands and all the heart, in God's name, let us set ourselves against cruelty, and vice, and corruption, and hypocrisy, wherever we can find it.

And yet, JUDGE NOT.

Nor does this mean that we are not to try and form an estimate of a man's character, or of his actions, when duty calls to it, or when important trusts depend upon the judgment or relationships involving sacred interests. Such judgment is, in itself, a careful, earnest, righteous act, neither indulging any personal curiosity nor ministering to any evil.

Nor does it mean that we are not to form an estimate of men in their public character, or in relation to their public work, or that we are not to form any opinion of each other's character, as earnest or indolent, gentle or harsh, weak or strong. Yet, here we may be standing on the verge of the forbidden.

If it were only in relation to others, these judgments might well be matters against which we should be on our guard. There is, perhaps, no one power which we all share so largely as the power of shaping each other's opinions of other people. It is a power that is by no means dependent upon opportunities of knowing, or gifts of perception, or general trustworthiness. One might almost be tempted to think that the gossip is most successful when least hampered with such conditions. Think how lightly and easily our judgment of others is affected. We require of the physician, the lawyer, the engineer, the expert in every branch of knowledge, that he must have qualified himself, and assured us of his skill before we take his opinion. The judge will not allow the jury to receive any hearsay evidence, any evidence that cannot be tendered on oath, and which cannot be sustained by direct witnesses. But we allow a passing glance, a brainless chatter, a child's prejudice, a moment's thoughtlessness, to shape our opinion of people for life. And we, in turn, create a like estimate in others.

One meaning of the command is this: Keep your mind free from needless judgments of others. Remember how mistaken you may be in your impressions. Remember that there are in all men surface currents that have nothing at all to do with the tide. There are in all of us moods and moments of which we should think it most unjust that we should be judged. "Therefore, I say unto you, Judge not." You are liable to see wrongly, and liable to interpret wrongly, even that which you may rightly see. And you are always blind to the inner self, and blind as to the circumstance. How, then, can you presume to judge any man?

But there is another meaning in these words, a far more solemn and earnest one. It is in relation to ourselves that the words have their fullest force. What we are to guard against is the judging which comes from a notion of our own moral superiority.

I have kneeled in the inner chamber of the Divine presence, and have called God Father. I have been admitted to high and holy privilege, and advanced to the honour of this relationship, a child of God. And now as I come forth into the midst of others, myself, my feelings, my thoughts, my ways, become the standard by which I begin to measure everybody else. I put on the robes of my dignity and climb up into the judgment-seat of my exalted virtue, and look down upon the less favoured humanity at the bar and pass judgment upon him.

It is this against which the word is spoken. Judge not. This self-righteousness—this notion of being better than other people—see how earnestly and solemnly Christ guards us against it. There is in the Master's words a touch of that fiery indignation with which He ever rebuked the Pharisee. And no wonder, for this is the very essence of Pharisaism—that hopeless darkness which Christ Himself could not illumine—for which there was nothing but the most terrible denunciation. This is the spirit which is condemned, the presumption, the self-confidence, the spiritual conceit in which lies the peril of the most hopeless damnation. For is it not a law that holds good in every sphere, that the higher and more complex the organisation the greater is the corruption, if it become corrupt? There is a corruption possible to an egg which is impossible to a stone. It takes an angel to make a devil. Pharisaism is the corruption of great religious privilege and light and knowledge. Therefore, saith the Lord, "THOU HYPOCRITE!" because he is so keen at seeing the mote in his brother's eye but is blind to the beam in his own; that is to say, that the fault which he may condemn in another is little, beside this Pharisaism, this self-righteousness. Nothing can be more utterly destructive of all that is Christ-like within us; nothing is more hopeless as a soil in which to grow holiness. "Blessed are the poor in spirit"—the mourner, the meek, the pure in heart—but here is a swelling conceit, here is the man who triumphs in his own superiority.

And look at the development of this spirit. "Thou hypocrite," saith the Lord. For in that evil which he denounces with such fiery indignation, he is not thinking of the evil at all. He likes to find in the black contrast that which lends a new lustre to his own white robes. He reproves the offender, not in pity, not in love, but in triumph. And if he forgive him it is only to inflict a further humiliation. Thou hypocrite, finding in the evil of others that which makes thine own superiority stand out against the foil of such an advantageous background.

And out of this sense of superiority comes all the wretched round of Pharisaism—all that is hard, and haughty, and scornful; all that strengthens pride, and all that deepens despair in God's world. Borrowing a fancied superiority to others in everything, and exalting the sentiments and tastes above morality, because they more obviously exalt and flatter. And so comes that hideous parody of religion which is its truest crucifixion. A man of gentlemanly demeanour does not suffer in "the religious world" because he does not pay his debts—unless, indeed, they are debts incurred in gambling! He may be profane, corrupt, lewd—what of that if he is rich and dresses well? He will be welcomed without dismay. "The religious world" is only horrified at him if he drops his h's, or keeps a small shop! "Thou hypocrite!"

And yet further out of this judging spirit comes that last and furthest result of Pharisaism, which can see no beauty in anything. A self-appointed inspector of nuisances, with a nose for nothing else—never scenting God's violets and roses. Oh, it is pitiable—religious, very religious indeed—and yet a man to whom a large and noble thought is impossible. A great generous impulse would kill him; the heart could not hold it. A sight of God's own sun flooding the world would strike him blind. They suspect the purest. They see some selfish and sinister end in every charity. They spy out cracks and flaws and chips in everything. Their own exalted self has claimed all their faith; they have none left for any other. Self has drained every drop of their love. These are the men who came to see Beelzebub in Christ Himself, and could crucify the Son of Man as a blasphemer and traitor.

"Well, but surely everybody who judges another is not so bad as that," you say. No; but the most black and hopeless Pharisaism has its springs in this spirit of judging. They are inseparable, this self-righteousness and these harsh judgments. "He spake a parable to certain who trusted in themselves, that they were righteous, and despised others."

And yet, though there be no judgment, let there be caution. Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you. Your experience of these holy things is not to be lightly esteemed. On the one hand do not exalt yourself because of them into a kind of moral superior, and therefore a judge of men; on the other hand, remember that you have received high and holy mysteries, which many cannot appreciate, or even understand.

And yet again, do not think that these holy things are the high privilege and perquisite of a few favoured ones who have specially commended themselves to God. EVERY ONE that asketh, receiveth. It is not because the son is clever, or strong, or brave, or wise, that the father gives him good things, but because he is a father. How much more shall your Father which is in Heaven give good things to them that ask Him? Not your superiority, but the Father's love has blest you. Now by his blessing you are bound to go forth and love all men as brothers. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."

Do is the key-word of this seventh chapter. The outer life of holiness is in doing. Not in conscious privileges, not in clearer light, gracious feelings, raptures—it is in doing. And this doing stands in the forefront. Because of our high privilege as sons of God, because of communion with Him, we are to come forth into the midst of men with a great brotherliness which longs to bless them. This is the fullest and fairest outcome of holiness, its bloom and beauty—doing unto others as we would that they should do to us.

There is a very common religious living which strengthens selfishness. It climbs the mountain top and there builds its tabernacle, sitting and singing its hymns about Heaven, and crying deliciously over them. It cannot think how anybody can like to go down amongst those dreadful lepers and frightful demoniacs and outcast women, and the noisy and vulgar people. Be quite sure that the highway of holiness does not lead us up there for a dwelling-place. It takes us down into the market-place and teaches us to do our business there, honestly and generously as we would be done by. It takes us into the lanes and byeways of the city and teaches us to see in every want and every sorrow a claim upon our pity and help. It takes us home and helps us to remember how the children feel, and to consider the neighbours and servants. This is what we are to set before us as the outcome of our faith and prayer, a gracious considerateness for other people. And that not as busybodies, much less as patrons, but with a simple Christ-like brotherliness, a considerateness that does not only concern itself about men's souls and that which helps them heavenward; but which runs through all the commonest round and ways of the daily life. We are to carry such a sense of indebtedness to our dear Lord and Master that we shall be always trying to find opportunities and outlets to bless others; we are to live finding in all the daily intercourse with men a hundred fresh channels by which the Father's love may flow into their midst.

For his sake, for the sake of others, for our own sakes, let us strive after this as the fairest and only satisfying token of a holy life—this unfailing brotherliness.

AMONG THE KABYLES.—Le Chrétien Belge has a long and most interesting account of Mr. Mayor's work among the Kabyles, of which our readers have seen frequent notices. Mr. Mayor's work has increased so much that he came to seek for colleagues in France and Switzerland. Having no salary to offer, he has only found one, Mr. C. Marchal, to whom he guarantees the modest sum of £40 a year. These two brethren have now returned to their work of faith and labour of love.

UNION CHAPEL, DARJEELING.—The Union Chapel, Darjeeling, is a non-denominational place of worship, built for the use of the residents, and visitors to Darjeeling. The services have, for the last eighteen months past, been conducted by the Rev. H. Rylands Brown (Baptist minister), who was sent out in communication with the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. Mr. Rylands Brown also visits among the tea planters of the district, conducting occasional services at some of their houses, where neighbouring planters meet. He also conducts regular weekly temperance and religious meetings among the soldiers at the convalescent depôt. With a view to strengthening the financial position of the chapel, this appeal is made to all Protestants who believe that Christian union is to be desired, and that every effort in that direction should be encouraged. Colonel B. W. Morton, Calcutta, is honorary treasurer.

WANTED! 1500 MISSIONARIES FOR CHINA.

SHALL the Gospel be preached to this generation of the Chinese? A weighty question, truly; but how can I, a solitary Christian missionary, one of the two professed Protestant Christians in this vast heathen city, even entertain such a question? Yet is there not a cause? Might not God grant the fulfilment of even this vision? Then I will turn it over in my mind and think.

Shall the Gospel be preached to this generation? That suggests the thought of other generations, for whom our preaching is too late. Oh, merciful Lord our God, rebuke us not in Thine anger, neither chasten us in Thine hot displeasure, that we have suffered generation after generation to drift unwarned, unheeded, to destruction! It has often been said that every third being on the globe is a Chinese. Then what of that awful world of misery, the just reward of sin. Many of the other two-thirds of the world's inhabitants have been won for God; but the Chinese third continues little touched. Oh! fearful thought!

The Gospel preached to this generation? Then there is not much time to lose if that is to be done: "The King's business requireth haste." "I must work." Yes, I must; and, in God's strength, I will. But this generation—that is, an immense multitude, hundreds of millions here in China alone. I can't reach them, neither can all our missionary brethren, even with the aid of our dear Chinese fellow-workers. Will anybody help us? If one could pour out one's heart to Christian brethren at home face to face, surely many would come. Who knows whether writing may not have some effect?

Preach the Gospel to this generation? Yes, dear friends; it is neither impracticable nor impossible. The body of missionaries met in conference at Shanghai in 1877 said in their appeal for more labourers: "We want China emancipated from the thraldom of sin in this generation. It is possible."* Let us see then how it might be done

How may the Gospel be Preached to this generation of the Chinese?

By preachers, assuredly; for "how shall they hear without a preacher?" The Apostle continues: "And how shall they preach except they be sent?" But our modern version might appear to run, "except there be funds forthcoming wherewith to support them." Now, seeing that to accomplish so great a work some fifteen hundred missionary preachers would be all too few, we encounter at the very outset the objection that such a thought is "utopian," "impracticable," "unreasonable," and all the other big words by which many a God-inspired thought has been crushed as soon as born. Oh, let us not be lulled by any easy-going conclusion as to its impracticability, as though God had somehow become poor! Is He not still the owner of "the cattle upon a thousand hills," and of all the mighty universe?

Do we really know God? Nay, do we comprehend the least jot or tittle of his mighty power, of his yearning, longing love for those who are out of the way, of his unwillingness that any should perish?

Will not He, who so freely gave up the Son of his love, add to that great gift every other good? In that "gift of all gifts" He has given us the strongest, fullest promise possible of his willingness to give all; nay, all things are ours in Him. Surely, when God is taken into account, it is no impracticable, unreasonable matter we come to discuss when we ask, "How may the Gospel be preached to this generation of the Chinese?"

Now the first step is a thorough and general stirring up of believers, so that the great duty of the Church to disciple all nations may be recognised as the burning question of the day. We may be sure God never intended that a mere sprinkling of earnest souls—a few here and a few there—should be the only ones possessed by an intense longing for the salvation of the heathen. Many Christians who might do so, lack willingness to give themselves first and then their substance to the Lord for his mighty work. There are, probably, not a few of God's children in England, &c., who have a private income of £50 per annum; now that, or even less, say £40, might, in some parts of China, suffice, especially if two or more live together and share various expenses, such as rent, wages of cook and teacher. Should any feel doubtful as to £40 or £50 being sufficient, I only wish they would come here and try; I believe they would be most thoroughly satisfied. Good, abundant, and substantial food; neat, warm, and comfortable clothing; a fairly comfortable residence, a servant and teacher, all these may be procured in these parts for £40 or £50 a year. Now, if in possession of so much, why not live on it among the heathen? Let these sheep without a shepherd have some consideration.

Then in the case of those anxious to go forth, but possessing no private income, might not the plan be more generally tried of each church sending forth one or more of its members, and looking upon him as its own missionary, though he might wisely work in connection with the missionary organisation preferred by the church sending him forth? A church even of 100 members would probably find £50 within its ability to raise. Perhaps self-denial might need to be more generally practised than at present. "I like," would have to give way to "I can do without." A little less, and less ornate, furniture, dwellings not quite so spacious, dress not too scrupulously following the fashion, might wonderfully simplify the question of sending forth more missionaries. Were I in England again, I would rather live in one room, make the floor my bed, a box my chair, and another my table, than the heathen should "perish for lack of knowledge."

I believe, too, that Christian merchants and traders could assist in the effort to "preach the Gospel to this generation of the Chinese," in a way that would not in the end impoverish them. English manufactured goods of many kinds find a wide and constantly increasing market in China. Calico, and other plain and flowered cotton goods, rugs, blankets, cloths and various woollen materials, watches and clocks, toys and pictures, matches, and numerous other things, sweetmeats and preserved provisions, are generally saleable. Much of the calico at present brought from England to China is shamefully poor stuff, consisting, in great measure, of clay, which, when washed out, leaves a mere nothing behind. But if a Christian merchant established an agency, say at Shanghai or Hankow, supplying really good materials and articles, and engaging earnest, faithful Christian men to travel throughout the land and sell them, on the understanding that they were to take advantage of every opportunity offering to spread the Gospel, I believe that the goods might be sold at fairly paying rates, and that the profit would cover the expenses of the traveller, and so this would be a self-supporting and extending plan.

I cannot see anything in such a work unbefitting a preacher of the Gospel; nay, I believe that Christians thus brought into the church would be strong, robust, and independent ones, who would not lean on their teacher's aid for alms, employment, and what not. The very fact of seeing their teacher earning his bread by the "sweat of his brow," would be in itself a sufficient sermon. I have reliable information that honest, straightforward trade in such articles as I have mentioned has been attempted with success. Foreigners may legally travel (and in that way trade) everywhere in China, but are not allowed to publicly establish their warehouses, &c., except at certain ports, of which Hankow is the most central one. Such travelling agents need but to go in the spirit of Jesus Christ—meek, gentle, courteous, honest, truthful, and forbearing—and they might recommend the Gospel more widely than even missionaries can hope to do for many a day.

Then, I have not mentioned the sale of good, well-tried medicines, which would, in the eyes of the Chinese, be even more consonant with the character of a teacher, and would be pecuniarily successful. The attempt to mitigate the terrible curse which has come on the land in the smoking of opium might thus be made to advance God's kingdom. Any really reliable medicine for stilling the craving for opium, and keeping up the smoker's strength while he feels the depression caused by abandoning the vice, would be welcomed and gladly purchased by hundreds of thousands, even though it were costly. Other medicines, too, pay well, such as chlorodyne, santonine, quinine, good oint-

* As some of our readers may not possess the Report of the Shanghai Conference, containing the appeal above referred to, we give at length the paragraphs on pages 476—478 bearing especially on this question:—

"Under these circumstances millions pass into eternity every year! What an agonising thought! Souls of men, endowed with the most glorious faculties, perishing for lack of that knowledge which has been entrusted to us for diffusion!—Souls which might be emancipated from sin, transferred into the kingdom of God, and thus established in a career of ever-widening intelligence, and ever-deepening joy, to 'shine as the brightness of the firmament, and as the stars for ever and ever.'

"How long shall this fearful ruin of souls continue? Ought we not to make an effort to save China in this generation? Is God's power limited? Is the efficacy of prayer limited? This grand achievement is in the hands of the Church. If we faithfully bring our tithes into the storehouse, and preach the Gospel everywhere, then the windows of heaven shall be opened, and blessings showered down upon us, till there be not room enough to receive them. . . .

"We earnestly appeal to the whole Christian world for help. . . . We want China emancipated from the thraldom of sin in this generation. It is possible. Our Lord has said, 'According to your faith be it unto you.' The Church of God can do it, if she be only faithful to her great commission. When will young men press into the Mission field as they struggle for positions of worldly honour and affluence? When will parents consecrate their sons and daughters to missionary work as they search for rare openings of worldly influence and honour? When will Christians give for Missions as they give for luxuries and amusements? When will they learn to deny themselves for the work of God as they deny themselves for such earthly objects as are dear to their hearts? Or, rather, when will they count it no self-denial, but the highest joy and privilege, to give with the utmost liberality for the spread of the Gospel among the heathen?

"Standing on the borders of this vast empire, we, therefore—one hundred and twenty missionaries, from almost every evangelical religious denomination in Europe and America, assembled in General Conference at Shanghai, and representing the whole body of Protestant Missionaries in China—feeling our utter insufficiency for the great work so rapidly expanding, do most earnestly plead with one voice, calling upon the whole Church of God for more labourers."

ments and plasters, of which the Chinese have none, suitable patent medicines, &c. The mere sale of these things would do much good, for such medicines are an immense improvement on what the Chinese themselves have. In similar ways, Christian merchants and traders might help to solve the question, "How may the Gospel be preached to this generation of Chinese?"

True, the men thus employed might not be versed in all the learning of the ancients, nor even know a word of Hebrew, Greek, or Latin; but, I hope none would demur, on that account, to their being sent forth. Sometimes a desire has been expressed that (only) men of superior educational and other attainments should be sent to this great Mission-field. Ah, me! What would be said if the infantry were not allowed to go to war because they were not life-guards? Nelson's renowned signal was: "England expects every man"—seamen and marines as well as officers and captains—"to do his duty!" Does not God expect every Christian to do his duty? And, while Satan still usurps the rule over such immense parts of our Redeemer's dominions, is there much doubt where our duty lies?

I don't know which ode of Virgil or which father of the church would help me to answer the questions asked me day by day, "Is it the same sun in your country as ours?" "Are there any hills and plains, rivers and lakes, in your land?" &c. Nor does it need a great amount of learning to tell a poor sinner that an almighty Saviour waits to save him. What is needed is first heart, then head. "Heart to heart." Moreover, as a matter of fact, we find in China as elsewhere that it is "the poor" who hear the Gospel gladly; not many wise, not many noble are called. God still chooses "the weak," "the base," "the despised," "yea, the things that are not;" and, to reach and influence these, it is not so much learning, as the constraining love of Christ and the mighty power of the Holy Ghost, that are essential.

Finally, the 1500 missionaries coming to China would be no loss to the home church; nay, more young men and women are lost to the church annually, by backsliding, often traceable to a lack of Christian work to engage their hearts and energies, than would suffice to carry the blessed Gospel through the length and breadth of this heathen land.

If any should desire more particular information, and will communicate with me, I will gladly give them all I can.

PROTESTANT HOSPITAL IN MADRID.—The Spanish Protestants have established a small hospital in Madrid in order that their converts may not be obliged when sick to come under the influence of the Sisters of Charity, who use every possible means to induce them to confess to the priest and return to the Church they no longer regard as Christ's.

BLACKDOWN HILLS MISSION.—Having had to stand still at the command of the Lord for some time in our own locality, to learn at his feet and to wait for further orders, we hear his voice now saying, "Go forward." We are directed to the dark parts of Somerset and Dorset by the earnest entreaties of those who sit in darkness and who long for the light and the truth to be brought to them. We desire to provide a second tent for this purpose, and we lay this matter before our fellow-servants of Christ for fellowship and prayer. We trust we shall commence our summer work with two tents—one among the soldiers at the camp on the Blackdown hills early in June, the second about the same time in West Somerset and Dorset. This work will need special help apart from the other Mission now, for purchase of tent and evangelistic services and working expenses.

MONIE, THE BLIND FISHER-GIRL.

BRIGHT and bonnie she looks as she leans back gazing over the blue waves with a sad, sweet smile on her face. No one would have guessed that those big brown eyes were sightless, and had been so since Monie first came into being. The child was growing up now into a well-developed girl. It was difficult to know what to do with her, so her father thought, as he watched her sitting amongst the sailors on the pier, or wharf, and heard her carolling in her round, rich voice, the songs they asked her for.

Monie had a wonderful memory; perhaps a gift that in some degree made up to her for the loss of sight. Hymns, songs, or sayings were caught up by her and stored away in the deep recesses of her busy brain for future use.

One day a stranger strolled up and down the wharf watching the boats being loaded and unloaded, and exchanging a word here and there with an idle sailor who stood lazily smoking, or chewing a straw. The gentleman's attention had been attracted by Monie, and he stood to listen to her singing. Presently he led her by the hand to where a group of men stood, and asked her to sing him a hymn. The girl struck up at once a well-known one, apparently without intentionally choosing it:—

The whole world was lost in the darkness of sin,
The Light of the world is Jesus!
Like sunshine at noonday his glory shone in,
The Light of the world is Jesus!
Come to the Light! 'tis shining for thee;
Sweetly the Light has dawned upon me.
Once I was blind, but now I can see:
The Light of the world is Jesus!

Even as she sang the words, with a plaintive pathos in the oft-repeated chorus that no words can describe:—

Once I was blind, but now I can see:
The Light of the world is Jesus!

tears stood in many eyes and rolled down the cheeks of one or two. The gentleman pulled his little well-worn Bible out of his pocket and said as he opened it:—

"My men, we have had a sermon preached to-day by blind Monie that you and I can never forget. She has sung about light and sunshine, and the glory of day, yet her eyes have beheld none of these things; they are only meaningless words to her. Oh, are they realities to you? They are to me; I can say:—

Come to the Light! 'tis shining for thee
Sweetly the Light has dawned upon me.
Once I was blind, but now I can see:
The Light of the world is Jesus!

"My dear friends," he continued more earnestly, "do not be content with listening to words about Jesus, with joining in hymns about Jesus, with talking of heavenly things—but go right to Him and get your souls' eyes opened."

The men listened in a subdued way, and though no immediate effect of the little scene followed, the blind girl's thoughts began to centre round the Jesus of whom she had long sung unthinkingly and carelessly, and in after years she learned to say in a sweet, deep, true sense as the stranger did:—

Once I was blind, but now I can see:
The Light of the world is Jesus!

My little reader, have you been content with pleasant services, bright hymns, nice seaside talks, has your tongue flowed glibly over sacred words and solemn hymn-lines, without any of it being a reality to you? Is yours a sadder blindness than Monie's—even a soul-blindness?

It drew tears from the eyes of strong men to hear a blind girl singing about sight, but it draws tears from the eyes of Jesus and the angels when they hear a blind soul talking or singing about the light and glory of Heaven when it is in awful darkness concerning them.

Will you be careful never to sing a hymn that you can't say is true of your own self and your own feelings? Question yourself as you sing—"Can I say I do believe?" or "I am thine O Lord," and if you cannot, do not rest till, like blind Monie, you have made all a "reality." EVA TRAVERS POOLE.

STRANGERS' REST, HAMBURG.

A LITTLE more than two years ago a Rest was opened in Hamburg by Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, of Liverpool. It was visited in the first year by 3402 and in the second by 5629 persons, most of whom were seamen.

In a town like Hamburg seamen who have just returned from a long voyage are exposed to great temptations, and it is the duty of every Christian, and of every man who loves his fellow-men, to reach out a helping-hand to prevent them from falling into moral degradation and wasting their hard-earned money. In the Strangers' Rest a helping-hand is reached out, and not in vain: God has visibly blessed the work.

The number of those who take an interest in the work of the Rest is small, and few of this number can afford to contribute largely. We are, therefore, compelled to seek the help of friends at a distance; the work cannot be carried on if we do not receive this assistance, which may be sent to Rev. J. C. Aston, 47, Heinrichstrasse, Altona, Hamburg.

A CONFERENCE IN NORTH CAROLINA, U.S.

A CHRISTIAN Conference was held at Durham, in this State, for three days, April 18, 19, and 20. It was a movement of such interest and importance as to merit being chronicled in THE CHRISTIAN, which has several appreciative readers here. The chief interest of the gathering lies in the fact of its being, as far as the writer knows, the first of the kind in the Southern States. It has attracted wide attention, and will doubtless result in similar Conferences being held in adjacent States. It was largely attended, chiefly by ministers. To all it was a season of much blessing, and to many like the beginning of a new life.

The subjects considered were thus expressed in the "call," one topic being taken up each day: "What attainments in (1) Righteousness, (2) Peace and Joy, and (3) Power for service, are offered us in the Word of God for this life? What hinders these attainments? How are we to make them? Leading addresses were made at the beginning of each of the three daily sittings, followed by other voluntary addresses, limited to ten minutes, and interspersed with frequent and earnest approaches to the throne of grace. The dew of the Lord rested on all the speakers. They included brethren eminent for power and piety. While the Word was given large prominence, it was noticeable that it seemed to have searched the speakers' hearts through and through, and was also applied with great power and pungency to the consciences of those who listened. The practical outcome of the proceedings in the quickening and empowering of many of the servants of Christ is most gratifying.

We would ask English Christians to join us in thanksgiving for this memorable meeting, which many of us believe marks a new era in spiritual things in this part of our land. We ask also their prayers, that this movement, thus begun, may be forwarded by the grace and power of our God. E. F. BALDWIN.

MAY MEETING NOTES.

THE CONGREGATIONAL UNION.

THE meetings of the Congregational Union, in spite of a week of inclement weather, were successful and well sustained. The Chairman's address was delivered on the morning of Tuesday, the 8th inst., at Westminster Chapel, and dealt with the subject of "Christianity in the First Century." Of course it was characterised by all Dr. Fairbairn's well-known literary skill and intellectual force; indeed, some critics have spoken of it as being too elaborate, and "too highly charged with intellectual elements" for its purpose.

The theme is one of such practical importance, and capable of treatment so serviceable to the interests of the Churches of Christ to-day, that it is disappointing to find it dealt with on lines unpractical and far removed from the sphere of thought occupied by the rank and file of Christian communities. As is the case with so much of the teaching prevalent now-a-days, it is what is not in the address, rather than what is there, that indicates a lack which minds imbued with a love of spiritual things must painfully feel.

We could have wished that in such a paragraph as the following, Dr. Fairbairn's testimony to the miracles of Christ as supernatural works, and evidences of the Divine power which attended his Mission, had been more clear and unmistakable. Speaking of the historical events of our Lord's life, he says:—

This is outer history, all that the eyes of a Pilate or even a Tacitus saw; but was it all that could be seen? "No," say some, "there were his wonderful works; what men of later days were to call miracles, finding them a burden or a support to faith, just as the idea of nature or of Christ was the greater." Well, these need not concern us; his supreme works were not physical, but spiritual; undiscernible by sense, but only the more marvellous to thought.

So also in his discussion of the vital points involved in the doctrine of Christ's sacrifice; on such an occasion, and from such a position as the Chair of the Union, it would seem to be of highest importance for the trumpet to give a certain sound. Critics who lean to the broad and rationalistic view of the Atonement have already claimed the utterances of the address on this subject as favourable to their views. In times like these, when the vicarious and really sacrificial nature of the death of Christ is so widely ignored, and the tendency to set it aside grows more and more strong, we should have rejoiced to have had from such a source a firm declaration of the doctrine in its Apostolic clearness, rather than the laboured and largely philosophical treatment of it which it has received.

So also in reference to the work of the Spirit. In a picture of the Christianity of the first century we should have expected to find the pentecostal effusion of the Holy Spirit recognised as its great factor, and dwelt upon as its mightiest force, rather than thus summarily dismissed:—

And now, why had the doctrine of Christ so wonderful a career? Why did it create in these few years so extraordinary a revolution? achieve so remarkable progress? These are large questions, not to be answered in a few concluding sentences. We speak not here of special endowments, common or miraculous gifts of the Spirit, but only of the normal agencies and methods of the primitive churches and their apostolic men.

The common and miraculous gifts of the Spirit far outweighed in their importance every other consideration. We confess that philosophical disquisitions on such a theme have for us but little charm; they take the mind away from the central point to which it should ever converge. The Apostles may have been as limited in their ideas, and circumscribed in their notions, as they are said to have been, but they accomplished more in their day than all the more learned and broad teachers of these modern times are accomplishing for the spiritual regeneration of men. The one great requirement of the age is, for the Christianity it develops to return to the purity, fervour, and simplicity of the first century of its history.

While writing thus we nevertheless find many passages in the address with which we heartily accord, as for instance the description given of the Churches of Christ as to their true character:—

The Church is the body of Christ; the churches into which it is not divided, but distributed, ought to be like incarnations of his Spirit, orders by which his beneficent activity is maintained and exercised on earth. So far as they have been this they have existed by divine right, been confessed as Christ's before his Father and before men.

Every Christian must sympathise with such a desire as the following words express:—

Would it were possible for the Christian people of England to forget for one splendid hour their ancient feuds, and look at their ecclesiastical rivalries and controversies, as it were, from the standpoint of the Redeemer, and man's simple and direct relation to Him.

Were the churches able to look at each other from this standpoint, they would be able to see unity where now they only feel diversity, would lose the ignorance which breeds contempt in the knowledge that begets respect and discovers brotherhood. Where controversy had reigned, emulation would live; the ambition to excel in the ministries of gentleness and peace would supersede the ambition to excel in authority, or conquer in argument.

Were anything like this to happen, men would indeed find that the kingdom of God had come; our Christian societies would be the realised religion of Christ. And were they to realise it, its victory would be achieved. That victory tarries, not because the enemy is strong, but because the forces of Christendom are weak; and they are weak because they lack the love that unifies and compels to common and loyalest service. Where division from us is treated as separation from Christ, there the very power truly to love man is lost, and with it the power to work as agencies reconciling men to God. He who hates a fellow Christian can neither love a brother-man, nor make him feel loved of God.

So also in its repudiation of all priesthoods in the Church of Christ save that which is in Christ Himself, and is the mission of his whole Church as identified with Him, the following extract is well worthy of reproduction:—

Christ called no disciple a priest, endowed none with priestly functions, made his collective society a holy and spiritual priesthood, but did not establish within it any priestly class. A completer act of abolition was impossible, or one of mightier moment and significance. It meant that his people, like Himself, were sons, that the filial relation was too direct and sacred to suffer any alien to intermeddle with it, that the fellowship ought to be so clear and close as to make the child feel as if his spirit were a mirror of his Father's heart. The man who knows himself a happy and reconciled son feels the priest's a devisive presence. So deeply did this enter into the ideal of the new religion, that it is only sober truth to say, the degree in which a system restores a priesthood is the measure of its departure from Christ. The men who seek through ritual, ceremonial, or sacrifice to worship God prefer bondage under the ancient schoolmaster, the poor and burdensome law, to the spirit and adoption of sons.

THE LONDON MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

This is among the largest and most widely known of all the great missionary agencies of our land. Its income has reached the sum of £127,627. This year the annual meeting was presided over by Lord Shaftesbury, who paid a high tribute to its work and worth as an organisation for diffusing the knowledge of Christ in the earth. He said:—

I have always greatly admired and almost marked with reverence the progress of the London Missionary Society; I have always been struck by its mild yet vigorous dignity. I have always observed the intensity of its principle, the firmness with which it pursues its object, the grandeur of its conceptions, and the wonderful way in which God has blessed all its operations from its commencement to the very hour in which we live.

The report dealt with the Society's work in China, India, Madagascar, South Africa, Central Africa, West Indies, South Seas, and New Guinea, and contained many features of a most encouraging and deeply interesting character. Special reference was made to the dificulties caused by the state of things in Madagascar and South Africa, the first resolution moved by Rev. Edward White thus speaking of them:—

While this meeting is devoutly thankful for the steady progress made generally in the Missions of the Society, it cannot but deplore the political difficulties which threaten to interfere with the work in Madagascar, and the unrighteous and cruel treatment to which the natives of South Bechuanaland have been subjected by Boers and other marauders; and would still prayerfully commit the cause to Him who can make man's wrath praise Him, and the remainder of it restrain.

Rev. J. Mackenzie, of South Africa, pleaded earnestly on behalf of the land from which he had come, and said:—

What I want is to introduce a supreme and central power in South Africa, as the Government in Edinburgh did amongst the clans in the North of Scotland. If England will do this—it need not cost money, it need not cost a regiment of soldiers from this country—if England will do it with the right hand, not the left, then a bright future is before South Africa. If you desire to see Cape Colony circumscribed and without influence, handicapped by its own troubles on its own borders, then you leave all the possibilities of the future in the hands of the Transvaal, men whose sympathies are like those of the Southern States of America. With your eyes open, Christian friends, you are writing the future history of Africa in blood; you are causing wars of this nature to be fought, in which grown native men and women will be shot down; you are leading to a history in which the children of those men thus shot down, having the chains fastened upon them, will burst them, as human beings ever will in some period of their history, and burst them in blood. I plead for the rights, the liberties, the very existence of those whom I imperfectly represent this morning, and I would ask that the earnest, straightforward, and Christian influence of Exeter Hall and of the London Missionary Society may be given in this matter.

Canon Girdlestone and Mr. Albert Spicer, with Rev. G. Gilmour, also addressed the meeting. Mr. Spicer has just returned from a visit to the stations in India, and gave a most graphic and cheering account of what he saw and heard of the progress of Christianity there. We quote two extracts from his speech:—

WOMAN IN INDIA.

Though it is true that women form the chief obstacle in India, I am here to testify to-day that no class of society in India suffers more from their position as heathens than the women of India. I do not use exaggerated terms when I say that I may describe the great mass of women in India—and, of course, speaking of quite the higher classes—as being simply beasts of burden; and, whilst they are the greatest sufferers from heathenism, there is no class that has gained so much where they have accepted Christianity as these women. You can see it in their faces. As you go about places like Travancore and are in the habit of meeting constantly heathen and Christian women, I would undertake to choose correctly in any given street the Christian women, quite apart from dress, from the heathen women. There is a tone of depression and of sadness, a haggard and a worn look—something unsatisfied; but on the Christian women, on the other hand, there is that look of growing refinement and satisfaction, and something that tells of a hope that is brighter than what they have known before.

A GOODLY SIGHT.

In Nagercoil, Travancore, they have a church which seats 2500 people. It was my privilege to see that church full on two occasions, the first at a meeting of welcome to us, and again on the Sunday; and after the ordinary service they held their united communion, when 1100 native Christians sat down to the commemoration of the Lord's Supper. I confess that I did not look upon that scene without feelings of strong emotion, and a feeling that one had been privileged to see the partial fulfilment of our Saviour's words when he said, "And other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one flock and one shepherd."

Rev. G. Gilmour, in speaking of the work in China, put in

A PLEA FOR MORE PRAYER.

I want you to pray for the conversion of these men to whom we, in Pekin, and others in other parts of the world, are the means of communicating these truths of Christ. I believe it is not only the earnestness of the missionary that is going to produce results, but it is your earnestness here. We are your agents, and I believe fervently we shall have results there in direct proportion to the measure of your earnestness here. I believe I am speaking to the right people when I ask you to pray. Unprayed for, I feel very much as if a diver were sent down to the bottom of a river with no air to breathe, or as if a fireman were sent up to a blazing building and held an empty hose; I feel very much as a soldier who is firing blank cartridge at an enemy, and so I ask you earnestly to pray that the Gospel may take saving and working effect on the minds of those men to whose notice it has been introduced by us. What I want is this: to go back to my work feeling that there are those behind us who are praying earnestly that God's Spirit would work effectually in the hearts of those to whom we have the privilege of preaching. If you pray earnestly you can but work earnestly, and then you will also give earnestly; and I do not think we can be too earnest in the matter for which Christ was so much in earnest that he laid down his own life.

THE BIBLE AND PHILANTHROPY.

An evening meeting has been held this year on behalf of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in addition to the usual largely attended morning one, referred to in our columns a week or two since. The Rev. Hugh Price Hughes was among the speakers, and paid the following well deserved tribute to the Bible in its social influences over men wherever it is known:—

He maintained that all history would show that in every country of the world where the power of the Christian Bible had not made itself felt, the working man was and is a slave. The Christian Bible, and the Christian Bible alone, had made a man who works with his hands a free citizen. What book was there in the world that honoured and sanctified the state of poverty as did the Bible? What book so fiercely denounced the sins of the rich as did the Bible? What other book in the world dared to teach, as one of its central principles, that we must honour all men? What destroyed the despots of Europe but the discovery of a Bible by Martin Luther in an old monastery? Let the secularists show their trophies. There was not enough philanthropy among the enemies of the Bible to keep one single hospital in existence. Those who loved the Bible, and because they loved the Bible, had held upwards of 150 May meetings this very year for the promotion of health of body, culture of mind, and for the benefit of the whole human race. Had the agnostics held a single May meeting? Those who loved the Bible had a monopoly of doing good, and if they struck, all the charitable and philanthropic institutions of the country would be bankrupt in six months. A waning interest in the Word of God would be followed by ecclesiastical coldness and death.

IRISH CHURCH MISSIONS.

The usual breakfast party of friends connected with this Society was held on the 9th inst., at St. James's Hall, and was followed by the annual meeting, at which Earl Cairns took the chair. His lordship well introduced the object they had met to promote.

The income of this Society was, for the past year, £19,310. The report stated that—

The work in the city of Dublin had not been in the slightest degree hindered by the persecution which had so seriously interfered with missionary operations in Connemara; but it had been surrounded with special and peculiar difficulties. It might be said to be carried on in three distinct parts of the city, each of which was densely populated. The Mission church in Townsend-street was in the midst of an almost exclusively Roman Catholic population. If proof were needed that Mission work was required in such a locality, they had only to mention that five out of the nineteen men recently charged with conspiring to murder in this city either lived or worked within a stone's throw of the Mission buildings. And, although the population sympathise generally with the prisoners, such was their respect for the Mission workers that they could pass in and out of the streets, at all hours, without let or hindrance, without the slightest insult or opposition. It was also worthy of note that not a single convert, or even any regular attendant at the Mission services, had been in any way connected with those wicked conspiracies.

Addresses were delivered by the Chairman, Revs. H. W. Townsend, W. B. Doherty, Canon Cory, and G. Everard, all of whom earnestly pleaded for greater support to be given to this important work. Its funds need replenishing, and its operations deserve hearty sympathy and support.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

The Annual Conversazione in connection with this well known institution was held at Regent's-park College, Lord Polwarth occupying the chair. Addresses were delivered by the Revs. C. Skrine, M.A., Charles Graham, Dr. Murray Mitchell, and J. Hudson Taylor. The action of the Alliance on behalf of religious liberty, and that in all parts of the world, has been firm in its tone, and invaluable in its results from the beginning of its history. As a proof of its continued zeal in this direction, it may be noted that—

During the meeting special prayer was offered with regard to two memorials from the Evangelical Alliance—one to the Khedive of Egypt, seeking to obtain Sunday as a day of rest for the Christian employés of the Egyptian Government, and the other memorial was about to be forwarded to the Emperor of Austria, soliciting liberty for Protestant parents to take their children, between the ages of seven and fourteen years, with them to their own places of worship, instead of being compelled to send them to Roman Catholic services.

Mr. Graham's statement that they were doing the most for the Church of God who were promoting the unity which was the basis of the alliance, is undoubtedly true, and worthy of the serious consideration of all who stand aloof from other Christian bodies than their own. As the Chairman said, in these times we do indeed require to realise our separation from the world, our consecration to God, and our union one with another. It may be, ere long, that many who have failed to be drawn into union of heart and action by the influence of the truths taught in the Word of God concerning it, will be driven into it by the force of circumstances, involving the necessity of standing shoulder to shoulder in defence of the faith, which has been delivered not to this sect or that, but to the saints.

MESSRS. MURPHY AT BLACKPOOL.—Mr. Francis Murphy opened a new Blue Ribbon Hall at Blackpool on Sunday-week. The hall is capable of holding 3000 people, and admirably adapted for Mission work in connection with the Gospel Temperance movement. There was a good audience, and Mr. Murphy spoke with much earnestness and power. Mr. T. E. Murphy also delivered a telling address on the principles and practice of Gospel Temperance. Prof. André's choir sang hymns sweetly, and added greatly to the enjoyableness of the proceedings. The Professor is doing a good work of reform throughout the town in counteracting the allurements of the gin-palaces.

MESSRS. MOODY AND SANKEY'S COMING MISSION.

A LARGE gathering of clergy, ministers, and Christian workers of different denominations, in sympathy with the forthcoming London Mission, and representing the district from Woolwich on the one hand to Peckham on the other, was held on Friday evening last at the St. John's Mission-room, Deptford. The Rev. Canon Money presided, and the following gentlemen were among those who took part in the meeting:—Rev. B. W. Bucke, Lee; Revs. J. W. Marshall, Charles Wilson, and B. Baring-Gould, Blackheath; Rev. J. T. Wigner, Newcross; Rev. George Boggis, Greenwich; Rev Hugh McIntosh, Brockley; Lieut.-General Field, Mr. John Macgregor, Mr. C. D. Fox, Dr. McKilliam, &c.

Resolutions were passed, heartily and unanimously inviting Messrs. Moody and Sankey to labour in this locality; also for the formation of a committee in full sympathy with them and their work; and urgently inviting earnest and continued prayer for the labourers and work of the Mission at all devotional meetings, in the family and in private. There is much reason to feel grateful to God for this meeting, where all were "of one accord, of one mind;" and we cannot but accept it as an earnest of a rich harvest to follow.

YOUNG CITY WORKWOMEN.

SIR,—In your issue of April 19 your readers had most touchingly brought before them in a letter from "J. F. A." a picture of poor overtired shopwomen. May I suggest one practical way of helping them. The health, and even at times the lives of these young shopwomen, and of young women toiling in our large and crowded London work-rooms, are sacrificed, because, when change of air and rest are urgently needed, means are wanted to enable them to procure it.

Last autumn a cottage on the borders of Epping Forest was opened for the purpose of giving rest and country air to many of these overtired women and girls. The rent of the cottage is guaranteed, but as no charge whatever is made to the young workwomen, who are mostly poor, the expense of their maintenance is very considerable, and for this we earnestly ask the help of your readers. I am sure I should not appeal in vain if they knew the gratitude of those who have already enjoyed the rest and country air at the cottage, or had seen the look of surprise and gratitude of a young city shopwoman who, looking faint and weary with fatigue, was only to-day invited to come for her "Saturday off" and Sunday, to the cottage.

Many are able to stay a week or fortnight, and our earnest desire is that these times of rest may become a great blessing spiritually, as well as physically, to numbers of young women. Communications of any kind and subscriptions to be sent to (Miss) KATE REYNOLDS.

Epping New-road, Buckhurst Hill, Essex.

FEMALE EMIGRATION TO CANADA.—The Canadian Government, in the new buildings about to be erected at Quebec, are providing a department for the reception of single women and children, which will practically be a temporary home for the classes in question. It will be in charge of a lady who has been identified with emigration work, and will be kept cognisant of the requirements for female labour in every part of the Dominion, so that women and children may be sent direct to situations or homes that have been provided for them.

SOPHISMS OF UNBELIEF.—Rev. Dr. Wainwright, one of the ablest and best informed Christian apologists of the day, gave an interesting address on this subject to a company of young men at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, last Thursday evening. The two points taken up and elaborated were the sophistical assertions that the Bible is obsolete and that miracles are impossible. These were examined and most satisfactorily refuted. We should be glad to see Dr. Wainwright's special gifts as a defender of the faith more frequently utilised at our London Y.M.C. Associations.

Notes and Comments.

WE are requested to state that the applications for reserved seats at the forthcoming Mildmay Conference—June 27 to 29—have been so early and numerous that no reserved space is left unappropriated. Tickets are not needed for the unreserved portion of the hall.

Mrs. Marzials, of Barnave, par Luc, Drôme, France, writes thanking all the friends who received her, in the name of the Lord, during her recent visit to this country, and invites Christians who are going to the Continent to spend part of their summer holidays in rest and work in that traditionally interesting, but spiritually needy locality.

The venerable George Muller, of Bristol, after an evangelistic tour in Germany, Poland, and Russia, has returned to England, and is giving addresses at the Conference Hall, Mildmay-park. Next Friday evening (May 25), at 7 30, he speaks to Christian workers; and on Sunday (May 27) he preaches in the Conference Hall, at 3.30 and 7 p.m.

We note with regret that the Société Evangélique de France, in view of the great falling off in its resources, has been compelled to instruct its agents to take only half the accustomed number of journeys monthly to distant localities, and to concentrate their activity in places where they can go without expense. Two stations, moreover, have had to be closed entirely.

The Grand Duchy of Luxembourg is the only European State in which the public sale of the Bible is forbidden by law. The reason given for the prohibition is that colporteurs, under the pretext of selling Bibles, are said to have offered improper publications for sale. A strange reason for a strange measure. A paper, entitled "Christianity in the Grand Duchy, and the Christianity of the Gospel," has been widely disseminated, setting forth "those truths which to us," says La Chrétien Belge, "are familiar, but among our neighbours in Luxembourg are totally unknown."

It is requested that friends willing to help the work of Miss Reade (late of Punrooty) would kindly communicate with Miss Lowe, 6, Maberley-road, Upper Norwood, S.E. The thirty orphan girls dependent on Miss Reade are now removed to Cuddalore, and will be left under the care of Miss Groom, while Miss Reade hopes to undertake village preaching in a district where the Gospel is not now heard.

The following statement appeared recently in the Pall Mall Gazette, and has been reproduced in other journals. It is a sad comment on the moral condition of things in this land of light and liberty, of Churches and Christian institutions:—

It was the High Priest of Nishi-hong-wan-ji who was selected by the reforming Japanese Government of 1868 to proceed to London, and to report on the influence of the Christian religion on public morals in England. It was the intention of the Japanese Government that, if the report were favourable, Christianity should be introduced throughout the country. But after the high priest—a most enlightened and spiritually-minded man of very liberal views—had spent eighteen months in London, he reported to his Government that Christianity was far more powerless than either Shinto or Buddhism in preventing crime, and particularly drunkenness, and it was therefore resolved to make no change in the public religion of Japan.

The effect of Christianity upon those who dwell in its light, and come under its outward influence without yielding to its power, is terribly hardening. The Gospel is either a savour of life unto life or of death unto death to those who hear it, so that its effects as a system of thought, a mere formal creed, in a country like our own, where the susceptibilities of many are blunted, and the hearts of multitudes hardened, by familiarity with its truths, rather tend to increase enmity to the truth, and neglect of righteousness, than the contrary. It is to be feared that to a large extent in England the salt has lost its savour. Mere profession of Christianity is powerless to correct evil, or reform society. Could the Japanese priest have approached Christianity, and viewed its effects from the standpoint of its true spirit and tendency and power, rather than that of its mere political and general influences, he would have arrived at a different conclusion. Christianity, spiritually understood, and experimentally realised, is the mightiest force for destroying evil and producing righteousness the world contains. It is true, as one of our poets has put it—

"Talk they of morals? O Thou bleeding Love!
Thou Maker of new morals to mankind!
The grand morality is love of Thee!"

Spite of all men say to the contrary, "The Cross once seen, is death to every vice."

In contrast to the report of the high-priest it is pleasant to receive the following testimony from a Christian minister:—

Japan is now being blessed with a wonderful revival. Natives and foreigners alike share in its benefits. It began in connection with the Sailors' Reading Rooms, under the charge of Mr. Austin. I think that more than sixty foreigners have found the Lord, and all the native churches rejoice in many additions. The native pastors preach in the demonstration of the Spirit, and with power. The change is most marvellous. Next month we have a general Conference of missionaries at Osaka.

Thomas Pratt Gould.

Yokohama, March 10.

While the Duke of Cambridge and others are asserting the moral value of those Acts which have so recently been condemned in our House of Commons, by the vote obtained on Mr. Stansfeld's resolution, the testimony borne by the Rev. Mr. Schon, who has for many years been chaplain to the Melville Hospital of Chatham, is of highest importance as evidence to the contrary. After long experience in watching their effect, he speaks of "their demoralising tendency," and says, "What has set me most against them is the fact that they remove from the minds of immoral men the sense of guilt and shame." He declares that, when speaking to patients suffering the fruits of their sinful habits, he finds them pleading the Acts of Parliament as sanctioning, and so rendering morally harmless, the course they have pursued. Mr. Schon is worthy of honour for speaking from such a position so frankly on a question, about which truth is often withheld.

It is a sad sign of the laxity of these days in reference to freethought, and atheistic boldness, to find the President of the Congregational Union and the Vice-President of the Baptist Union signing, with a number of Agnostic leaders, a memorial praying for the release of the imprisoned Freethinkers, who are under sentence not for their freethinking, but for their daring to outrage common decency by publishing prints too vile for description. No wonder an evening contemporary should say:—

It is impossible but that the impression should get abroad that these gentlemen really regard the religion of which they are the authorised teachers as at best an open question, and the movement, coming immediately after the action which some of them took on the Affirmation Bill, is specially unfortunate. Such misplaced liberality does not even commend itself to those on whose behalf it is displayed. Consistency is a virtue which even atheists know how to respect.

The effects of this dallying with Atheism on the part of men who occupy positions of influence in the Christian Church, on young men and others, is terribly disastrous. Cases are not wanting in which the sons of Christian parents plead as an excuse for reading infidel literature, that ministers, whom they have been taught to respect, tolerate it, and plead for its authors. The journal quoted from above, says:—

We cannot readily believe, however, that the clergymen who have allowed themselves to take part in this movement are fully aware of the character of the publication whose conductors are now undergoing punishment.

In many cases, it appears that political ideas of liberty are allowed to supersede sacred warnings against licence to work evil, and regard to what are mistakenly called civil rights is allowed to override the claims of Christian truth and moral law.

The demonstration in Hyde-park on Whit-Monday in favour of Sunday closing for London seems to have been a great success. The procession formed an unbroken line from St. James's-street to Hyde-park Corner, and certainly indicated a very widespread and deep desire on the part of multitudes all over the metropolis, to see this measure brought about. Among those who took part in the several meetings held along the line were the Revs. Dr. Maguire, H. J. Horsley, G. M. Murphy, with Dr. Norman Kerr, and Mr. Andrew Dunn. Mr. B. Whitworth, M.P., presided at the principal meeting.

He stated that Sunday closing in Scotland had, reckoning increase of population and taking the consumption per head of the population, decreased the consumption of intoxicating drink by thirty-five per cent. Equally satisfactory results had followed similar closing in Ireland, and the five exempted towns, which needed such closing the most, were no longer to be exempted. If the drink bill of England were lessened by one-half, he believed the wages of the workmen would immediately be raised twenty per cent.; and that the consequent increased comfort to themselves and their families would be incalculable.

Mr. John Hilton, representing the United Kingdom Alliance, declared that but for the moral influence exercised by the temperance societies in relation to the drinking facilities, it would be impossible to govern the metropolis.

Canon Tristram, the author of "The Land of Moab," "The Natural History of the Bible," and other well-known works, has lately been expressing himself rather strongly on the subject of evangelicalism in theology. He is reported to have said, during his recent visit to the metropolis:—

What I dread more than anything else is indefiniteness of doctrine. What I fear in the young clergy is falling into the habit into which the Congregationalists and other bodies have fallen—that is, of using terminology that means nothing. Two-thirds of the Congregationalists are Arians, and there are few Congregationalists who dare preach the doctrine of the Atonement; and that is what I am afraid of in our young clergy—of their beginning to be loose and not definite in their doctrinal teaching.

Referring to the Universities, he said:—

One of the great difficulties felt throughout England was that of finding at the Universities godly young men of Evangelistic views. There were as many as we could expect to find at Cambridge, but next to none at Oxford. The perils to which a young man was exposed at Oxford were very great. He must be master of all the infidel literature—Positivist, Agnostic, and Pantheistic—or he would not get his first-class there.

Supposing these statements to be exaggerated, as we may well hope they are, it is still a lamentable fact that there should be any real ground for their acceptance. Yet to preach plainly now-a-days the old-fashioned doctrine of atonement requires courage, and is in many quarters a bar to acceptance in churches of influence. The gospel of education and culture, of intellectual refinement, and of moral elevation apart from spiritual life, is sadly subverting the power, and usurping the place, of the Apostolic doctrine of the Cross of Christ. Fearless denunciation of modern tendencies to set aside Evangelical truth, and vigorous warning of their growing presence in our midst, may excite anger and scorn in some minds, but we may be thankful that there are some leaders of the age who are still bold and uncompromising in their attachment to the old way-marks, and in their resistance of attempts to remove them.

We have received the following interesting and suggestive note from our friend and fellow-worker, Rev. Thomas Champness:—

I am anxious to call the attention of Evangelists to the wisdom of following in the wake of our Blue Ribbon friends. Wherever they go they make a gimlet-hole for "a nail in a sure place." Not long ago I was conducting a Mission in a large town in Lancashire where there had been a special effort made by the Gospel Temperance workers, and found the place all alive. Christian people had learned how to work. The ice was broken, and we had in consequence more done in four days than could have been done in twice the time but for the forerunner.

The United Presbyterian Church Synod has just been holding its Sessions in Edinburgh, and has been occupied with important social as well as directly spiritual questions. A report on public morals was submitted by Dr. Andrew Thompson, who said no rest should be given to our legislators until the disgraceful Acts bearing on the promotion and sanctioning of vice were utterly done away, as also Sunday traffic of every kind, except in medicine and milk. Resolutions in sympathy with this feeling were passed, and also enjoining Sessions to see that no members of their congregation should keep open shops on Sunday. Church discipline might well be brought to bear on this in other directions.

A Conference on Christian life and work was held in the course of the session, when the subject of "Prayer-meetings, and how best to conduct them," was freely discussed. This is a subject of immense practical importance to our churches. The difficulty of maintaining the attendance and fervour of these meetings lies to some extent in the want of tact often displayed in their management. Dr. Thompson and others advocated importing into them as much as possible of the spirit of joy and praise; variety as to subjects introduced was also urged. Nothing is more needful than for the hearts of Christian professors to be awakened to the place and power of prayer in the Divine plan of working and blessing work.

Several speakers referred in strong terms to the worldliness of many methods adopted for raising money on behalf of church work. The practice of bazaars and lottery tickets was severely animadverted on. Dr. Jeffrey, of Glasgow, said: "A strong voice should go forth against the practice of introducing amusements at semi-religious concerts and soirees, which was becoming very common. The disposition to secularise religious concerns was greatly to be regretted." There can be no doubt these things serve greatly to lessen the spiritual power of the communities in which they are resorted to, and it may be hoped this free ventilation of opinion on them will serve to check the evil.

We are glad to see the Synod is advancing in the strength and vigour of its interest and action in the cause of Temperance. Principal Cairns moved and Dr. Wallace seconded, a motion to the effect that a legislative measure embodying the principles of local option is urgently demanded, and should be passed for Scotland without unnecessary delay. Dr. Reid asserted that a non-abstaining minister was not fully equipped for the work of the ministry. The number of ministers occupying charges in their Church was 589, of these 295 were abstainers. Much may be hoped for in the way of further advance in the adoption and spread of temperance principles in Scotland from the position taken in reference to it at this year's Synod.

A very enlightened, suggestive, and able paper on "Social Reform" appears in The Nineteenth Century of this month, written by Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P. It deals largely with the question of our immense pauper population, and how to meet the need of providing for pauper children. It is gratifying to find a statesman so philanthropic and resolute in his determination to face the social problems of our times, coming to the front, and exerting such an influence as the member for Liverpool is certainly gaining in the estimation of the public.

Mr. Smith says, with much force of truth, "We are scandalised, and rightly so, at the contrast between the religion we profess and the national life we lead. We wish to yoke together the ethics of Christianity and the maxims of State policy." If we would do this, we must not allow the sworn enemies of Christianity to have place in our national councils. The divorce of Christian ethics from State policy must surely follow, giving to anti-Christian leaders power to regulate State action. If Mr. Smith's wish in this matter is to be accomplished, as we devoutly hope it will, the efforts made of late to yet further secularise the State must not be allowed to become successful. If the State is to "remove vexatious restrictions, and give encouragement" to Christian philanthropy, most assuredly atheism must be kept as far as possible from its seats of honour and influence.

The awfully hardening and pernicious effects of gambling has just received a fresh illustration in the suicide of a young nobleman at Monte Carlo. He belonged to one of the first families in Schleswig-Holstein, and visiting Monaco in the course of a tour through Italy, was drawn into one of the infamous gambling hells there, ruined, and then in despair he shot himself. Surely the devil is nowhere more at home or more triumphant than in gambling circles, where body and soul become his easy prey.

It is a cause for regret that the new Canon of Westminster should have been chosen from the very decidedly High Church school. There is room for complaint that in some of our high places far too much favour is shown to Ritualistic proclivities, and far too little to thorough Evangelicalism.

The parents of the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon celebrated their golden wedding at the house of their son on Monday of last week. The gathering of the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren amounted to nearly forty. Mr. Spurgeon, Sen., though retired from pastoral work, still preaches frequently, and renders good service to the cause of Christ.

It is worthy of note that Archbishop Croke's outrageous action in support of Irish disaffection has proved too much even for the Vatican, so that he has been sent for to Rome, and received well-merited rebuke. Directions have also been sent to the Irish bishops to refrain from having anything to do with the testimonial to Mr. Parnell, or with any agitation in favour of his political plans.

The New York Times of Monday, May 7, has a lengthened notice of the return to America, on the previous day, of Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey. The latter was present at the meeting in the Cooper Union on the evening of the day of their arrival; besides singing several Gospel songs, he briefly rehearsed some of the outstanding features of the eighteen months' campaign on this side of the sea.

Mr. Moody, says the account, had not sufficiently recovered from the ocean voyage to attend any meetings, but it appears he did not altogether escape the attentions of the sharp journalists ever on the alert for news. While declining to go into details as to the recent campaign, he expressed his grateful conviction that the results had been large. The following paragraph from the notice in the New York Times will interest many on this side of the Atlantic:—

Mr. Moody also thought that the ministers in this country should exchange pulpits often with the brethren in England, "say for six months at a time." If this were done it would remove much of the prejudice felt between the two countries as experienced by travellers who hastily made their trips through one or the other without staying long enough to get really acquainted. "It is only a short trip across the ocean, and it would do much to stir up the people of both lands. Why, I could have preached in Queenstown," said Mr. Moody, "on Sunday last in the morning and in New York to-day."

Referring to the trip of the Alaska, which, notwithstanding frequent delays by fog during the last forty-eight hours of the voyage, surpassed all her previous records by two hours, the same journal says:—

Yesterday she landed her passengers here for the first time early enough for them to attend morning service. The voyage was described as an unusually pleasant one. Messrs. Moody and Sankey were among the passengers. They held a number of services during the voyage in the cabin and also in the steerage. There were also a number of members of a temperance organisation on board, and on the last day of the voyage ninety passengers were induced to sign the temperance pledge.

By all means our readers resident or visiting in London should go and see the Tinworth Exhibition of Bible scenes, modelled in terra-cotta, by George Tinworth, at 9, Conduit-street, W. Note the Scripture references on the models.

Among the ministers present at the Memorial Hall on the Monday evening, at the opening meeting of the Congregational Union, was the Rev. John Harsant, of Rochester. By half-past six on the Tuesday morning he had passed away to the other world. So suddenly may we be called to exchange time for eternity. Well may we be awake to the duties of the present hour, for we none of us know what a day may bring forth!

A well-deserved tribute of respect and affection has just been paid to Dr. Angus, of Regent's-park College. A testimonial, the subscriptions to which had amounted to £2221, was presented to him at a meeting held in the College, Mr. S. Morley, M.P., presiding. The Doctor has been president of the institution for 35 years, during which time he has had under his care 200 students, 188 of whom are still labouring in the Master's cause, 26 of them in Mission fields abroad.

A large meeting of brewers, wine and spirit merchants, licensed victuallers, and beer-house-keepers was held at Sheffield on Friday, at which resolutions were passed deprecating Sunday closing, and, of course, the Temperance movements which are gaining ground so extensively amongst us. Copies of these resolutions were ordered to be sent to the Prime Minister, and every Member of Parliament. Happily, our Temperance Army is well manned and well equipped for maintaining the fight, and, spite of all opposition, such as this action portends, the Drink traffic is doomed to far greater destruction than has yet overtaken it.

The Eight Days' Gospel Temperance Mission at Exeter Hall next week appears likely to be a great success. The chairmen include Members of Parliament and well-known London citizens prominent in every good work. Among the speakers are the foremost professional advocates from America, as well as some of our best home workers in the same field. The leaders and members of London and suburban Gospel Temperance Choirs have come forward nobly to aid in this great central effort, and from what we heard and saw at the meeting for practice on Saturday we should expect a choir of at least 200 well-trained voices.

We are requested to remind the Choir that the last rehearsal will take place at Exeter Hall next Saturday (26th inst.), at five o'clock precisely, when it is hoped that all who purpose to take part during the Mission will not fail to be present.

As this Mission is intended to be a demonstration of the state of feeling in the Metropolis on the vital question of Total Abstinence, it is urgently desired that all who lead opinion in their own circles, and whose influence is a power, will by their presence contribute to its success. It will be observed that the programme (see p. 24) consists of a sevenfold impeachment of Strong Drink, as a desecrator of the Lord's Day, a demoraliser in commercial circles, an inflicter of wrongs upon women, an enemy to the working man, a deteriorator of our physical, mental, moral, and spiritual being, an oppressor of children, and a robber of churches; concluding on the eighth day with the Gospel of Christ as the power of God to deliver the enslaved.

COLAR FAITH MISSION.

AN INTERESTING EVENT.

DEAR SIR,—Our friends and fellow-helpers in England may be interested with an account of a baptism which took place, in connection with our Mission, on April 15. Our people had due notice that the baptism was to take place at Bethany—our Christian village—about three and a half miles from here, on Sunday at 6.30 a.m., before the sun was too hot. They were cautioned to rise early enough to be there in good time. This injunction was hardly needed, for many of the orphans were astir soon after 3 a.m. Five o'clock found us all up. By this time the big children and young people had started on foot, while we (Europeans), the small children, and others who could not walk, followed in three coaches and three carts, all drawn by oxen. Our English friends would have enjoyed the primitive sight.

By the time we reached Bethany the foot travellers had already gathered round the open-air baptistery in orderly ranks. The sight was intensely interesting. After a short service, Mr. Ed. Bowden (of the Nursapore Mission, whom we had the pleasure of entertaining for a few days, and whom we asked to administer the ordinance) descended the steps to the baptistery, when a hush came over every spirit. The candidates (eleven in number, ranging from ten to seventeen years of age) went slowly and solemnly down into the water in turn, as if they knew and felt what they were doing. Each one received an appropriate text of Scripture before being baptized.

The youngest candidate was a boy of about ten. It was deeply affecting to see the little fellow standing in the water, reverently listening to his text as it was read to him. Tears—not of sorrow—started at the sight. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise." This is true of a few even in India; but oh, what a few! This little coloured lad stands in the streets and preaches to his fellow-natives, and has done so for some time.

Before the ceremony was over and we could be gone the tropical sun had risen far above the horizon, and had commenced its scorching work. We retraced our steps as quickly as possible, thanking God for what had occasioned our journey, and reached home in good time for breakfast.

The usual Sunday afternoon Gospel service was changed into a Communion Service, when our young friends were publicly received into church-fellowship for the first time. It was a happy time for them.

We have twelve cases more now under consideration who have applied for baptism. May we be directed aright as to receiving them.—Yours very truly, W. Alfd. Redwood.

MR. ELI JOHNSON.—At an enthusiastic temperance meeting in Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. Eli Johnson received a warm welcome on his return from Australia, where with his famous black box he aroused considerable enthusiasm. Mr. Robert Graham, whose effort to check the illicit traffic in intoxicating liquors in New York city is still being pushed forward, was present, and his enterprise was heartily commended.

A CONTINENTAL GOVERNESS' HOME.—Nearly three years have elapsed since the late Miss Esther Beamish, accompanied by Lady Sebright, paid a visit to this city. We had a drawing-room meeting at which both ladies were present, when Miss Beamish addressed the friends assembled most earnestly about the desirableness of establishing a Governess' Home. I rejoice to say that we have now the prospect of seeing our long-cherished desire in this matter realised. Mdlle. de Blairville, the founder of the Home Suisse in Vienna, has resolved to open a branch in our city. As it has been arranged that there is to be an "English room" in the Home, we have pleasure in uniting our efforts with hers. The Home will be opened, D.V., in September, and we shall be very glad to receive contributions in the meantime for the furnishing of the English room.—Yours very truly, Rudolf Quai 8, Budapest. Andrew Moody.

ADORATION.

YES, to Thee—to Thee—belongs
Endless praise of holy songs,
Adoration as is meet,
Worship perfect, and complete:
Angels only bring Thee this,
In the happy realms of bliss.

Yet Thou seekest here below,
Worshippers to serve Thee too,
Not the praise of bended knee,
Muttered words of mystery,
Not the attitude of prayer,
Which the spirit does not share.

But the homage of the heart,
Loving Thee for what Thou art,
Finding Thee in all around,
Earth as heaven a holy ground,
Till the soul exultant sings,
"Lord of lords, and King of kings."

Thus with an adoring love,
May we join the hosts above
Who repeat before thy throne,
"Thou art worthy, Thou alone,
To all worship, honour, praise,
Through eternity's long days."

Holy! holy! holy Lord!
Evermore be Thou adored,
Blessed be thy glorious name,
The unchangeable "I am."
Finite creatures though we be,
Yet we join in praising Thee.

DR. SOMERVILLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DEAR SIR,—My object in writing now is to ask you to let Christian friends know, through the medium of The Christian, that Dr. Somerville has had large meetings here, and that we in Bloemfontein have been blessed through his visits. Souls have been won for Jesus, and Christians in all our churches revived and quickened. The Wesleyan and Dutch Reformed brethren worked hand in hand, the meetings being held alternately in the respective church of those two denominations. In addition to meetings for the elders, we have glorious times with the little ones.

Dr. Somerville is now on the Diamond fields, and I hear has had large gatherings.

The natives were not forgotten by the Doctor; he had a large meeting, speaking through three interpreters—Dutch, Baralong, and Kafir. Pray for us in South Africa, that the visit of such men as Dr. Somerville and Mr. Mountain may be blessed to all classes of the population.

Robt. S. Stoddart.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, South Africa, April 12.

MR. CLARK WILLSON has been the leading agent in a considerable and genuine work of grace at Elmira, New York State, U.S. A local report states that the interest increases, and each night finds more people professing conversion. Mr. Willson is assisted by Mrs. Willson and his daughter Hila.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—For seven weeks the "glad tidings" of God's grace have been preached in this city by Dr. Munhall, of Indianopolis. Over one thousand have professed the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Men and women in the churches, cold and careless, enveloped in darkness, and finding no joy or peace, have been led into the light.

NEBRASKA.—The Nebraska Evangelistic Committee was organised to meet a felt want, and the new and rapidly rising commonwealth is thought to be a wide open door for its largest usefulness. The evangelistic services and the Sunday-school institutes have been signally owned and honoured of God. The committees are now looking with much solicitude for a State evangelist, and the right man has before him a most enviable field. A State Christian Convention is also planned by the committee for next October.—Evangelistic Record.

HOMES AND SCHOOLS IN DUBLIN.

HROUGH the goodness of God we have cause to rejoice in the comparative success he Dublin Mission work in all its branches. e disturbed state of the country has opened ny fresh doors to the Scripture readers, who t throughout the City every day, teaching people wherever they can obtain a hearing, l inducing large numbers to attend the differ- classes and Gospel meetings which are held their instruction. The Homes and Schools, which some 1300 children are wholly or in rt maintained, are working successfully, and reports received from the employers of the rs and girls who leave the Homes for situ- ons are almost invariably encouraging and isfactory.

There has hitherto been a missing link in the ain of institutions constituting the Dublin ssion, namely, a Home for Big Boys. The cessity of this has long been felt; many dis- ssing cases are continually coming before our tice, of lads in poverty and helpless destitu- n who are beyond the age up to which it is nd practicable to provide for boys in either of e other institutions. Through many adverse cumstances it has become almost impossible such lads to obtain employment of any kind. is heartrending to meet them, time after time, d to know that for lack of a helping hand, or, they themselves aptly express the want, "one re chance," they are fast degenerating into nfirmed idlers, soon to add to the enormous mbers already filling our workhouses or isons.

Permit me to give an example of the kind of ses this Home is intended to help. One even- g, at the close of a Gospel service, which was ld in the Mission Church, a tall, weary-look- g lad stood away at the far end of the build- g, apparently loath to leave the place where had found a temporary shelter and warmth. he friend who had been conducting the meet- g noticed and approached him; finding that was in a most pitiable state he questioned m as to the cause of his becoming so poor. e replied that some time ago his master dis- arged him on account of his conversion from oman Catholicism. He had found it impos- ble to get any work since; the consequence s that being several weeks idle he was com- lled to part with everything he possessed for od, and was at this time at his last resources. was soon ascertained that his story was true, d he was temporarily supported in one of the omes, where he exhibited much gratitude by s diligence in making himself useful, until a itable situation was obtained for him; in this has since remained, and is giving every satis- ction to his employers.

God inclined one of his stewards to offer us ch an amount of money towards the cost of a ome for this class of boys, that we were duced to erect the building, which we pray ay be the birthplace of many souls. There is commodation for twenty in this new Home; d it is proposed to keep the lads long enough ascertain their capabilities, character, &c., en to pass them out to situations, according to eir fitness, as openings occur. Every care ll be taken to entertain only those who prove emselves worthy of the help friends are giving.

Faithfully yours,

, Upper Fitzwilliam-street, ELLEN SMYLY.

CALLANDER, N.B.—A series of very success- l Gospel Temperance Meetings have been held re last week. Many anxious souls have been alt with by Mr. Arthur Robertson (agent for ghland Temperance League) and other Christian rkers.

WORCESTER.—By invitation of the Young en's Christian Association, Mr. Mapstone, of e Evangelisation Society, held a series of etings for young men in our Lecture Hall. His ours have been much appreciated, and many earing evidences have been afforded that the rd's blessing has rested upon the work of his vant.

A REVIVAL IN BOSTON, U.S.

ANOTHER manifestation of what is proving a most remarkable religious awakening was seen at Tremont Temple, where was held an all-day "prayer and Bible convention" under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. From what was there said and from conversations with pastors and other religious workers, the reporter gained a fair idea of the scope of the work already done and of the results that the next few weeks are expected to bring forth. There was but one general opinion expressed, though in various words. Pastors of all denominations agreed in saying that the Evangelical Churches of the city and suburbs are united as never before. There has been a spontaneous and genuine union—with the one object, the salvation of men—such as evangelical Christians in Boston have never seen. Denominational differences seem to have disappeared of themselves, and the result has been not only most wholesome among Church members, but a great help in reaching the masses.

The first effect of union evangelical meetings, which were begun at Tremont Temple in midwinter, seems to have been a general awakening of Church members. Indeed, the undercurrent started in this direction is said to be peculiarly powerful and effective. The response from the popular heart outside the churches has been a surprise to all engaged in the work. The interest among all classes has been wonderfully keen, prompt, and responsive. There has been no excitement, no demonstrative emotion, but a deep-seated, earnest inquiry that the leaders regard as a more hopeful and abiding spirit than has been manifest in previous religious movement. The work has been going on quietly and solely through the churches, thus making no loud call on public attention.

The largest churches in many sections where Union Evangelical services are being held nightly are scarcely able to contain the throngs of people of all classes who seek to hear the Evangelists and other leaders. In Hyde-park, where Mr. E. W. Bliss has been at work for two weeks, the meetings are crowded, and the number of inquirers has been very large. In Jamaica Plain, in Everett, in Woburn, and in various sections of Boston, according to the reports at yesterday's meeting, the same feeling exists. Noon-meetings are now held at Tremont Temple daily. The Evangelical churches at the South End unite in a series of meetings, there being Bible-readings in the afternoon at the Union Congregational Church, and general services in the evening at the Clarendon-street Baptist Church. Mr. Bliss will conduct the latter services. Mr. J. M. Sutherland is also at work in the city and vicinity, and the pastors of Evangelical churches are helping each other outside their own immediate fields. It is yet too soon to speak of the effects of the work upon church membership.

The Convention at Tremont Temple continued from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m., leaders, topics, and speakers being changed hourly. Fully 5000 people attended the services in the course of the day, and the exercises were most impressive. As indicated above, all the reports were encouraging, not only those from this vicinity, but several that were made from other parts of the country. Most of the morning was spent in listening to these reports and in prayer. At 2 o'clock Rev. Dr. Gordon spoke earnestly on the topic, "The Baptism of the Holy Ghost." At the beginning of the next hour Mr. Bliss spoke impressively on the subject, "How to Use the Bible with Inquirers," and Rev. Dr. E. B. Webb delivered a thoughtful address upon "The Importance of Thoroughly Instructing Young Converts in the Bible." Rev. Dr. Ellis, pastor of Tremont Temple Church, closed the services with a most heartfelt plea for a higher, purer religious life and work, and when he called for a manifestation of a decision of consecration or reconsecration to God's service, scarce a dozen in the house remained seated.—Boston Journal.

CHRISTIAN WORK IN SEVEN DIALS.

A VERY interesting and successful Mission of ten days' duration has been concluded in connection with Mr. William Harrison's work in the Five and Seven Dials, St. Giles'. On Sunday the 6th from three to four hundred Christian workers from different parts of London engaged in active service in this needy district, and entered heartily into the work of visitation, tract distribution, singing, preaching, and other branches of work in the Lord's service.

The congregations that gathered round were thoroughly characteristic of the neighbourhood, and many were the listening ears who never would have heard the Gospel in any church or chapel. The scene in the morning was an impressive one, for amid the din of shouting pedlers, costers, shopkeepers, and others engaged near the spot in Sunday trading, the strains of song and prayer might be heard mingling in solemn contrast. Meetings were convened and successfully carried on in various parts of the district where the multitudes could be best reached, each being provided with an appointed conductor, preachers, singers, &c. The workers met for tea in the Mission hall, and afterwards renewed the services in different parts of the district as well as in the Mission Hall, Moor-street.

This work was earnestly followed up by meetings for prayer, public services in the hall, and in the open-air, during the succeeding week. Large and interesting assemblies gathered night after night. Many of those given to drink signed the Gospel Temperance pledge, and more than a hundred persons solemnly avowed their intention to lead a new and better life. Mr. W. Harrison is anxious to continue a vigorous enterprise in the open-air as well as in the Hall all through the summer, and would be glad of personal help, tracts, illustrated papers, &c., which will in any way aid in the instruction of the poor and ignorant. His address is, 20, Merrick-square, Newington, S.E.

THE GOSPEL IN SOUTH AFRICA.—We have not before had so many signs of spiritual blessing, or such a good school, as during the past year; nor have we had so many requests for teachers at outlying districts, or so many open doors for the Gospel. Just now we could place out four native teachers and establish as many preaching stations, if only the means were forthcoming. We are sorry to say that each year has found us in arrears; we are now needing over one hundred pounds to meet present demands. We have, hitherto, refrained from asking the Christian public for help, but, in order that they may know the necessity of the work, they should be informed of how the Mission stands, financially, as well as of the spiritual progress amongst the people, and of the work accomplished. We pray that God will open the hearts of his stewards to see the desirability of helping us to continue in the work. We ask all who are interested in the heathen to remember us before the Lord. STEPNEY HOUSE, FOLKESTONE.—"Rheumatic fever and inflammation of the lungs—Yes! Ten weeks of it, ma'am, but, thank God, he gets to work for three or four hours each day now, so that's something. It is difficult to get up one's strength when you have only one room to live and sleep in—that means four of us, our two selves and our children!" This case only represents hundreds where a change of air and scene and good food would hasten restoration to health, and lessen the sorrows of the uncomplaining and patient poor. "Never well! Pining for fresh air, which we cannot afford to give her, the poor child is wasting away! The doctor says a change to the sea would work wonders! But that's it, you see: how are we to manage it?" This, too, is a case which represents, alas! unnumbered ones in the over-crowded homes of the East-end of London. To help in some small measure those who thus suffer is the object of our Convalescent Home. Although all cases cannot be received as "free patients," it is hoped that every pound collected beyond the sum necessary for furnishing will help to supply free tickets to those who are unable to afford the nominal sum of 6s. per week for a child and 8s. for an adult. We shall be thankful if friends will send us books suitable for the library.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

KILBURN HALL.

WHIT-MONDAY, as usual, was the occasion of important meetings at several branches of this Mission. At Kilburn Hall, both afternoon and evening, the meetings were more crowded and enthusiastic than ever, many well-known speakers taking part with manifest spiritual power.

After prayer and praise, including reference to the recent departure of Mr. F. Caley, of Windsor and remembrance, before the throne, of the bereaved family, Dr. McKILLIAM expounded Exodus xxiv. Moses and his companions were called up into the mountain as purged ones. Christians are often bright only by fits and starts because they see more of and rely more upon themselves and circumstances than they do with respect to God alone. The glory of God was as devouring fire to those afar off, but not so to those in the place of nearness to Him. Believers now, like Moses and Joshua, can approach and "eat bread" in the Divine presence, with confidence, because of the blood-besprinkled throne.

Rev. J. HUDSON TAYLOR said that believers often think of what Christ is to them, seldom of what they are to Him; but if He be in our hearts He cannot be hid. Mr. Taylor referred to the fact that an address he gave on a previous Bank Holiday at Kilburn had led to one giving himself to the work in China, where the Lord was using him to the present day; and alluded to the great need for more labourers in the Gospel there, especially teachers for the native converts. It would be well for each saved one to ask whether he or she were the right man or woman in the right place in remaining in England when help is so urgently needed in China.

Mr. T. SHULDHAM HENRY read John viii. 12; Matt. v. 14; 2 Cor. iii. 18; and pointed out that Moses when off the Mount reflected God's glory in the midst of darkness. The child of God should be as a lighthouse to warn sinners of the rocks ahead. Let us see to the taking away of the veils from our mirrors and the making them bright for the reflection of our blessed Lord.

After an adjournment for tea, the meeting was resumed about seven o'clock, and after a few words from Mr. RUSSELL HURDITCH on Christian work, Mr. MARSACK DAY read Rev. xxii. 1; John vii. 37, 38; Psa. cv. 41 and xlvi. 4; and Gen. ii. 10. A river is the emblem of God's divine fulness for our blessing, and the four heads thereof show his universal love as running (1) through the golden land; (2) through the black or dark country; (3) towards the sunrising, (4) and as a great river. Rivers are appreciated most in the wilderness. They do not trickle, but gush out; and though the courses be polluted with sin, the source is pure.

Mr. CRAVEN referred to Gen. xxxv. 4, 10, as teaching that the joy of the Lord is in his people, who will not lack any good thing if they look to Him. Mr. GEORGE HUCKLESBY read Ezek. xlvi. 9, 10; xli. 7; xlvii. 1. "The Prince in the midst" is a blessed assurance to the believer that the Lord is always with him. The "enlarging and winding about" of a spiral staircase of the Temple was "still upward," and it is a privilege of the believer to experience upward growth as well as deeper knowledge of the things of God. The river comes from the Temple of God by the south side, opposite to judgment. The believer is made to experience the depths of God's waters, and to go through them, not merely look into them.

Mr. HERBERT R. FRANCIS read Deut. xxxiii. 12. The Christian must be lowly in order to receive the blessing; and to have the mind of Christ we must let in the love of Christ. Mr. JOHN E. JACK said that it was desirable to take away with them the fulness of the feast they had enjoyed there that day, and to refresh others, seeking grace to wake up and live out the truth. Mr. WILKINSON advocated interest in other spheres of work than our own, and gave several illustrations of such sympathy. He made touching allusion to work amongst the Jews, and the spread of the Gospel amongst their children.

BIGNOLD HALL.

In the afternoon Mr. CHARLES INGLIS inferred from Phil. iv. the need of power in life. We know enough: what we need is power to put our knowledge into practice. Dr. LASERON referred to Ezek. iii. Power comes only through the word. Mr. E. H. GLENNY read part of John xii. The secret of power is an indwelling Christ. Mr. JOHN McCALL read part of Phil. iv., and emphasised the verse "The peace of God shall guard your hearts and thoughts." This is the result of power—a complete trust in and a ready obedience to God.

In the evening addresses were given by Mr. G. Soltau, Mr. E. H. Glenny, Mr. Wm. Grove, Mr. F. C. Spurr, &c.

SWINDON.

On the same day full and enthusiastic meetings were held at the Central Hall, Swindon, tea being provided for large numbers at three sittings. Messrs. Brewster and Hind, who are at present in Swindon with their large Bible-carriage, took part in the meetings. On the previous Lord's day they held services. During the factory dinner hour, in the open-air, between 1600 and 2000 men were addressed on several occasions. This work progresses very happily, with many inquirers from week to week, and additions to the Church of the First-born written in heaven.

The annual general meeting of workers and friends of this Mission is fixed for Thursday, June 14, at the Town Hall, High-street, Kensington, W., at 3.30 and 7. The speakers include the Hon. A. Kinnaird, Drs. Donald Fraser and Mackay, Messrs. T. A. Denny, J. E. Mathieson, Reginald Radcliffe, J. Hudson Taylor, Henry Varley, and Frank H. White.

TEN DAYS' MISSION AT DORKING.

A TEN days' Mission has been held here by Rev. W. Haslam and his excellent wife. The many prayers which were offered previously have been abundantly answered. Although my church is not well situated for the population, and the weather was cold, wet, and hazy, until the last days, the people gathered in large numbers to the services; day by day we could see the attendance increasing.

For a time there was a shyness about acknowledging the blessing received; but at our Praise and Testimony Meeting many confessed that they had obtained great benefit, others went away tearfully, saying, "I was burning to speak, but was afraid; but the Lord has done great things for me."

Mrs. Haslam's afternoon meetings for women were specially blessed; many testified to the glory of God, that they had been lifted out of self into Christ.

The special feature of the Mission, I think, was the revival of Christians who for years have known what reconciliation with God is; but who now know not only the gift, but the Giver, and are determined to cease from self-effort and to trust an indwelling, risen Christ "to work in them to will and to do of his good pleasure." "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," is the experience and testimony of many. The lambs of the flock, too, have been fed. One little girl of six years sent this message to Mr. Haslam: "Please to accept my thanks for making it all so plain."

There was a large "Men's Meeting" on Sunday afternoon. The number of men in this place, where the other sex greatly preponderate, was very striking at all the meetings.

With a grateful heart to the instruments and above all to the Lord Himself,

I am, yours faithfully,

Vicarage, St. Paul's, Dorking. H. C. STURDY.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS AT THE CAPE

ON Wednesday afternoon, May 16, a drawing-room meeting was held at Bournemouth to hear from Mrs. Osborn, who has recently returned from Cape Town, some account of her interesting and useful work among the soldiers and sailors there.

A well-known Christian veteran, Major Rowlandson, presided, and in introducing Mrs. Osborn briefly sketched the history of the Cape, and his own experiences there and in India.

Mrs. OSBORN said that she was led to go to the Cape in consequence of a letter which appeared in Word and Work from a Christian soldier, who, passing through Cape Town to Natal, had observed the want of a Soldiers' Home. On her arrival she found only two Christian soldiers, with whose assistance she formed a Bible-class and established a Gospel Temperance Meeting. Then a house was taken for a "Home," in which classes were formed for music, reading, writing, &c. Another Home was subsequently established at Wynberg. Our space does not admit of our entering into the details of the Evangelistic and Gospel Temperance work, which has resulted in many conversions, and in exercising a most salutary influence on both soldiers and sailors. Mrs. Osborn has returned to recruit her health, and two other ladies have gone out to carry on the work. There is, however, need of more labourers, and many ladies who, having no special object before them at home, almost question whether life is worth living, might find at the Cape and in many other localities abroad a sphere of usefulness wherein they would make the happy discovery that they were necessary to those around them. The Homes at the Cape are not self-supporting, and those who cannot render personal service are, happily, not excluded from sharing in the blessedness of being helpers in the war.

Mr. LARKINS gave his testimony to the interest and value of work among soldiers, illustrated by his own experiences in India

Miss Sprainger, in whose drawing-room the meeting was held, has made a model of the Tabernacle for the Soldiers' Home at Cape Town.

Mrs. Osborn writes:—What I am most anxious to do is to provide a Mission-house in which to hold meetings for sailors and working men. The little Sailors' Rest is not fitted nor intended for this purpose, as at present we have no place for meetings. The Mission-house would also provide lodgings for the workers. It is most important they should reside at the centre of work, as in Cape Town no lady can walk through the streets after dark unattended.

Miss McCallum lives at the Soldiers' Home and now I want those who go to work among sailors and working men to have a centre for their work, and where they can reside.

I did not allude to another great need—that of a work similar to the Bridge of Hope work. Nothing is done in this way in the town, and there are streets which are sunk in sin, one in the very centre of the town, the name of which respectable people are ashamed to mention.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending June 2:—May 27, Psa. cxxii. 1-9; May 28, Psa. cxxiii. 1-4; May 29, Psa. cxxiv. 1-8; May 30, Psa. cxxv. 1-5; May 31, Psa. cxxx. 1-8; June 1, Jer. ii. 1-13; June 2, Jer. iii. 14-25.

MADRID.—On Easter Sunday we had the privilege of receiving several new members and administering the Lord's Supper to more than six communicants. Our Easter services attracted some new hearers and the improved number of auditors is keeping up. One of the agencies which is working without much noise but which is doing as good work as any is the Sunday-school. The quiet influence on the children will one day show its fruit. We are especially grateful to the Foreign Sunday-school Association of the United States of America for all they are doing in making the Sunday-schools attractive to the children by grants of books, maps, and little pamphlets, &c. Our Sunday-school paper, El Amigo de la Infancia, we are glad to be able to say, is finding its way slowly but gradually also into other than Evangelical families of Spaniards. FRITZ FLIEDNER.

THE FISHERIES EXHIBITION.

'E trust all Christians who visit the remarkably complete and varied representation he fishing industries of the world, now open Kensington, will not fail to examine the stand he Thames Church Mission. It will be id in the Eastern Arcade, near the main ance to the Exhibition. Apart from the llent and attractive display, both artistic and ary, illustrating the work of the Mission, as an additional claim to special attention; the only effort in connection with the Exhi- on to advance distinctly Christian work ng the fishermen who ply their perilous ipation around our coasts.

he Religious Tract Society and The British Foreign Bible Society are kindly co- rating with the Mission, the latter body having nted a copy of the Scriptures in the different guages to every fisherman engaged at the ibition. The Mission, through the kindness arious friends, also provides a library in the n specially allotted to fishermen.

graphically written descriptive sketch of work of the Mission, from the pen of Annie le, and profusely illustrated, appears in the part of The Girls' Own Paper.

ORPHAN HOMES OF SCOTLAND.

IR,—The 98 boys sent to Canada on April 4 arrived safe and well; letters to hand tell us 57 of that number had been placed out, and re another fortnight had passed they ex- ted all would be settled. We are sending second band of children to Canada on the 31st by the ss. Buenos Ayrean, of the Allan Line. vill consist of from 60 to 70 girls and little s from our Homes, and from 20 to 30 from nburgh and other places, making in all ut 100 children. There are about 15 of the nber we intend sending, still to pay for, ch, at £10 for passage and outfit of each, is 0 yet required before the day of sailing. s. Quarrier and myself intend going with the ty this time. Mr. R. H. Hunter will take rge of the work in my absence.

The workers in the various Homes will, I feel e, do all they can to lighten the burdens of the k. The supplies (£25 a-day) for our large ily that we leave behind, and which will be easing, we cast on the Lord; we feel sure children who have generously helped in the t will not forget the needs of the children ing our absence, and others will be raised up elp, so that we feel easy in going forth again h another rescued band. Since the last party , about fifty new cases have been added to our nbers; now we have over 400 in the Homes, l applications from all parts of the country being made. We are anxious to have three houses at Bridge of Weir to replace the an-road Homes, which we are obliged to e. The cost of each of these would be £1500. some who have the means to give this would a fitting memorial of a departed one, and ld perpetuate their memory by helping many dy little ones to a better and happier life. t of the eleven houses at the Bridge of Weir mes ten are already occupied, and these litional ones are for the emigration scheme.

MESSAGE FROM THE WEST.—My dear Sir,—y I express, through your columns, my personal titude to those friends who have sent THE RISTIAN to this remote point? The different ies received have been messengers of Christian th to many. A file has been placed in our ading-room. They have been sent as mis- naries to a distance of a hundred and forty es beyond this place to the cattle ranches. ey have been scattered among private families re there is little or no religious reading. They e cheered and helped the sick. In every tance have they been welcome and of service. hank most heartily all those Christian friends o have had the goodness to send to this remote mmunity such valuable religious influences.—

RICHARD WEAVER AT PONTYPRIDD.

ON Sunday week Richard Weaver held services at Pontypridd. It had been intended that the meetings should be in the open air, but the weather proved unpropitious, and the Tabernacle was, by the liberality of Rev. Dr. Roberts and his church placed, at the disposal of Mr. Weaver. The afternoon meeting was exceedingly thronged, and the evangelist was full of the old stirring vitality which once imparted such wonderful spiritual halo to his work.

Mr. Weaver does not pretend to philosophic treatment of text or exceptional theological grasp. His one aim appears to be to rouse the auditory into sympathy with Christian truth. To what extent he succeeded time must tell, but of this there can be no question: he is an earnest Christian man, anxious to do good effectively and permanently, and in English districts, amongst the nation across the border of which he forms a part, this end is likely to be realised. Mr. Richard Cory, Cardiff, presided over the afternoon meeting; as usual, his presence was welcomed at Pontypridd, and his utterances listened to with pleasure and profit. Last week Mr. Weaver was engaged in a series of Rhondda Gospel Meetings. All interested in evangelical work wish him the success which he so richly deserves and unselfishly seeks.—Western News.

OUR BLUE JACKETS.

DEAR SIR,—The ships of H.M.'s Reserve Squadron, "Lord Warden," "Hercules," "Warrior," "Repulse," "Hector," "Valiant," and "Defence," are at Portsmouth and Plymouth, preparing for their annual cruise. It has been my privilege to visit each of those ships, and the next fortnight or three weeks will be a busy time with me. Gospel temperance work is in active operation on board each one of them.

A conference of officers and men was held the other day at the Sailors' Rest, Portsmouth, and it was unanimously resolved that earnest work should be carried on among the coastguardsmen who will shortly be embarked. Temperance meetings and Bible and prayer-meetings were agreed to, ten men promising to get as many as possible to sign the temperance pledge, and also to look up ten Christian men, and to furnish me with their names and addresses, that I may be able to set them to active work for Christ on their distant stations. I shall give Gospel Temperance addresses on board all or most of these ships; I have already commenced on board the "Lord Warden" and "Warrior."

A petty officer of the "Lord Warden" suggested that each ship should carry a box of nice Gospel and Temperance books, tracts, or leaflets, illustrated if possible, to give away among the coastguardsmen. Will your readers help me by sending copies of "Sunday at Home," "Leisure Hour," "British Workman," "Band of Hope Review," "Cottager and Artisan," and any good Gospel or Temperance publications for these ships? It is the one opportunity in the year which we have of reaching the coastguards in a body, as they are out for training. Numbers come from poor Ireland, and would carry the Gospel seed back there. Parcels will be gratefully received if sent carriage-paid addressed to me at the Sailors' Rest, Portsmouth, for the "Lord Warden," "Hercules," "Warrior," "Repulse," "Hector;" and to the Sailors' Rest, Devonport, for the "Valiant" and "Defence."

I need not say that old reports and old books are of no use, while bright, attractive illustrated books are thoroughly appreciated. I am always grateful to friends who will send copies of The Graphic, Illustrated News, &c., for our reading-rooms at the various Sailors' Rests.—Yours most truly, AGNES E. WESTON.

CHURCH ARMY, WESTMINSTER. — Workers are needed to deal with the anxious every evening at the Portcullis Hall, Westminster. Rev. W. Carlile will gladly welcome any helpers.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

THE annual gathering of the supporters of this Mission was held last week at Exeter Hall, under the presidency of Rev. Geo. Everard. The lower hall was densely crowded, many young people being present. After devotional exercises, Mr. S. D. Rickards made a statement as to the work of the Mission. He said there were a great many agencies employed by the Mission, and special services were given for young people, which were sprightly, lively, healthful, and not too long. They had a Scripture Union, in which there were 170,000 members all over the world. The Scripture Union cards and leaflets were printed in twenty different languages—three of them being Indian languages, viz., Hindi, Hindustani, and Oriya (for Orissa.) In India adults, as well as the young folks, eagerly sought the publications of the Mission, which was effecting a great amount of good in our Indian empire.

The CHAIRMAN said there could be no work upon which their Divine Master looked with greater favour than that of the Mission, which endeavoured to lead the young into the paths of virtue and duty. Teaching the young about the Word of God should be the first point observed by those engaged in this Mission.

Hon. W. TALBOT RICE, of Christ Church, Oxford, said there was great need for work like that of this Mission in some of the public schools. During the time he was at Eton he had never heard the clear Gospel preached. He had asked those who had been respectively at Winchester, Clifton, Marlborough, and Wellington schools, and he got the same answer from them all—that personal religion was not taught in them. In the great public schools boys were taught morality, how to be respectable, and to do their best not to swear, but they were not taught personal religion. Hence, at many of our public schools morality was very low indeed, and if people were in them for a week they would be shocked at what they witnessed. The young should be taught the Scriptures, for at Oxford every second student they met had a different opinion and theory on religion.

Dr. H. SINCLAIR PATERSON was of opinion that those who preached to the young ought to be most hopeful, because it was sometimes difficult to reach the hearts of old people whom Christ had not reached in their childhood. But there was nothing more emotional in the world than the hearts of little children. Rev. W. S. STANDEN, Mr. E. ARROWSMITH and Mr. GEORGE BANASTER addressed the meeting.

REVIVAL IN FERRYDEN. — This interesting fishing village, on the opposite bank from Montrose of the river Southesk, is at present the scene of a remarkable awakening. A large number have been brought to Christ. The whole village seems moved. The villagers have the strong emotional feeling common to fisher-folks, and pass through deeper sorrow and more abundant joy than is generally seen in anxious ones elsewhere. Montrose is also sharing in the blessing.

C. I.

PUERTO, SANTA MARIA, SPAIN.—Mr. Joseph Viliesid writes in the last number of Pastor Fliedner's "Quarterly": Since the death of Miss Ross this Mission has been conducted by my friend D. Rafael Blanes and myself. Ever since the establishment of that work, we have been carrying on the services regularly once a week; but at the death of our sister in Christ not only the work, but the responsibility also devolved on us. The weekly service is conducted alternately by us, but the Sunday one is held by the teacher of my school at Jerez. The attendance is very gratifying; as a general rule the place is comfortably full. Several persons have been awakened, and the Word has been as manna to their souls. The schools have an average attendance of over a hundred and fifty children, and are taught by three young women trained by Miss Ross. I am sorry to say that we have no schoolmaster for the boys; we cannot as yet clearly see our way towards engaging one as our funds are not so very abundant, still we can raise our Ebenezer, and say: "Hitherto the Lord has helped us; and, indeed, far beyond our expectations." For while our lamented friend closed her two last years' accounts with a deficit of thirty and forty pounds, we were able to show a surplus.

WORKERS AT THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

THE unusually large company that gathered into Miss Macpherson's Upper-room on Wednesday evening, 17th inst., seemed to betoken a good meeting; and so it proved. Mr. Radcliffe having specially come up to town to meet with the workers in and about the "Highway," it was natural and fitting that our sailor friends should have the most of the time, though the landsmen and the heathen were not forgotten, either in the speaking or in the praying.

First to claim our interested attention was Miss CHILDS, who had a very encouraging report to bring before us of the work at the "Welcome Home." Not a night passed, she said, without some wanderer being brought back to God. Those who had themselves tasted of the heavenly gift were now seeking to share it with their fellow-seamen. It was pleasant to hear from Miss Childs that drunkenness had much diminished in Ratcliff Highway, though she was constrained to add that it was not a particularly sober place yet. She asked the help of Christian ladies in writing letters to seamen when abroad, and of the public generally in founding other "Rests" and "Welcome Homes" in ports at present unprovided with them. Mr. George Lawrence, late of Barcelona, was about to open a "Welcome Home" at Cardiff.

Then followed some stirring words from Mr. RADCLIFFE. Having expressed his delight at seeing the transformation in the fitting up of "The Fo'csle," at the Ratcliff Welcome Home, he said that as we could not divide Miss Childs into fifty pieces to be distributed among the ports around Britain, we must pray the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth other labourers for this service. He reported the opening of a Strangers' Rest at Hull, through which during the summer months some 3000 emigrants are passing every week. Some earnest Christian working men there were trying with good success, notwithstanding the difficulties of language, to preach the Gospel to those Swedish and other foreign friends who sojourned in their town on the way to Liverpool and the far west. Mr. Radcliffe proceeded, with his own intense and rugged eloquence, to exhort the workers not to confine their sympathies and efforts to those at home, but to "grip" in their prayers the far-off lands of China, India, Africa, and the uttermost parts of the earth. We have as yet done comparatively nothing to carry the Gospel to those lands. We must mix up our Christianity with all our commercial transactions abroad, our shipping, our railways, our emigration. This emigration is only in its infancy; it is to become a mighty thing; let us be no more children in the Lord's work, but let us rise up to the mighty opportunities we have of spreading the Gospel to the ends of the world.

Miss HEDENSTROM gave some brief details of the good work that goes on among the seamen at the Scandinavian Home in Leman-street, and invited friends to pay her a visit now and then. Then came a characteristic little address from Mr. T. A. DENNY to the forty young lads who were ranged in the accustomed corner, and who were to sail in the Sarmatian from Liverpool for Canada on the following day. He exhorted them to be honest and truthful, to stick to their temperance pledge, and to eschew bad companions. When he put the question, "Are you all going to give your hearts to the Lord?" it seemed as if every youthful voice responded with a firm and ready "Yes, sir."

Miss MACPHERSON further awakened our sympathy by reciting in brief the life histories of several of them; may their future be all the brighter by contrast with the shadowy and sorrowful past. The first party of sixty-three boys, who sailed on the 11th April, under Mr. Thom's care, safely reached their destination, after a rough but otherwise favourable voyage. In June a third band goes out, consisting of little girls only. Friends will be welcomed at the Hackney Training Home any day but Saturday.

Before the very interesting meeting broke up we were favoured with some most practical exhortations from Rev. J. Hudson Taylor on the words of the Lord, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink." We must reserve till next week some notes of the work carried on at the Bridge of Hope by Miss Steer, referred to by Miss Macpherson.

YOUNG ABSTAINERS AT EXETER HALL.

ONE of the most attractive and interesting of the May meetings was that which gathered into the lower Exeter Hall last Saturday afternoon. The meeting consisted of members and sympathisers of the Young Abstainers' Union, who had come to celebrate another anniversary of their interesting society.

After praise, reading of the Scriptures and prayer, Mr. HUGH MATHESON, Hon. Treasurer, submitted the yearly budget, which showed an expenditure of about £500, with a small balance in hand. The report of the year's work being in print was taken as read. It is a most encouraging record, and we would commend the friends of temperance among the young to send for a copy to the offices of the Union, 23, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

Miss ANDREWS, Central Secretary, whom Mr. Blackwood described as "the mainspring of the clock," made a bright, homely little speech, in which she expressed her special delight at seeing so many of the younger members present. She always contended, when visiting the branch meetings, that nowhere could be found happier-looking young folks than these "C" members of the "Y.A.U."

Mr. BLACKWOOD said the Society had covered the land with a network of associations, with a total membership of 7000. After an existence of only three years he thought this was matter for much thankfulness. The membership had doubled during the past year. If this rate of increase could be maintained all the young people in the land would be "swallowed up" by the end of the century. It was found that the Bands of Hope did not practically reach the children in the families of the middle and upper classes of society; this union was intended to be "the missing link" between these Bands of Hope and the various adult organisations. The Chairman went on to describe the many sore temptations that meet young people from the drinking customs of society. He besought those before him to enrol themselves at once on the safe side.

Mrs. REANEY gave her "dear young friends" the exhortation not to be weary in well-doing. But, there must be well-being before there could be well-doing. From this starting-point she made a very touching and earnest appeal to the children to give their hearts fully to the Lord, that they might go out and work for Him.

Rev. E. A. STUART, addressing the younger portion of his audience, gave them the following four mottoes: "fight shy" of every form of sin, "keep nigh" to God, "aim high" in any work undertaken, and, lastly, "pray and try."

Dr. NORMAN KERR, in a brief and cogent speech, dealt with the physical aspect of the question, which, he remarked, was the very alphabet of it. After Mr. Johnson, a coloured brother, had sung in his native dialect a verse of the hymn, "Come to Jesus just now," Dr. SINCLAIR PATERSON said he had addressed, in the Board schools of London, 25,000 children on the physiological action of alcohol. Down in Ratcliff-highway, in one school he had visited, about half of the children were wearing the blue ribbon, and some two-thirds of them declared they were members of a Band of Hope. "The poor neglected upper classes" had long been outside these educating influences, but this society was now supplying the lack.

BOXES OF TRACTS AT HOTELS.—A correspondent suggests that a box, to contain a supply of suitable and attractively-prepared Gospel tracts, should be placed in a prominent position in all our hotels. Much good is believed to have resulted from the placing of similar boxes at railway stations.

HOW A YOUNG LIFE WAS SAVED.

WITH much regret we learn that "Dr. Barnardo's Homes," which, as our readers know, contain over 1200 poor children, are feeling keenly the lack of funds just now. The following record, taken from a recent number of Night and Day, will, we trust, suggest to many the blessedness of helping such an invaluable work. The address of the Homes, we may add, is 18 Stepney-causeway, London, E.:—

"Some time ago Mr. George Holland, the veteran superintendent of the George-yard Ragged School, brought under my notice the case of a girl whom he was anxious to save. She was thirteen and a half years of age, and had lived all that time in the worst company in the lodging-houses. It was feared that the poor girl had become seriously contaminated in mind by those with whom she lived. She had no father or mother, or any person who seemed to care for her, although a woman in whose company she had once been had begged about the country with this girl until she was nine or ten years of age. Then they lived in the lodging-houses hard by George-yard, during which time the girl attended Mr. Holland's day-school. Occasionally, when the woman with whom she lodged disappeared, Mr. Holland kindly gave the child a night's lodging in his shelter. This state of things went on for some years, until at length it was seen that, unless something was done to take her right out of the place where she was, she must go, as many of her age had gone, to utter ruin.

"She presented herself at one of our free teas with a note from Mr. Holland to that effect. I was perfectly bewildered. I did not know how we should manage to assist such a girl. On glance at her was enough to prove that we dare not send her to Ilford; nor could I venture to send her from my door, all homeless, friendless and defenceless as she was. If ever a poor child (for she was still but a child) demanded Christian pity and help she did. So I sent her to our town receiving house in the Bow-road, and there employed her in house-work for some months. She had all kinds of work to do, and was kept hard at it, and so busy, that she had but little time for mischief.

"At first all the accounts I received about E. D. were most unfavourable. She was a liar, I was told, and hopelessly dishonest; no drawer could be left open, no cupboard be left unlocked, but her pilfering fingers would extract from within something not intended for her. Her language, too, was at times horrible. Of course she was reproved, and various means taken to show her the sinfulness of her conduct, and at length there began to be a change, very gradual but none the less very real.

"Soon after this a very godly person came to preside over that house, who had had much experience with older girls, and whose manner was firm but loving. Her influence over E. D. was very marked. In a little while the lion had become a lamb, softened, subdued, respectful, anxiously struggling to be truthful; indeed, the girl seemed in many respects changed for the better. Her future was, however, still a very anxious matter with me. She was now fifteen and a half years, and had not grown much, while a peculiar deformity of her neck made it impossible to hope she would ever get into respectable service. To send her out to a little place in the East-end of London might be her ruin, for one could not but fear that she would after all, soon get back among the people with whom so much of her early life had been spent.

"It was at this time that an opening occurred to send her with some others to South Africa, and with great delight she accepted my offer to go as general servant in a clergyman's family out there. I received letters from her, written during the voyage and after her arrival, which were very satisfactory. The thought of what this girl was rescued from, of the kind Christian home, in a clergyman's family, to which she has gone in South Africa, and of the future life which, under the blessing of God, she may hope to enjoy, is enough to fill any of those who have had the least share in her rescue and training with unspeakable gratitude to God."

A HOLIDAY MISSIONARY BREAKFAST.

THE fifth annual missionary breakfast in connection with the Talbot Tabernacle Congregation was held on Whit-Monday, at the Cornwall Hall, Notting-hill. Although proceedings commenced at 8.30 a.m., the hall was filled with guests, and the sight of so many young people assembling at such an early hour on a holiday morning was most gladdening.

Breakfast being concluded, the Scriptures were read and prayer offered by Mr. E. G. Hodge, Curate of St. Matthew's. The President, Mr. Frank White, then gave a few words of loving welcome, and briefly explained the object of the meeting, which he said was to fan the flame of missionary zeal in their midst. He called upon Mr. FILMER SULIVAN, the new Vicar of St. Matthew's, to address the meeting, which he did in a speech of remarkable simplicity and sweetness. Prayer was offered by Mr. Lane for several missionaries who had gone out from the Congregation; four to China, one to India, and one to Jamaica.

Mr. NORRIS, of Calcutta, followed, giving a graphic sketch of various missionary agencies with which he had been personally associated in India. His remarks were greatly encouraging, though he earnestly deplored the fatal influence which a Roman Catholic Viceroy was exerting in favour of a false religion, and that in a country ruled by a Protestant Queen. The sight of Her Majesty's representative carrying a wax candle in a procession of the "Corpus Christi" cannot certainly be a very edifying spectacle to our heathen fellow-subjects.

Mr. J. TURNER, who has been labouring for seven years in China, followed with a most touching and telling appeal for help, both in money and missionaries, for that great country; and then, with more praise and prayer, this most interesting meeting was brought to a close by Mr. White expressing the hope that after what they had heard many would give themselves more heartily than ever to Gospel work, both abroad and at home.

Offerings in money were afterwards received, and as all the provisions for the breakfast were given, some substantial financial results may be expected. Of this we are sure, much spiritual help must have been realised, and we can only hope and pray that such "Holiday Breakfasts" may multiply, and that the Evangelical Churches of our land may become more and more intensely missionary in their aims and efforts as the coming of the Lord draws near.

The world is very evil,
The times are waxing late;
Be patient and keep vigil,
The King is at the gate.

A SEVEN DAYS' MISSION has been concluded in this small country parish; population under 400. It was conducted by Rev. A. Whitmarsh, Vicar of Kempston, Bedford. Our congregations increased day by day, and there was evidently a great eagerness to listen to the Word of life spoken so eloquently and earnestly by the Mission preacher. I have great reason to hope and believe that the Holy Spirit has been carrying that word to many hearts. Some were there at each service who had not been known to enter a place of worship for ten or twenty years.—Yours very faithfully,

ROBERT TOMKINSON, Rector.

Chipping Warden Rectory,

BEN HOGAN IN OMAHA, U.S.—Our city is moved mightily. Ben Hogan came to us almost unannounced, and without any intention of beginning a revival work. But wishing to speak to his old acquaintances in crime, the opera-house was secured for him, and was packed full with eager listeners. When he had once spoken he must go on. The largest church in the city was thrown open to him, and nightly it is crowded to its utmost capacity. There have already been many conversions, and the meetings are increasing in interest and power. Mr. Hogan's directness and intensity of style are well known in Chicago. They are just the thing for our restless, crime-laden population. If the Lord but spare his health, the indications are that, under the Spirit's blessing, our wicked city will be moved as it has never been moved before.—Chicago Record.

ANOTHER GAP IN THE RANKS.

FREDERICK G. CALEY.

A FRIEND sends us an interesting account of the career and death of Mr. F. G. Caley, of Windsor, well known to many as a successful man of business and devoted Christian worker. Our correspondent says:—

On Wednesday, May 9, Frederick G. Caley, one of our most worthy townsmen, passed joyfully into the presence of the Master whom he had long loved and served. After he was converted, the salvation of souls became his great aim and object in life. Beginning with his own family, to whom he was the most loving and tender husband and father, he rested not till he saw them enter one by one into the kingdom of grace. To his joy he had in them earnest fellow-workers in the heavenly vineyard ere he entered into rest. Though as the head of a first-class business as mercer to the Queen and Royal Family, &c., he must have had many harassing and worrying cares, still he honoured God in the midst of these.

He delighted to labour especially amongst the poor. Many a night, though worn out with business and preaching, he would be found at the side of the dying, and the joy of seeing heavenly light dawn upon the hitherto sin-blinded soul was all the reward he needed.

For several years past Mr. Caley's health had been very unsatisfactory, and his medical man warned him that he must take rest; but work he must. In the open air, in private, in travelling, everywhere, he literally bought up golden opportunities. As an instance of this, on the occasion of a travelling menagerie stopping for a couple of nights in the town, he and several like-minded saw in this at once an opening for fresh work; they visited the company, held services, and several were saved. On the occasion of Messrs. Moody and Sankey being refused permission to address the Eton boys on the College grounds, he was permitted to have them proclaim the glad news of the Gospel in his own garden, to as many as it could hold.

As death drew near, his children spoke of how he would meet them when they were called to follow, and he answered, "Yes, but I believe the Lord Himself comes to meet his redeemed ones. I shall know it this afternoon." Death was welcomed as the entrance into everlasting life. About two minutes before the close he quietly said, "I think I'm going," a heavenly light seemed to shine upon his face. He closed his eyes, and without a sigh or struggle he fell asleep in Jesus.

As might be expected, his funeral was largely attended. At the request of the bereaved family, a Gospel address was delivered to the concourse gathered around the grave, that if possible the burial of their precious dead might be the occasion of life to some.

THE UNITED KINGDOM BENEFICENT ASSOCIATION, 4, Berners-street, London, W., grants small but welcome annuities to those who have passed the best part of their lives in affluence, but who from no fault of their own are now destitute and invalided, in many cases hopelessly so. 386 candidates are on the list for election in July next, but there are only sufficient funds to provide for 16 of them. We cordially commend the institution to the charitable public.

HYDE PARK SERVICES.—Our services are closed for another season at the Metropolitan Music Hall. For seven months we have had crowded meetings, and God has blessed his own Word to many souls. On Sunday week we had our opening meeting in the Park. Favoured by splendid weather, we began our tenth year of services, and were rejoiced to notice the close attention paid to the same Gospel which has been preached there so long. Brethren known to us, or accredited evangelists, will be welcomed to take part in our Park meetings, which from the 1st of June will be held every Wednesday and Friday at 8 and Sundays at 6. If any friends to whom our work is known are able to help us pecuniarily I shall be thankful, as the last month's rent of large Music Hall has not yet been met. CHAS. COOK.

A CARELESS AGE.

"In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when He cometh shall find so doing."—MATT. xxiv. 44—46.

THE long, long years of vice and wrong,
When superstition black as night
Made slaves alike of weak and strong,
Have passed for ever from our sight.

Gone are the dark old days, and yet,
Although the Gospel light shines clear,
Men heed it not, and quite forget
That they are only servants here:

Servants entrusted from on high
With sacred work—each man his own—
And yet who put their duties by,
And live for self, and self alone.

And though the Lord Himself has said
That He will come again with power
When men expect not, they are dead
To all the signs of that dread hour.

When countries into war are hurled,
When tempests stir the mighty deep,
When great disasters shock the world,
They wake not from their foolish sleep;

But, lulled by sin into a dream,
All heedlessly they drift along
In Pleasure's ways, until they seem
To reach the deeper depths of wrong.

And sceptics scoff, and waverers fall,
Deeming that Christ will never come;
While those who hold the truth through all
Too oft are listless, if not dumb.

Oh, if this thing could only be!—
That many a careless heart to-day
Might wake to serve God faithfully,
And do Christ's bidding—"Watch and pray;"

That when He comes again in might—
The Father's well-beloved Son—
They might be faithful in his sight,
And hear his sweet "Well done! Well done!"

UNION HALL MISSION.

BANK HOLIDAY was an occasion of much spiritual blessing in connection with this Mission. A number of Christian friends assembled at Union Hall in the morning for praise, prayer, and addresses. A most refreshing and helpful season was thus spent. In the afternoon we gathered for an open-air service in Regent's-park, many friends coming from a distance to help in this important work. Two hours were spent in testifying the Gospel of the grace of God to the perishing. Although at times the rain fell heavily, a large company heard the Word of Life.

After tea quite a hundred Christians went forth into the crowded thoroughfares of Lisson-grove, and Edgware-road; hundreds were thus met with the Word of God and invited to the Hall. The hall being well filled, we had several short addresses. A number of young believers afterwards bore testimony to God's saving grace in their souls. Several spoke of the Lord's goodness to them through the different tent meetings which have been held in connection with this Mission. ROBERT BILKE.

EVANGELISATION IN CORSICA.—The effort which have been made to send the Gospel to the peasantry and native inhabitants of Corsica are bearing fruit. The Committee have now two agents labouring in the interior of the island, Corte forming their base of operations for the time being. The Rev. Matteo Prochet, of Genoa, has kindly undertaken the direction of this work. Mr. Donald Matheson is the treasurer. Communications should be addressed to Mr. J. C. Berger, Sion House, Lower Clapton, London, E. The Committee earnestly invite those interested in the evangelisation of Corsica to give this Mission a place in their intercessions at the throne of grace.

MRS. HILTON'S CRECHE AND HOME.

LAST Monday afternoon, in the presence of a large assembly of friends, Lady Brassey formally opened the biennial bazaar on behalf of these institutions, held in Cannon-street Hotel on the first three working days of this week. Sir Thomas Brassey accompanied her ladyship, and there were also present, Rev. J. F. Kitto, of Stepney; Rev. Mr. Arbuthnot, vicar of the parish in which the Crèche is situated; the Wesleyan and Presbyterian ministers, &c. &c.

Mr. Arbuthnot having offered prayer, a number of the children from the Crèche, who were present, sweetly sang "The Story ever New." Mrs. Hilton then read an address to her ladyship describing briefly the work of the Crèche, and expressing gratitude for the deep and practical interest she had taken in its operations, both publicly and privately, since its formation. The immediate purpose of the bazaar was to extinguish a debt that rested on the Feltham Convalescent Home, opened last year, which had proved of inestimable service both for training and health purposes.

In responding, Lady Brassey said it was true she had felt deeply interested in the Crèche, because she believed that it was a thoroughly good institution, and that Mrs. Hilton, her daughters, and other friends had done their best to make it worthy of support. It was no experiment; it had taken root downward in the hearts of the people of the East-end, for whom it had effected much good, and also in the hearts of the people in the West, who had been glad to help it on. It must be a great pleasure to its founder to see the tree she had planted now bearing such fruit upward, as shown by the faces of the children around her, whose beautifully trained voices they had heard.

Sir Thomas Brassey having briefly concurred in his wife's expressions of approval, her ladyship declared the bazaar open, hinting at the same time, that those friends who were unable to be present might do worse than show their practical sympathy with the work by forwarding a cheque to Mrs. Hilton.

The arrangement of the stalls was pretty and novel, each of the twelve, ranged round the room, representing a month in the year, and displaying a basket of flowers appropriate to the month. As Sir Thomas Brassey remarked, many warm hearts and busy hands must have been in motion in order to produce the ample store of attractive articles with which the stalls were loaded. We trust, with him, that it may have been successful in forwarding the work of such an excellent institution.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—On the morning of Wednesday week, at the early hour of six, a large gathering of ladies and gentlemen was held in the lower room of Exeter Hall, the occasion being the annual breakfast and meeting of the Central Young Men's Christian Association. After breakfast, to which quite 300 ladies and gentlemen sat down, Lord Radstock delivered an address to the young men especially on consecration to God and holy living; spoke of the admirable work done by the institution during the many years he had known it. Rev. John S. Pawlyn next addressed the company, speaking of the power all young men had for usefulness, notwithstanding the fact that many of them had to move in very humble spheres in life—they could still "live for God." Rev. Marmaduke Washington also gave an address.

THE BOYS' HOME, SOUTHWARK.—Dear Sir,—Under the heading "Fires in the Metropolis" there appeared in several daily papers this morning a notice that some waste-paper here caught fire in our printing machine-room, "the flames spreading to other parts of the building" and causing "great alarm amongst the inmates." To save many kind friends unnecessary solicitude on our behalf, will you kindly allow me to explain that all the boys but a few engaged in house-work were out with me for an early bathe in the Serpentine, that the fire was entirely confined to a small corner of one room, was speedily put out with a little water, and that our total loss was a little waste-paper and the door of a cupboard?—Yours faithfully,

J. W. C. Fegan.

Notices of Books, &c.

How to Teach the Pianoforte. By Lady Benedict. 6d. Hughes, Pilgrim-street, E.C. This little manual gives many useful hints to instructors of youth.

How to Teach Plain Needlework, by Emily C. Jones (Hughes), is also a capital little handbook for teachers and mothers. It contains excellent diagrams, and the language is simple.

The A B C Church and Chapel Directory for 1883 (R. Banks, Racquet-court, E.C. 2d.) gives much ecclesiastical and cognate information relating to London and the suburbs.

A series of cards for distribution at races, fairs, &c., with characteristic designs and suitable portions of Scripture, have been prepared by Mr. W. C. Miles. They are published by Mr. W. Mack. Price 8d. per assorted packet of 100.

The Laws and Polity of the Jews. By Dr. Edersheim. The Religious Tract Society. This volume deals with the political, domestic, and social life of Israel, and throws a flood of light upon the history of that chosen race. The book abounds in illustrations of Bible truth, and should be in the hands of all Bible students.

The London Congregational Directory. 6d. Alexander & Shepheard, 21, Castle-street, Holborn, E.C. Contains a list of Congregational Ministers resident in London, corrected to the present date. The list of ministers is followed by a list of Congregational Churches, in alphabetical order, according to locality. A list of Mission Rooms and Preaching Stations connected with the churches follows, and shows, in some measure, what Evangelistic work is being carried on in connection therewith.

Natural Law in the Spiritual World. By Henry Drummond, F.R.S.E. 7s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. We have heard much of the "feeble and dissolving faith" of these times. The warning on the point was necessary. But sure we are that the tide is turning, and with a strong current. This book will help forward the healthy reaction that has set in. The "decadence of religion in the world of science" here meets its remedy. A master hand shows that there is a unity of conception in the universe, and that there are subtle and profound analogies between Nature and Evangelical religion. Modern science has ignored the supernatural, and in some cases has done this contemptuously. In this volume Professor Drummond not only asserts, but proves that Evangelical theology in its primary characteristics is both scientific and philosophical, and that, in the supernatural, natural law reigns. And it should be observed that all this is done without in any way lowering the spiritual revelations of Scripture. A scientist applies to the cardinal tenets of the Christian faith the facts of science, and, in an original and most impressive manner, finds an illustration of great Bible truths in the natural laws that have proceeded from the same Divine Mind. We are thankful for such a work. The age needed it. It is a cause of the deepest rejoicing that one who is taking his place among the naturalists of the day uses the discoveries of modern science to enforce the highest spiritual requirements.

Not For Him: The Story of a Forgotten Hero. By Emily S. Holt. 3s. 6d. J. F. Shaw & Co. The perusal of a new book from the pen of Miss Holt is, to us at least, an event and a landmark in our studies of contemporary literature. As we have said before, so we are constrained to say again, the productions of no living narrator of the past history of our nation are so eagerly anticipated, so fully enjoyed, and so reluctantly laid aside. The "forgotten hero" whose sorrowful but patient life-history is recorded in this delightful chronicle is "Edmund, Lord of Cornwall," one of England's nobility six centuries ago. We get a vivid glimpse at once of the political, social, and religious aspects of the time. Few readers of the book will say that the former times were better than these; we imagine the young lady portion of them will specially rejoice that their lot is cast in a generation that pays more heed to the voices of reason and righteousness in the settlement of certain important affairs. But human passion and human blindness when uncontrolled by an enlightened obedience to the will of God work out the same results in every age and under every social condition; so that we find abundant lessons in this picture of a bygone time for the men and women of to-day. We trust many of these will become acquainted with Miss Holt's "forgotten hero;" if they do not they will be depriving themselves of a treat of no common sort.

Wave Whispers is another series of poetical leaflets from the prolific pen of Mr. William Luff. As the title indicates, the subjects are suggested by marine objects, surroundings, and associations. The thoughts are fresh and choicely expressed, and the leaflets are well-suited for sea-side distribution. The packet, containing 100 copies of sixteen different leaflets, has been neatly got up Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling. Price 6d.

Guided Step by Step. By Ebba de Ramsay. 1s. S. W. Partridge & Co. We are glad to welcome, in this compact form, the various narratives that Madame de Ramsay has written and published from time to time of her work among the helpless children at her Swedish home. We feel sure that many who have read these delightful chapters in their detached form will be glad to renew and revive their acquaintance with our sister's excellent and most Christ-like work; while this simple and touching record of God's faithfulness and marvellous goodness ought to secure hosts of new friends for her "Cripples' Home."

Christian Ministry to the Young. By S. G. Green, D.D. Religious Tract Society. Dr. Green is eminently qualified to speak with authority on the subject of this volume, which contains the substance of six Lectures delivered before the Principal and Students of Regent's-park College, and published by their request. Long experience has made him thoroughly at home with its details, and we have, as might be expected, many invaluable suggestions, such as parents, pastors, and teachers may most profitably consider, and wisely adopt. The place of children in the congregation, the best methods of conducting Special Services for Children, preaching to children, class instruction, and general religious training, all come in for review. The author deserves hearty thanks for the freshness, earnestness, and skill which he has brought to bear upon his theme. He has rendered important service to the Church of Christ in issuing this book, at a time when it is more than ever its imperative duty to give attention to the claims of the young.

The Prophecies of the Revelation. By Dr. Seiss. Christian Herald Office, Ivy-lane. This is a cheap edition, somewhat abridged, of an American work which was originally published in three volumes at the price of three pounds. Here we have it for three shillings, a marvel of cheapness, and of intelligent, painstaking research into the revealed will of God. It is a storehouse of prophetic truth such as thoughtful students of prophecy may consult with advantage While not endorsing all the author's conclusions, or agreeing entirely with his theory of interpretation, we can yet cordially commend the work to the prayerful and earnest attention of those who desire to look closely into the solemn import of Apocalyptic truth. The book is written in a calm and reverent spirit, and adopts largely the principle of allowing Scripture to interpret itself, by comparing one part of the Word with another. We are living in times when it is of special importance that Christians should become acquainted with the sure word of prophecy. It is a matter for deep regret that so many should neglect the study of themes which occupy so large a space in the pages of inspiration, and which have so much to do with the present duty, as well as future prospects, of all true believers on Christ. The reading of Dr. Seiss's book cannot fail to awaken thought and excite inquiry, and we therefore heartily commend it to our readers.

REV. J. MOUNTAIN and his wife continue to prosecute their Gospel temperance campaign in Cape Colony. The Grahamstown Journal of March 24 reports a week's temperance conference held there organised by Mr. Mountain, and at which he acted as honorary secretary; various aspects of the question were discussed by men of standing in the community, and a healthy impetus given to the growth of a sound public opinion. Mr. Mountain, we observe, has also been defending in a Cape newspaper the use of non-alcoholic Communion wine.

GRAVESEND.—Mr. J. T. Chapman, seamen's missionary, writes that he visited a number of Italian emigrants lately and distributed portions of Scripture. When it was discovered what the book were many of them were thrown into the waters A very cordial reception was, however, accorded to Mr. Chapman on the same occasion by English and Scandinavian emigrants, who thankfully received the books offered to them. Mr. Chapman would be glad to receive suitable literature for the purposes of his Mission. His address is, British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Gravesend.

"THE CHILDREN OF OUR STREETS."

With great grief the announcement has to be made of

An absolutely empty purse, and an overdrawn Bank Account, while every day Urgent cases of homeless children demanding admission are brought to our doors.

Even the maintenance of those already in the "Homes" is a matter of much present difficulty.

The food alone required for over 1,200 Children and about 100 Adult helpers, costs little less than £50 per day.

Moreover, unless the needful amount is soon forthcoming, we shall be compelled to relinquish

The emigration of 200 children,

For whom places have already been obtained in good homesteads in Canada, and berths bespoken in vessels leaving for Quebec in June.

The need is therefore most urgent, and the Lord's people who have hitherto so kindly sympathised with the work of saving homeless and orphan children from the crime and suffering of our large cities, and from the perils of the streets, are invited to help in the present urgent and pressing crisis.

The smallest donations will be promptly acknowledged if addressed to the Treasurer, WM. FOWLER, Esq., M.P.; or to

Yours faithfully in Christ's service
among the Little Ones,

T. J. BARNARDO.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAISE.—For the success of the Sunday Closing Demonstration in Hyde-park on Whit-Monday; ask our Heavenly Father to give his guidance and blessing to all the further efforts to get the sale of intoxicating liquors stopped throughout England during the whole of the Lord's Day.——For much blessing granted during a week of Mission Service held in St. James's Church, Hereford, by the Rev. W. West.

PRAYER.—An agonised father entreats prayer for his son who has (though only a youth, and one whom he had considered a Christian until lately) fallen into the lowest depths of sin. Pray that he may be convicted, pardoned, sanctified, and saved.

PLACES.—That tracts and portions of Scripture which will be given away in Paris by a lady may be blessed of God.——For Gospel meetings in Haddington, N.B., being conducted by J. M. Scroggie.——For a blessing on open-air preaching at Banffshire Feeing Markets, May 21 to 26.——For a Mission being held in Christ Church, Southport.——For rich blessing upon a three weeks' Mission at Newhills, near Aberdeen, N.B., to be conducted by Mr. G. T. Gillingham.——For Gospel Mission at Derby to be conducted by Mr. Henry Thorne.——For God's blessing on Gospel services by Mr. Opie Rodway at Mission Room, Chalford, Sunday, 27th May.

ARMY SCRIPTURE READERS.—The annual meeting of the Army Scripture Readers and Soldiers' Friend Society was held at Exeter Hall on Wednesday last week, under the presidency of Bishop Claughton. Mr. W. A. Blake reported that 95 readers of the Society were located in the United Kingdom, Bengal, Bombay, Madras, Hongkong, Barbadoes, Egypt, Gibraltar, Malta, and Mauritius; during the past year additional readers had been appointed for Beverley, Pontefract, Shrewsbury, and Taunton. The Chairman, in a short address, said that one of the first efforts he made when he took the office he now held was to endeavour to increase the facilities and remove the obstacles in the way of Scripture readers. The duty of the chaplain was to preach the Gospel, and that of the reader was to bring persons to hear the Gospel. The work done in Egypt by the Scripture readers had been exceedingly valuable, for they had brought to many a dying soldier, who was laying down his life for his country the comfort and hope of the Gospel. The following resolution was carried by the meeting: "That having heard with devout thankfulness of the success which has crowned the labours of our Scripture readers during the past year, this meeting desires to commend this society to the generous support of all who profess and call themselves Christians, in the firm conviction that they cannot show their indebtedness to the valour and self-sacrifice of the British soldier in a better way than by seeking to promote his spiritual welfare."

THE RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.—On Thursday last the annual breakfast was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, in connection with the foreign missionary work of the Society. Mr. Hugh Matheson presided, and referred with pleasure to the great spread of Mission work in foreign countries. He stated that in China in particular the great barriers to the progress of Christianity had been broken down. Bishop Titcomb gave an encouraging account of the signs of progress of the Mission work in Rangoon, and stated that good short practical tracts which compared Christianity with Buddhism were much needed for distribution in fields where he had been labouring. M. E. Sautier gave an account of the work of the Mission in France, where he stated there was a great need of more workers to uphold the truth they held so precious. Rev. J. B. Wood, of the Church Missionary Society, in referring to the missionary work in West Africa, said that nearly the whole of the education there had been done by the missionary societies. The Bible had been translated into 401 languages spoken in the West of Africa. Dr. John Murdock said that India had a special claim upon them, as the people there were their fellow-subjects. He expressed his regret that there were not only freethought societies in India, but that two anti-Christian publications were circulated there, and a large number of writings of Mr. Bradlaugh, Mrs. Besant, Colonel Ingersoll, and other well-known freethinkers. There were, however, numerous societies and publications to counteract that evil influence. The Rev. James Gilmour, from Pekin and Mangolia; the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission; and Mr. A. N. Archibald, from Nova Scotia, also addressed the meeting, and gave interesting accounts of the work in which they had been engaged.

Mission and other Appeals.

UNION HALL MISSION.—We hope soon to begin our summer work in the Gospel tents. The blessing bestowed upon these efforts last year was both great and lasting, and we look for even greater results during the coming season. I am invited to erect tents at Fulham, Battersea, Wandsworth, Kensal-green, and Pinner, near Harrow. There are other places in and near London where these efforts might be used with undoubted success. For the effectual working of the tents in the abovementioned localities, we shall need quite £250, as our funds for the general work of the Mission are exhausted. Contributions sent direct to me will be very gratefully acknowledged.—ROBERT BILKE, 18, Victoria-road, Kilburn, N.W.

BETHNAL-GREEN FREE LIBRARY.—Her Majesty's Commissioners of Patents for Inventions have presented one thousand volumes of their publications to the Free Library, London-street, Bethnal-green, E. One of the conditions upon which the grant has been made is that the library shall be open free to the public "at all reasonable hours," and therefore it is now open daily from morning till night. As this step will involve a very considerable increase in the working expenses, the committee earnestly appeal for funds to enable them to meet this extra outlay. Contributions will be received by Mr. F. A. BEVAN, treasurer, 14, Lombard-street, E.C., or by Mr. G. F. Hilcken, librarian, at the Library.

BOARDING-HOUSE FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.—A lady, who for many years has been engaged in missionary work both at home and abroad, is anxious to start a small private boarding-house for Christian workers when needing a temporary rest or a time of preparation for work. A small sum of money is required for the start. Mrs. Norman Macleod, 20, Coates-gardens, Edinburgh, will be glad to receive any contributions kindly given for the purpose. We know the lady of whom Mrs. Norman Macleod writes, and think her scheme worthy of support, and will be glad to promote it.

"REST FROM SORROW;" OR, THE MINISTRY OF SUFFERING. By Wm. Guest, F.G.S. 3s. 6d. We are thankful to have read a book dealing reverently with the old problem of human suffering, and seeking not so much to solve it as to bring out the teaching of revelation on the uses of suffering. We do not here find mere common-places of consolation, run together like so many beads on a string, but a clear and careful exposition of "the end of the Lord" in permitting affliction, as taught in the promises, exhortations, and histories of Scripture. There is, throughout the book, a tender eloquence which makes it very pleasant to read.—The King's Highway.

carrying on the "One Tun" Ragged School Mission, Old Pye-street, Westminster. THERE ARE NOT SUFFICIENT FUNDS IN HAND TO PAY THIS MONTH'S EXPENSES.

The Twenty-sixth ANNUAL MEETING on June 5, at Six o'clock, at the School, The Earl of SHAFTESBURY presiding. About Forty young servants, formerly scholars, with excellent characters of one year and upwards, will receive the School Prize. About Twenty others are in situations, but not yet twelve months. Other operations besides the Day, Night and Sunday Schools, are Mothers' Meetings, Band of Hope, Juvenile Sabbath Band, Working Lads' Institute, with Bible and other Classes; Mid-day (Wednesday) Prayer-Meeting, Men's Sunday Afternoon Bible Class, Sunday Evening Mission Services and Prayer-Meeting. Penny Banks, Shoe Club, &c. A Bible-Woman to visit all connected with the Mission, and other efforts. "Brethren, pray for us." Mr. A. J. WOODHOUSE, Treasurer, 1, Hanover-square, W. Mrs. J. BARKER HARRISON, Hon. Sec., 78, Coleshill-street, Eaton-square, S.W. Cheques may be crossed Union Bank of London, Argyll-street, Branch.

URGENT APPEAL.—The Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for contributions in aid of the poorer patients and their families. The work of the Society is not in any way curtailed by the rebuilding of the Hospital, but is still carried on in the New Wing, and the Committee will most thankfully acknowledge the smallest gifts in money or clothing. Old coats and trousers are much needed.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY
FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.
Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.
Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.
The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.
I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY.
N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

TWO OR THREE CHRISTIAN
WORKERS of the Kingsland Missions intend (D.V.) spending their holidays (the first half of July) in village Gospel Work, and will gladly hear from Christians in the West of England where such efforts are most needed.
W. C., 79, Norfolk-road, Islington.

FIFTY POUNDS immediately wanted to start the Malta Steam Launch on her mission of mercy. She sails on Wednesday for Malta. This will cover the extra expenditure for one year.—Subscriptions may be sent to the Rev. EDWARD W. MATTHEWS, Secretary, British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Shadwell, London, E.

ZENANA AND MEDICAL MISSION Training School and Home, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—The increased number of pupils has compelled the taking of the above much larger house, and the Committee earnestly ask for funds to meet the largely increased expenses. Treasurer, G. J. Green, Esq., London & County Bank, Victoria-street, S.W. Hon. Sec. Dr. Griffith. Miss Brocklebank, £10 (toward new house).

GREAT COLEMAN'S, near Ongar, is now opened by Dr. and Mrs. S. C. GRIFFITH to give change of air and rest to educated people of limited means.—For particulars, apply to 45, Finsbury-square E.C.

For Delicate or Backward Youths
PRIVATE TUITION
must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN
devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home, wherein his Pupils are received as members of, and sharers in, the family life. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, developing all kindly and gentle feeling, encouraging observation and a love of Nature. It is Mr. Penn's conviction that is of more value than an extensively stored memory, and the mere acquisition of knowledge apart from some perception of its significance as a factor in human life and interests is not encouraged. The House is admirably situated on the eastern brow of the northern heights of London, open on all sides and commanding an extensive and delightful view of over twenty miles of River, Lake, Hamlet, and the Forest of Epping, into which it is easy to penetrate for pleasant rambles, &c. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References to parents of Pupils.

DECISION OF CHARACTER

BOATING, BATHING, CRICKETING, NATURALISING, &c.,
